A Word from the Publishers

Vir Sewa Mandir was established in 1936 to serve the cause of research in Jainology through ancient literature. Great Scholars are invited to this institution to study and work on research in Jainology. A well-equipped library, a treasure-house of more than 5000 books on Jainism in Prakrit, Sanskrit and other languages is maintained and run properly for their use.

Shri Chhotelal Jain, one of the Founder-members of Vir Sewa Mandir, had published Jain Bibliography in 1945 which had gone out of print since a very long time. At the request of Vir Sewa Mandir, Shri Chhotelal Jain re-edited the whole Bibliography along with the renowned scholar Dr. S.R. Banerjee and it is a monumental work on Jainology. This reference book would serve as a beacon light to the new generation who are keen on research work in the field of Jainology.

After years of labour and great expense, the two volumes of the book are in your hands and you are a better judge to decide on the merits of this great work. The index is being prepared and in order to avoid delay, the book is being made available immediately without it. The index will be published later in a separate volume.

Introduction

It gives me immense pleasure to announce before the scholarly world the publication of the second, revised and substantially augmented version of Chhotelal Jain's Jaina Bibliography which has been out of print for more than quarter of a century. The first edition was published in 1945. This Bibliography is a record of the findings of an expedition into a little known domain. It is indeed a source of great satisfaction to me to see that this monument of unselfish industry and colossal scholarship is now complete.

After the publication of the first edition, Shri Chhotelal Jain was collecting materials for the next volume till I met him in Calcutta in a cold December of 1954 in the Belgachia Digambara Jaina Temple situated in North Calcutta. As an ardent student of Jainism, I was interested in visiting Jaina Temples, and one day, when I was moving around the above mentioned temple with some of my friends to whom I was explaining the Jaina stories and anecdotes painted on the walls of the temple, a lean, thin and short-statured, but sharp-looking man suddenly came to me and asked me how I had got myself acquainted with these Jaina stories. On understanding that as a student of Prakrit language and literature, I was somewhat familiar with the Arddhamagadhi texts, he became interested in me and requested me if I could visit him some day. I gladly accepted his invitation, and on the next chilly morning, I met him at his residence at 27 Indra Biswas Road, Calcutta-37 (Belgachia). After some preliminary talks, he explained to me his Jaina Bibliography and asked me whether I would be interested in working with him for his Bibliography. I naturally agreed, and when I met him next, he placed before me all the materials of his Bibliography collected by him till 1950, and requested me to go through them carefully to form an idea of how his Bibliography would be! I perused and examined them carefully, and then I realised that his Bibliography would be different from the usual type. We discussed the plan of the Bibliography at great length, and finally, I submitted to him a plan of writing a new, revised and augmented version of his Jaina Bibliography instead of publishing a mere rechauffe of the first volume with additions and alterations. Though this was a formidable task, almost tantamount to the production of a new volume, he gladly agreed to my proposal, and I started collecting materials under his guidance. We both worked together untiringly on this difficult project for twelve years till he breathed his last in February 1966. His death was a great shock to me and an irreparable loss to the students of Jainism. I owe to him whatever inspiration and insight into Jainism I have attained. This then is the background of how I became connected with the Bibliography.

The plan of the present Bibliography is entirely of my own, and is different from the previous edition. It records the research activities on Jainism for over one hundred and sixty years. It primarily includes (a) A. Guerinot's three books—Essai de Bibliographie Jaina (1906), Repertoire d' epigraphie Jaina inscriptions (1908) and Notes de Bibliographie Jaina (J.A. XIV, 1909) written in French which again include materials on Jainism published between 1800 and 1905, (b) and the materials published in the first edition of Shri Chhotelal Jain's Jaina Bibliography which covers materials appearing between 1905 and 1925, (c) and in addition to these, the books published between 1926 and 1960 plus a mass of copious information left out by Guerinot and also by Chhotelalji himself are also incorporated. With regard to Guerinot's books the English translation of his French version is given with due permission from the respective authorities. So the present Jaina Bibliography is, in a sense, a compact volume on Jainology furnishing materials for over one hundred and sixty years' progress of human research.

This Bibliography is complete in three volumes, of which Vol. I and II register the books in ten broad sections, while volume III is the Index. The first volume consists of two sections and contains the books of general reference, Art, Archaeology and Epigraphy, and covers upto pages 1044. The second volume begins from page 1045 and contains the rest eight sections. As this Bibliography has a great demand in the scholarly world, it is decided that the first two volumes be published first without the Index volume which will follow shortly.

This Bibliography is self-explanatory. It is not merely a register of the names of the books which deal with some aspects of Jainism, but also a register of any books where some reference to Jainism or any aspect of Jainistic studies or principles is found. And in that case, the book is registered along with the pagination marks where references to Jainism are found. In each section the books are arranged chronologically in order to exhibit the history of the progress of scholarship in the field of Jainology. In doing so, special attention is given not to omit any remarkable reference contained in that particular book. Generally our abstracts are quoted in great detail, the reason being that most of the books consulted by us may not always be easily available in one particular library ready at hand. Moreover, our abstracts may also act as an original source of information, but after reading our abstracts, if the reader feels interested in consulting the original source, he may do so.

It goes without saying that no Bibliography can be up-to-date and can incorporate material till the last day of its publication, particularly when the Jainistic Studies are growing rapidly throughout the world. A line of demarcation has to be made somewhere. We are, therefore, quite aware of our limitations, and it is owing to human imperfection some lacunae could not be avoided. After the sudden demise of Shri Chhotelal Jain in February 1966, which was followed by my departure to the United Kingdom in September 1966, I could not continue a pedantic search of all kinds of late paralipomera, for I thought that it might unnecessarily and indefinitely prolong the work without any commensurate results. My idea (also corroborated by Chhotelalji) was to include all material coming later or left over after the publication of this book in a supplementary volume at a later stage. So when I left for England the book was in a finished form. Its publication was under the care of Shri Nandalal Sarawgi, the younger brother of Chhotelalji. It may also be noted incidentally that the books which yield nothing that pertains to this Bibliography are not incorporated, because in that case the book would have swelled its bulk inordinately, and would have made the work difficult and futile.

It must be borne in mind that it is, indeed, a painstaking labour and needs a great sacrifice of leisure to compile a Bibliography of this type. It cost much more time and energy than was expected. As can be gathered from the book, no hard and fast rule is followed here in this type of Bibliography that the books to be included here must be on Jainism alone. Any books on Indological studies, whether on Jainism or not, were consulted for the simple reason that materials for Jainistic studies are scattered over diverse volumes and for this, the secondary sources were normally avoided. A glance at the table of classification will tell us from what sources our materials are collected; and they include Encyclopaedias, Dictionaries, Catalogues, Art, Archaeology, Epigraphy and Iconography, History, Chronology and Geography, Religion, Philosophy and Sociology, Language and Literature. It appears that over 3000 items have been drawn upon for contributions to the Bibliography. Not only the sources listed here point to mere things Jain, but also there are references to comparative matters, such as, Buddhism, Brahmanism and the Vedic Culture. The material is based on oriental and occidental literature available in English and other European languages. Thus I believe this Bibliography is a rare collection of detailed information and results of painstaking research in various aspects of Jainism. I also believe that it is the first work of its kind and unique in its nature. It is designed to facilitate and deepen the study of Jainism. I hope this Bibliography will prove beyond doubt to be the most effective means of advancing our knowledge of Jainism consolidated in a single volume.

It will not be out of place here if I record for the sake of history the fact which tells us how the scholars of the world are interested in the Jama Bibliography. In 1976 in the 30th International Congress of Human Sciences in Asia and North Africa, held in Mexico, a proposal for the compilation of a Jaina Bibliography was made in the meeting of the International Association of Sanskrit Studies under the Chairmanship of Dr V. Raghavan. I immediately answered that such a Bibliography had already been printed, and would be ready soon for circulation. So the proposal was withdrawn. In 1977 again, in the Third World Sanskrit Conference held in Paris, I was asked to supply the latest position of the Jaina Bibliography, and my reply was recorded. In 1979 also at the Fourth World Sanskrit Conference held in Weimer, GDR, I reported the latest position on the Bibliography. Now at the Fifth World Sanskrit Conference just recently held in Varanasi in October 1981, I announced that the Jaina Bibliography would soon be published. I am sorry to say that owing to some unavoidable circumstances, the publication of the volume was inordinately delayed. I hope the scholars will now be happy to see it published.

It is a pleasant task now to acknowledge the help we have received from various people. A great many people have helped and there are too many to thank. A good many years have gone by since the publication of its first volume. I cannot find words adequate to express my sincere thanks and gratitude to all of them, nor would it be possible for me now within the limits of this Introduction to enumerate the names of all those who have rendered help and suggestions for the betterment of the book. But particular acknowledgements should be made to numerous institutions and libraries which have supplied the food for the Bibliography. Shri Shibdas Choudhury, Librarian of the Asiatic Society, deserves special thanks for his cooperation and promptness, and he has been most generous in placing the materials of Jainistic studies at our disposal whenever he came across them. So also the Librarians of the National Library, of the Sanskrit Sahitya Parishat of Calcutta, of the Central Library of Calcutta University, and of other Institutions have been most generous not only in telling us about the books, but also in getting them for our use. I gratefully acknowledge the services so ungrudgingly rendered by these librarians.

I desire here to recall the unselfish and enthusiastic spirit that we have derived from Professor Adinath Neminath Upadhyaya for the betterment of the work. During my sojourn in the United Kingdom, Professor Upadhyaya revised the manuscripts and gave his great editorial talents upon this Bibliography, which I duly acknowledge. I can only regret now that this great savant and ardent lover and devotee of Jainistic studies could not see the work published. At the close of this long labour I am glad to say that though Chhotelalji could not survive to see the work completed, his last desire to further the Jainistic studies that he loved so much throughout his life was fulfilled.

The work took nearly ten years to complete its printing and it was printed during the time when I was in England, and many people were therefore did the proof-reading work. It would not be possible to produce a complete or balanced account of the labour of the proof-readers and verifiers, but, at least, I am able to quote the name of Shri Gokul Prasad Jain of Vir Sewa Mandir who deserves special thanks for reading the proof sheets and verification of references, and to whom I owe an incalculable debt for his services rendered in this field.

My sincere thanks are also due to the President Shri Ashok Kumar Jain and other authorities of Vir Sewa Mandir, Delhi, who have come forward to undertake the publication of this type of work which is far from a lucrative undertaking. No less thanks are due to late Shri Mahendra Sen Jaini of Vir Sewa Mandir who was keen enough to see the work published. The present management deserves my thanks for its keen interest in bringing out the work into light.

In conclusion I can say that this Bibliography is not meant for challenging comparison in scale with any book of similar type, but it is mainly intended to meet the demands of the students of Jainistic studies. And in this respect, if it proves useful to the Scholars, our endeavour will be amply rewarded for placing the great work of our compatriots before the learned world, and the publisher's desire will also be fulfilled.

A Note

(By the first publisher)

The Bharati Jaina Parisat presents before the scholarly world this volume of "Jaina Bibliography" by Mr. Chhote Lal Jain as the first number of its Jaina Bibliography Series. The vast field of Jaina Literature, Art and Archaeology, Philosophy and Religion is still mostly unexplored. The scholars of the East and the West have already made valuable researches into the Vedic and Buddhistic Literature, but unfortunately the Jaina Literature which covers a wide field of Indological studies has not been properly appreciated. This is to a great extent due to the apathy of the Jaina Community who did not care to bring the religio-cultural heritage of their forebears within the easy reach of the modern scholars. It is a happy sign nowadays that some patrons of the Jaina Culture are trying to organise cultural institutions for Jaina Studies, and there are some Jaina scholars trained in scientific methods who have already made valuable contributions to this branch of knowledge.

But a research scholar should have as his constant companion a bibliography of the subject he is interested in. There are the Vedic Bibliography, the Bibliographie Bouddique and similar bibliographies. For the benefit of the Jaina scholars, Dr. A. Guerinot, a French savant compiled a Jaina Bibliography, but this book covered researches upto the period of 1906. Mr. Jain has tried to supplement the treatise of Guerniot and his book covers researches till 1925. He intends to make it up to date in another volume.

Foreword

(First Edition)

About half a century ago the celebrated French Orientalist, Dr. A. Guérinot, Docteur es Letters of the University of Paris, undertook the first systematic survey of all the available printed books and articles on Jainism published in European languages. Incidentally he gave valuable information with regard to the published as well as unpublished manuscript materials on Jaina religion and philosophy available in India and abroad. His (i) Bibliographie Jaina and (ii) his Repertoire d'Epigraphie Jaina were published between 1906-1908. Since then many valuable articles and books on Jainism have been published, to mention among others the surveys of Jaina thought and culture by two German scholars: Dr. Glasenapp and Dr. Schubring; but those books were not easily accessible to our Indian scholars. Indian periodicals and journals have continued to publish various studies on Jainism; such studies are growing in number and still remain scattered. To help the general public as well as students of Jainism to follow the main trends of Jaina studies in recent years was the laudable aspiration of Mr. Chhote Lal Jain, the Honorary General Secretary of the Vira Sasana Samgha. In spite of his multifarious duties and obligations, and even in the midst of a serious break-down in his health owing to overwork, Mr. Jain with his characteristic devotion to the sacred cause, has completed the printing of his admirable work, Jaina Bibliography, Vol. I, which brings the survey down to the end of 1925. The material for the second volume covering the last 20 years between 1925-1944 is also ready and will be published in due time.

Meanwhile, Mr. Chhote Lal Jain had the satisfaction of developing the plan of a centre of Jaina Culture on the occasion of the grand celebration in Calcutta commemorating the 2500th anniversary of the First Sermon delivered by Lord Mahavira. That celebration was attended not only by the Jaina community of North and Central India including Rajputana and by a few Jaina delegates from South India, but also by the leaders of Brahmanical and Buddhist religions representing the progressive thought of the majority communities of India.

The spiritual legacies of Jainism should not be confined to the Jaina community alone, but should be made available to entire humanity, especially in this age of crisis when violence threatens to ruin the entire fabric of human civilisation. The deathless principle of non-violence (ahimsa) is the noblest heritage of Jainism for which the whole mankind should ever be grateful. Even if we fail at present to draw the precise chronological relations of the earlier Tirthamkaras (promulgators of the Sacred Law), we are now definite that in the age of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa of the Mahābhārata epoch his cousin, Ariṣṭanemī exemplified in his own life the sublime principle of ahimsā by renouncing the world on the very eve of his wedding, when he saw that hundreds of innocent animals were about to be slaughtered simply for the entertainment of the guests at that royal wedding. That was the starting point of the realisation by Man of his kinship with the dumb animal world, differing from man only in linguistic expression, but animated by the same urge of life. So it was Jainism which for the first time bridged over the gulf between human life and animal life, and preached the basic truth of one common life pervading the whole Society. From such a profound realisation was born that creative compassion which made man look upon the dumb cattle as "Poems of Pity" in the inimitable words of Mahātmā Gāndhī, who, as we know, comes from Kathiawad-Gujarat, the home land of Lord Nemināth (C. 1200 B.C.) and which part of India even to-day is the stronghold of Jaina religion and culture. Then came another great spiritual leader but the first systematizer of the Jaina Philosophy based on the Chatur-Yāma or the four-fold principles, which were amplified by Lord Mahavir (C. 600 B.C.), a senior contemporary of Gautama Buddha.

Buddhism, no doubt, derived from Jainism its main inspiration as well as the principle of the church organization (Samgha) and the fundamental doctrine of Ahimsā or non-violence. Buddhism simply applied to the life of the individual and of the nation as well as on international plane, the primordial historical truth of Ahimsā which Jainism for the first time discovered like the law of gravitation of the living universe. If we want to keep intact the countless cultural heritages of man and if we want to develop the creative possibilities of mankind to its fullest extent we must discard the inhumane, nay, cannibalistic path of war and violence as preached by the immortal preceptors of Jainism. Such a cause deserves the support and collaboration not only of all men and women of about 20 lacs of Jains scattered all over India, but also of all serious workers in the cause of human welfare, in fact, all servants of humanity in the East as well as in the West.

The dream of my esteemed friend, Mr. Chhote Lal Jain, and his colleagues, is to develop such an up-to-date centre of studies on Jaina religion and culture as would be able to give all facilities for research to men and women of all nations irrespective of caste, creed or clime. We know that some western ladies actually joined the order of Jain Nuns and the catholicity of Jainism is remarkable even in this age. Moreover, we can count upon the deepseated instinct of philanthropy which is ingrained in the Jaina community; and so we hope that the idea of developing a world centre of research on non-violence in the projected seat of Jain culture would soon materialise and that all organisations in the East and the West that are striving to make world Peace a reality would come forward to help my esteemed friend, Mr. Chhote Lal Jain and his colleagues. His first volume of Bibliography will, I am sure, rouse the attention of many scholars to this much-neglected field of research, and, I am sure, the publications by the Vira Sasana Samgha that will follow will sustain the interest thus aroused. Though the work of Mr. Jain is a preliminary work of compilation, he has spared no pains to make the book as useful and attractive to the general readers as possible. I wish him all success in his noble mission.

KALIDAS NAG

Preface

(First edition)

The contributions of the Jains to the Indian Culture and sciences have been so vast that the history of India will be incomplete without a reference to them. But, of the three great religions of India-Jainism, Buddhism and Brahmanism, Jainism has been least studied and most misunderstood for want of proper knowledge of the available literature. But still it is a matter of great pleasure and encouragement that the great French scholar, Dr. A. Guerinot supplied the want to some extent by publishing his valuable volumes "Essai De Bibliographie Jaina" in 1906 and "Repertoire de Epigraphie Jaina" in 1908. These books have been of great help to scholars and students interested in the study of Jainism.

Much has been done in the field of Jaina study and many books have been published and numerous articles have appeared in the Indian and foreign journals, since the days of Dr. Guerinot. So it was my long desire to follow the foot-steps of the great French savant and supplement his works by bringing out two more volumes containing all available information about Jainism from 1906. With that aim in view I went on taking down notes of references to Jains and Jainism from works on various subjects. As an humble student I had the privilege of working at the (Royal) Asiatic Society of Bengal for a number of years and this gave me the facility of using the books of the society. I have also referred to the collections of the Imperial Library and some other libraries.

In the volume which is now published, I have excluded almost all the references found in Guerinot's books mentioned above and I have taken care to bring in all references not found in his works and all those published between 1906 and 1925. Bibliography of the books, published since 1925 up-to-date will appear in another volume which is now under preparation.

I have to point out here, the departure I have made from the lines of Guerinot. While he has issued a separate volume for Jaina Epigraphy, I have included it under a separate section in this work. Almost all the references given in this book relate to the books written in English and other European languages.

Pp. 9-11. The Sittannāvāsai Paintings, Pudukotta State by A.H. LONGHURST.

Sittannāvāsai a hill situated about 9 miles north-west of Pudukotta town; a Jaina strong-hold; Seventeen stone beds in a natural cavern, one of which contains a short Brahmi inscription of the third century B.C. indicating that the cavern was used as a monastery by the Jains at that period. Paintings in the rock-cut Pallava temple of the 7th century at the foot of the hill. Four short inscriptions in early Pallava Grantha script of the 7th century recording names of visitors. The temple was excavated during the reign of Mahendra I when he was an adherent of the Jaina faith. It contains five life-size rock-cut images of seated nude Jains in Tirthankarās. The temple consists of a cella, 9'-6" square and 7'-5" in height with a small pillared verandah in front measuring 22'-6" in length, 7'-6" in width and 8'-3" in height. (Fig. 2. plan of cave Temple, Sittannāvāsai). The sanctum ceiling decorated with coloured floral and geometrical patterns, the central portion of the verandah ceiling and the two cubical pillars contained paintings, representing a Lotus Pond covered with flowers, leaves, fish, water fowl, elephant, cattle and three men (Plate v.). Two graceful female figures (Plate vi) on the two pillars. On the face of one pillar a coloured drawing of a king and his consort.

In Orissa are at present many places such as Airipur, Airikana etc. There is an old Sanskrit MS. in the possession of a Brahmin at Bhubaneswar which contains brief accounts of various dynasties of Kings who held sway over the Tri Kalinga countries After the Mauryas, a dynasty called Bhīla Vamśa became the paramount lord over Kalinga. The Kings of the line were Buddhist; their names were (1) Ara Bhīla, (2) Khara Bhīla, (3) Sura Bhīla, (4) Nara Bhīla, (5) Dhara Bhīla, (6) Sara Bhīla, (7) Khara Bhīla II. Khara Bhīla I. may safely be identified with Kharavela III Cheti-Raja.

George M. MORAES - Bibliography of Indological Studies 1942. Bombay 1945.

Pp xxviii-xxix. A note on Archaeological excavations in Pudukkottai State (1938-44)-by K R. SRINIVASAN - Mounds called "śamanai-tīdal" or "śamanar-neḍu (means Jain mound)"—one such mound excavated in Mosakudi village—an extensive mound 4-5 ft. high, on its slope were a nude standing Tirthankara idol and a Yakṣi; one idol of seated Pārśvanātha removed from here to the state Museum. There is a Tamil inscription of the early Cōla period on the moulding of the plinth and it gives the name of the place as Peneñjar and of the temple as Perumpalli. During excavations were found a nude standing idol of Tirthankara, a lotus base of a Mānastambha in stone, panels of gables and other figures made in stucco, and large quantities of large sized bricks, images of Ādinātha, Pārśvanātha and Mahāvira, and Yakṣi, traces of a compound wall 134 ft. long and 100 ft. wide round the temple; all sculptures of the Pallava period (7th-9th centuries A.D.).

Another Jain mound in Nallūr, 50' × 50' was excavated; seated image of Mahāvira with triple umbrella, chowrie bearers, two lions.

On a mound (85' × 58') in Śembāttur were found 3 stone pillars, two pilasters, all with lion bases, idols of Mahāvira, a Yakṣi with an inscription, similar lion pillars belonging to this temple were traced out in temples of a much later date in two villages, nearby; features of the lion pillars and Mahāvira indicate late Pallava times (8th-9th centuries A.D.), which the Yakṣi's inscription is of the time of Cōla, Rājaraṣa I (985-1014 A.D.).

These monuments illustrate the history of the temple architecture in the south and the evolution of the various motifs from the Pallava to the Cōla period; they show certain indigenous motifs not found in the typically Pallava monuments round about Kanchi.

H.H. WILSON. The Mackenzie Collection. A descriptive catalogue of the oriental manuscripts collected by C. MACKENZIE. Second edition. Calcutta, 1828.

The mission accomplished at the commencement of the 19th century by C. MACKENZIE in the province of Mysore was especially fruitful as regards Jainism, of which it inaugurated some sort of scientific study. It indulges, indeed, in collecting for the first time an important series of historical documents and a rich collection of manuscripts.

Among these it is necessary to make a place aside to the Purāṇas. The most celebrated are due to Jināsena, preceptor of the king Amoghavarṣa, the First.

John MURDOCH. Classified Catalogue of Tamil printed Books, etc. Madras, 1865.

Pp. xxii-xxiii. Oldest Tamil works now extant, are those which are written, or claimed to have been written, by the Jains, or which date from the era of the literary activity of the Jain sect.

Jains of the old Pāṇḍya country animated by a national and anti-Brahmanical feeling of peculiar strength.

Extent of the Jain period probably from the 8th or 9th century A.D. to the 12th or 13th.

Jains finally expelled from the Pāṇḍya country in the reign of Sundar Pāṇḍya.

Tol-Kappaya, a grammar, written at the very commencement of the Jain period, or about the 8th century A.D.

In Tiruvalluvar's age Jainism was rather an esoteric ethical school than an independent objective system of religion.

The poem Chintāmani written by a Jain probably in the 10th cent. A.D.

The Nan-nul, a Tamil grammar and the poetical vocabularies written by Jain Scholars came later than Chintāmani.

P. ixxxiii. Amirtasakatar, a Jain, was a Sanskrit as well as a Tamil scholar. He wrote Karikat, a grammar on Tamil verse.

Appavaiyar, author of Tandava Malai, said to have been a Jain. Appar though born of Śaiva parents, entered a Jain monastery—Later returned to Śaivism again—Lived about the 10th century A.D.

P. ixxxix. Mandala Purudai, a Jain ascetic, said to have lived in the time of Raja Kṛṣṇa Rayer who reigned at Viṣayanagar in the beginning of the 16th century—wrote the poetic lexicon Churamant Nikanda.

P. xcii. Pavanandi, a Jain living at Sanakapur—wrote the Tamil grammar Nan-nul.

P. xciv. Kuṇa Pāṇḍya, first a follower of the Jain religion, afterwards embraced Śaivism under the influence of Sambandai, and was induced by him to impale 8000 Jains at Madura.

Pp. 65-66. Some finest compositions in the Tamil language are attributed to the Jains—Jains increased by immigrations from the north. At first the Buddhist and the Jain sects lived peacefully together in South India. Defeat of the Buddhists in a great dispute in the reign of Himaśīṭala, the Buddhist king of Conjeeveram, about 800 A.D.—Jains overcome by the Śaivas, headed by Sambandar, at the time of Kuṇa Pāṇḍya of Madura, about 10th century A.D.—8000 learned Jains put themselves on the impaling stakes.

P. 67. Rāmanuja's success in converting the King of Mysore from Jainism to Vaiṣṇavism.

P. 70. Extermination of almost all the Jains in some parts of the Deccan by the Vira Śaivas.

P. 73. A few adherents of Jainism found around Conjeveram—None of their religious books seem to have been printed.

P. 182. The Chintamani written by a Jain in about the 10th century A.D.—The commentator styles the author as “the master of the learned”.

Pp. 3-6. Visit to Pātan. This town, to-day as in the past, is the most important Jaina centre. A considerable number of Srāvakas have fixed their residence there, and one counts there more than twelve monasteries, some of which go up to the period of the Caulukya kings.

Among the Jaina libraries, three are the object of special mention.

The first, the Pophlāpādāno Bhaṇḍār, contains about 500 manuscripts, among which some canonical treatises, a collection of legends in Prakrit and two works of Hemacandra. The Bhiabhānapādāno Bhaṇḍār includes approximately 300 manuscripts among others that of the "Jamālīś tra".

At last, nearly 500 manuscripts are found in the "Sanghavināpādāno Bhaṇḍār", especially the complete collection of the Jaina Āgamas, with bhūṣyas, cūṛnis and vṛttis.

G. BÜHLER. On the celebrated Bhaṇḍār of Sanskrit mss at Jessalmir (I. Q. vol IV, P. 81-83)—Bombay, 1875.

Jessalmir is today one of the principal Jaina centres of India. This town was founded towards the middle of the 12th century, after the destruction of Lodorva, the ancient capital of the Bhatti Rajputs. The Jains who, from Lodorva, came to settle at Jessalmir, brought with them a statue of Pārśvanātha, for which they constructed a temple in the 15th century under the pontificate of Jinabhadra-sūri.

Eventually, six other temples were successively constructed and dedicated to other Tirthakaras. The Jaina Library of Jessalmer is celebrated among all. It contains some manuscripts on leaves of palm trees and on paper.

The manuscripts on leaves of plam tree consist only of a "Dharmottaravytti", a "Kamalaśīlatarka" a "Pratyakabuddhacarita", a "Viśeṣāvaśyaka", some fragments of sūtras a great part of the grammar of Hemacandra, and a commentary ("Anekārthakairavā-karakamudī") composed by Hemacandra himself on his "Anekārthasaṅgraha". The manuscripts on paper comprise a magnificent collection of canonical sūtras, dating from the 15h century.

P. PETERSON. A second Report of operations in search of Sanskrit mss. in the Bombay Circle, 1883-84. (Extra number of the Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XVII)—Bombay, 1884.

Reviews.

Pages.

33—49. A much developed analysis of the "Yastilaka" of Somadeva. Several passages of the poem have been quoted and translated. After the colophon, the work should have been composed in Śaka 882.

54—57. Information on two Jaina commentaries on the "Kumārasambhava", and more extensive review on a third commentary due to Matiratna, who belonged to the sect Upakeśa.

64—66. Review relating to the commentary of Jñānavimāla on the "Śabdabhedapraśāsa" of Maheśvara. At the end of his work, Jñānavimāla gives his religious genealogy in going up to the origin of the sect Kharatara.

67—74. Long critical discussion on the subject of the "Jainendraśāraṇa", which would be the work of a digambara master called puṇyapāda. This summary of grammatical science, in use among the Digambaras, should have been supplanted by the "Pañcavastuka", due to Devanandin.

74—76. Review on the "Acarasutra", with respect to the commentary on this treatise by Vasunandin. The "Acarasutra" plays, among the Digambaras, the same role as, to the Svetambaras, the "Viśvāramgasutta", of which it is moreover an adaptation and a summary, due to Vattākerācārya.

76-77. Short notice on "Cāritrasara", a manual in view of the deliverance, by Cāmuṇḍarāya.

77-78. Biographical idea on Haricandra, author of the "Dharmafarmābhayadaya-kāya", some verses of which have been quoted.

78—80. Review on the "Tattvārthatārtika" and biographical ideas on the probable author of this commentary, Akalaṅka. This work contains a short survey of the digambara canon.

80—86. Extract quotations of the "Saṭprabhṛta" of Kuṇḍakuṇḍā-cārya, and review relating to a commentary on this work by Śrutasāgara.

86—88. Rapid analysis of the "Prabandhacintāmaṇi" of Merutuṅga.

Pp. 134—166—Extracts.

P. PETERSON. A third Report of operations in search of Sanskrit mss. in the Bombay Circle, 1884-86. (Extra number of the Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XV II).—Bombay, 1887.

Pp. I—XXX. Alphabetical list, with very precise indications, of all the works, of which there is a talk in the three first reports of PETERSON. A very great number of Jain works have been quoted, and the principal among them are the object of special references to the study of WEBER, "Die heiligen Schriften der Jaina".

Reviews.

This third report gives an account of visits made by PETERSON at Ahmedabad, in the Rājputānā and at Cambay. The Jain manuscripts which have appeared worthy of a particular notice are the following (Pp. 3—40):

“Gāthāsaḥasrī” of Samayasundara. This collection contains a great number of stanzas relating to the Jain events. The more interesting have been translated and interpreted and the review all entirely must be considered as one of the most important contributions to the history of Jainism.

“Viśamvādaśataka”, in which the same author, Samayasundara, shows the disagreement which exists sometimes among the canonical treatises.

“Candraprabhā”, Commentary of Meghavijaya on the “Śabdānuśāsana” of Hemacandra.

“Pañcasūtra”, with commentary, by Haribhadrāsūri.

“Gāthakośa”, of Muniandrasūri, with translation of some of the stanzas.

“Vicāraratnasamgraha”, of Jayasomasūri. This work includes chronological lists of the highest interest and of the commentaries on diverse Jain Works.

“Yamakastuti”, of Dharmaghoṣasūri.

“Ātmabodha”, of Jinalabhasūri.

“Kumārachārāpavāstikāya”, of Vaidhyanānāsūri disciple of Hemacandra.

“Kāthāmahodadhī”, of Somacandra.

“Kūcyaprakāśasamuktā”, Commentary of Manikyācandrasūri on the Kācyaprakāśa.

“Dvyaśrayamahākāya”, of Hemacandra, with commentary by the author himself.

“Darśanasūtra”, of Bhaṭṭāraka Devasena. The review devoted to this work contains some information relating to the author and to his other writings. Besides, the first 15 verses of the Darśanasūtra have been translated.

“Jayatiḥayanastotra”, of Abhayadevasūri, with commentary relating in which conditions this hymn was composed. ‘Pāṇjika’ commentary of Rājasekharasūri on the “Nyāyakandālī” of Śrīdhara.

The ingenious genealogy of Rājasekharasūri is briefly related after this commentary.

Elaborate commentary of Sādhuratna on the ‘Tatijitkalapa’, with review on the origin of this last work.

"Upamitibhavaṇṇapāṇcānāmasamuccaya", of Vardhamānsūri. Commentary of Paramānanda, disciple of one Abhayadevasūri, on the 'Karmavipāka' of Gargasi.

"Dharmābhyudayamahākāya" or "Samghapaticarita", of Udayaprabhasūri, with review on the biography of the latter.

"Nandyadhyayanaṭīka" or commentary on the "Nandisūtra", by Malayagiri.

"Upadeśapada" of Haribhadrasūri.

"Dharmabindu" of the same Haribhadrasūri, with the commentary of Muncandrasūri.

Commentary of Siddhasenagani on the Tattvārthasūtra of Umāsvatī.

Commentary of Śīlāṅka on the Ācārāṅgasūtra.

Amamasamuccaritra of Muniratnasuri, with analysis of this work.

Levhamañjari of Asada, with the commentary of Bālacandra.

Appendix I.

List of 158 manuscripts of palm-leaves examined at Cambay. This list is the series of that which constitutes the Appendix I of the first Report of PETERSON. Some extracts, sometimes very extensive, of these manuscripts have been reproduced. The following Jaina manuscripts are thus the object of quotations :

Appendix III.

List of manuscripts acquired on account of the Government. Among these manuscripts, 103 concern some digambara works and 83 śvetāmbara works.

Recension : G. BÜHLER, Wiener Zeitschrift f. d. Kunde d. Morgenlandes. Vol. I, Pp. 319—324.

Pp. 16-22—Account of another visit made at Ahmedabad, also in several Jain libraries.

To mark out among other manuscripts that of a Prākṛit anthology, entitled "I'ajjalagga", and due to a śvetāmbara of the name of Jayavallabha.

Reviews.

Pp. 91—126. Digambara literature.

1. Analysis of the "Pravacanasāra" of Kuṇḍakuṇḍācārya. This work, written in Prākṛit gāthās, contains an explanation of the Jain doctrine by one of the most notables among the Digambara masters.

2. Review on the "Niyamasāra" of the same Kuṇḍakuṇḍācārya.

3. Brief analysis of the "Dharmāmṛta" summary of the life of the author Āśadhara, and list of his works.

4. Analysis of the "Tattvārthasāradīpika" of Sakalakīrti, who lived towards samvat 1520. This work contains the enumeration of the treatises which constitute the canon of the Digambaras.

5. Analysis of the "Kārtikeyānuprekṣā" of Kārtikeyasvāmin, with the commentary of Subhacandra.

6. Review on the "Praśnottaropāsakācāra" of Sakalakīrti.

7. Review on two treatises concern the ritual : the "Jinasamhitā" and the "Jainendrayajñavidhi".

8. Review on Raviṣeṇa and one of his works, the 'Padmapurāṇa'.

9. Short analysis of the 'Ādipurāṇa' of Jinasena. The introduction of this work recalls the names of several Jain authors.

10. Copious analysis, with historical identifications, of a prasasti which terminates the "Uttarapurāṇa", composed by Gunabhadra, disciple of Jinasena.

11. Review on the "Śāntināthacaritra" of Sakalakīrti.

12. Review on the "Parśvanāthacaritra" of the same Sakalakīrti.

13. Brief review on the "Harivamśapurāṇa" of Jinadāsa.

14. Some indications on the "Śrīpālacaritra" of Nemidatta, and on the "Jīva-mādhavaśāstracaritra" of Śubhacandra.

15. Review on the "Subhaumacaritra" of Ratnacandra, and particularly on the chronological list which terminates this work—To this purpose R.G. BHANDARKAR indicates in some pages (124—126) the succession of the most ancient Jain priests. This passage constitutes a precious contribution to the Jain chronology.

Pp. 126—157—Śvetāmbara literature.

1. Review on a prasasti of the Kharatara sect. This prasasti is found at the end of a commentary of Vallabhagani on the "Abhidhānacintamani" of Hemacandra.

2. Some information on the "Aṣṭalakṣyārthi" of Samayasundaragani.

3. Analysis of a sthāvīrāvāhi which serves as introduction to the "Leśyāka-niryuktīyacacurni", the Niryukti of which is due to Bhadrabāhu.

4. Review on Śāntyaçāyī, with respect to his commentary on the "Uttaradhyāyanaśūtra".

5. Review on Devendragani and his commentary on the "Uttaradhyāyanaśūtra".

6. Summary of a paṭṭavāhi of the sect Ācāhika, which terminates in the "Upadeśacintūmaṇi" of Jayasekharasūri.

7. A very extensive analysis of the "Rṣimandalaprakaraṇa" of Dharmaghosagani.

8. Historical information on a sthāvīrāvāhi contained in a commentary of Samayasundara on the Kalpasūtra.

9. Review on Brahmanandi, commentator of the "Jambudvīpapravṛṇḥ".

10. Review on Gaṇavinaya, commentator of the "Damayaniticampu".

11. Some historical ideas after a commentary of Mānviṇyagani on his own work the "Dharmasaṃgraha".

12. Enumeration of the five kinds of śramaṇas, distinguished by Malayagani in his commentary on the "Nandisūtra".

13. Detailed analysis of the "Pravacanaparīkṣā", in which the author, Dharmasāgara, who belonged to the Tapā sect, gives long information on ten heterodox sects. To mark out particularly three paṭṭavalis (Pp 150, 151 and 154).

14. Review on Munisundara author of the 'Mitracatuṣkathā'.

15. Review on Rājahaṃsa, author of a commentary on the "Vāgbhat-ulamkāra".

16. Summary analysis of the "Vivekavilāsa" of Jinadatta, with review on the latter.

17. Summary of a chronological list which terminates a commentary of Ratnaśekhara on the "Śrāvaka-pratikramaṇa-sūtra".

Pp. 276—282. List of 72 Jain manuscripts, the principles of which have precisely made the object of the precedent reviews. This collection comprises :

37 Śvetāmbara works.

28 Digambara works.

7 Works in modern dialects.

Pp. 311—466—Extracts.

R.G. Bhandarkar. Report on the search for Sanskrit manuscripts in the Bombay Presidency during the year 1883-84—Bombay, 1887.

Of all the reviews of R.G. Bhandarkar, this one is most abundant in information relating to the Jain religion. Among others, the pages 91—157 contain important reviews on the Digambaras as on the Svetambaras. One will judge it by the short analysis which is as follows :

Pp. 1—15. Account of a visit made during the month of December, 1883 in different Jain libraries of Patan. Among the numerous manuscripts examined, it is proper to quote :

- (a) A Gurvavali comprising 20 gathas with commentary. The list commences with Sudharamasvamin and terminates with Hiravijayasūri, who would be dead in Samvat 1622.
- (b) A pattavali containing the chronological lists of the great priests of a sect of the Svetambaras, probably the sect Vata, with mention of the most important events which happened in the period in which these pointiffs lived.

Commentary of Samyasundra on the "Kalpasūtra".

Commentary of Vinayarāma on the 'Kīrtītarjuntīya'.

Commentary of Brahamamuni on the 'Jambudvīpaprājñapti'.

"Tarkaphakkikā" of Kṣamākalyāṇa.

Commentary of Guṇavinaya on the 'Damayantiśampū'.

Text of the Praśasti which terminates the 'Dharmasaṃgraha' of Mānavijayaṇa .

'Pravacanaparīkṣā' of Dharmasāgara.

'Mūtracatuṣṭhakathā' of Munisundara.

'Vivekavilāsa' of Jinadatta.

Commentary of Ratnaśekhara on the "Śrāvakaṣatikramasūtra."

84

R. G. BHANDARKAR, Principal results of my last two years studies in Sanskrit manuscripts and literature (Berichte des VII, internationalen Orientalisten-Congresses, Pp. 66—68).—Wien, 1889.

Some of the results obtained by R. G. BHANDARKAR interest the history of the Jainism. They are as follows :

1. Jinadatta, the author of the Vivekavilāsa, lived towards the middle of the 13th century. His disciple was Amaracandra who wrote the Kāvyakalpalatā and whose contemporary was Arisimha.
2. The Jainism is not a sect of Buddhism. Some of the Jaina doctrines represent a compromise between the Sāṃkhya and Vedānta systems on the one hand, and the Vaiśeṣika philosophy on the other hand.
3. The Padmapurāṇa of Raviṣeṇa was composed in 1204 of the era of Mahāvira, that is to say in Śaṃvat 716 or 660 A. D.
31. Jinasena who wrote his Harivamśa in Saka 705, mentions Siddhasena, Akalaṅka and other authors in his introduction to the Ādipurāṇa.
32. A Praśasti at the end of the Uttarapurāṇa, of Guṇabhadra relates that the work was consecrated in Saka 820, by Lokasena. The king Amoghavarṣa Iṣṭ was a devotee of Jinasena.

33. The Jains had not the literature written before 139 A. D. Their religion although as ancient as the Buddhism, did not take the importance than towards the 3rd century of the Christian era.

C. BENDALI. Catalogue of the Sanskrit manuscripts in the British Museum—London, 1902.

This catalogue is devoted to the Brāhmanical and Buddhistic manuscripts. Some numbers, however, have reference to the Jain literature. These are the following :

Nos.

218. "Raghuvamśa", with commentary of Dharmameru, disciple of Muniprabhagaṇi.
225. "Avatūṇi", on the Meghdūta due to a certain Kanakakīrtigaṇi, of the religions descent of Jinacandrasūri of the Kharatara gaccha,

Nos.

254. Commentary on the Śatakas of Bhartṛhari by Dhanasāra, disciple of one Siddhasūri of the Keśa sect.
281. "Pañcadaṇḍachalitraprabandha", unique manuscript, a copy of which was utilised by WEBER for his edition.
286. "Prabandhakośa" of Rājasekharasūri, disciple of Tilakasūri (14th century).
- 327-328. Commentary (nyāsa) of Hemahamsagaṇi on his own treatise of logic entitled "Nyayamañjūṣā" or "Nyāyarthamañjūṣika". The author belonged to the Tapā gaccha.
329. "Tarkataraṅgiṇī", treatise of logic composed by Guṇaratna, who belonged to the Kharatara sect and lived probably at the end of the 16th century.
376. "Kṛiyaratnasamuccaya", a treatise on the verbal origins followed by a paṭṭāvali of the Tapā sect, by another Guṇaratna. This author lived at the end of the 14th century and was the third principal disciple of Devasundarasūri of the Tapā gaccha. The most remarkable reviews of the paṭṭāvali concern Mānadeva (14th sūri) Vimalendu (Vimalacandra, 34th), Devendra (45th), Dharmaghosa (46th), Somaprabha (47th) and Devasundara (49th) whose disciple was Guṇaratna.
382. "Dhāturaṇākara" or "Kṛyākalāpalata" by Sadhusundaragaṇi, of the Kharatara sect, of which a paṭṭāvali terminates the manuscript. The principal masters marked out are Jneśvara, Jinasimha, Jinarāja, Jinasāgara and Vimalatilaka.
396. Commentary on the "Śabdaprabheda" of Maheśvara composed in 1598 by Jñānavimalagaṇi of the Kharatara sect.
403. "Abhidhānacintāmaṇi" of Hemacandra, with the commentary called "Saroddhāra" of Vallabhagaṇi, disciple of Jñānavimala.
409. "Unādināmanalā" by Śubhaśītagaṇi of the Tapā gaccha, the disciple of Lakṣmīśūgarasūri and of Munisundara.
- 421-423. "Vāgbhaṭālamkāra", with the commentary of Jina-Vardhanasūri.
426. "Praśnottara" or "Praśnottarakosaṣṭhiṭāta" or still "Praśnāṭī" by Jinavallabhāsūri.
428. Commentary of a Jain of the name Kṣemahamsa on the Vṛttaratnākara of Kedāra.
431. "Chandoratnāvalī" by Amaracandra, disciple of Jinadattasūri, of the Vāyaḍa sect (end of the 13th century).

Nos.

451. "Gaṇakakumudakaumudī", commentary of Sumatīharṣagaṇi on the "Karanakutūhala", an astronomical treatise of Bhāskara. This commentator lived in the 17th century; he belonged to the Aṭṭhalika sect and was the disciple of Harṣaratnagaṇi himself the disciple of Udayarājagaṇti.
- 485--487. "Ārambhasiddhi", astrological treatises by Udayaprabhadevasūri, with the commentary of Hemahamṣa.
556. "Jyotiśasāroddhara" of Harṣakīrtisūri.

E. HULTZSCH. Reports on Sanskrit Manuscripts in Southern India, No. III.—Madras, 1905.

Pp. VI-VII. Reviews on two Jain authors :

1. Ratanaprabhasūri, author of the 'Ratnākaraśatārikā' and of the 'Upadeśamālāṅgīti'. His master was Devasūri, contemporary of the king Jayasīṃha Siddharāja, of the Cālukya dynasty.

2. Rājasēkharasūri, disciple of Tilakasūri, and who composed his 'Prabandhakośa' at Delhi, in Samvat 1405 (1348 A. D.).

The Jain works—the manuscripts of which have been marked out, are the following—

Nos.

1771. 'Syādvādamāñjarī' of Mallisenasūri.
 1772. 'Ratnākaraśatīkā', treatise of logic by Ratnaprabhasūri (with extracts).
 1912. 'Anekarthasamgraha' of Hemacandra, with marginal comments, a specimen of which has been given.
 1966. 'Prabandhakośa' of Rājasēkharasūri. The beginning and the end (extensive extracts) have been reproduced, Pp. 112-115.
 2088. 'Vivekavilāsa' of Jinadattasūri (short extract).

S. R. BHANDARKAR. 'Report of a Second Tour in search of Sanskrit Manuscripts made in Rajputana and Central India in 1904-1905 and 1905-1906—Bombay, 1907.

Sec. 13, 15—31. The Jain libraries of Jesalmer; their organisation; the manuscripts that they contain. The most important is the great Library annexed to the temple of Sambhavanātha constructed in Saṃvat 1497 (1441 A.D.). Among the manuscripts that it contains, two are particularly worthy of interest. the 'Vastupāla-praśasti' by Jayasimha Kavi, and the 'Hammitra-mada-mardana', a play in five acts, dedicated to Vastupāla in Saṃvat 1286 by Jayasimha, disciple of Virasuri, and probably the same as the precedent. Sec. 33-34. Review on a paṭṭavali of the Kharatara sect, composed in all probability towards Saṃvat 1856 by Ksamākalyāna, and which includes the names of 70 pontiffs, up to Jinaharsa.

Sec. 40, 47, 51. The Jain Libraries of Bikaner, Jodhpur and Mandsaur.

Sec. 59-60. Notes on the Jain Libraries in general. A catalogue of their collections would be in project.

Appendix I.—Analysis of inscriptions.

Nos. 1 and 2. Construction at Jesalmer of the temple of Chintāmaṇi Pārśvanātha, which was dedicated in Saṃvat 1473 by Jinavardhana of Kharatara gaṇaccha.

No. 3. Dedication of a statue of Pārśvanātha in the preceding temple, in Sarpvat 1493.

No. 5. Dedication of the temple of Sambhavanatha at Jesalmer, in Sarpvat 1497, by Jinabhadra of the Kharatara gaccha.

No. 6. Dedication of a tablet in the preceding temple in Sarpvat 1505, under the pontificate of Jinabhadra of the Kharatara gaccha.

No. 7. Foundation of the temple of Śāntinātha at Jesalmer, in Sarpvat 1536.

The Rajputana Gazetteer. 2 Vols.—Calcutta, 1879.

Vol. I. Introduction, Pp. 70, 90. The Oṣvāl section of the Jains, which had its beginning in Rājputānā, is perhaps the largest among the merchants. At Rikabdeo in the south-west of Mevāt is a famous shrine of the Śaṅogis, and the temples on Mount Abū are much resorted to by Hindus as well as Jains on pilgrimage.

Vol. I. Bikaner, Pp. 195, 291. Among the Hindus, the Jains are very strong and a great many merchants belong to the Oṣvāl division of that sect. Jain monasteries as places of instruction in ancient days. At Rem there is a handsome Jain temple built in A.D. 942. In the city of Bikanir there are seven Jain monasteries (upāśrayas) which possess numerous Sanskrit works.

Vol. I. Bundi, Pp. 240-241. The Kasba of Hindoli has six Hindu temples. Near this site there exists a Jain temple with walls painted.

Vol. II. Jesalmere, Pp. 176, 182. There are 19 Jain temples in Jesalmere, 12 of these are situated in the city of Jesalmere and 7 in the districts. The Jain temples in the fort are remarkable for their beautiful stone carving; the oldest one was built in A.D. 1371.

Vol. II. Jodhpur, Pp. 261, 263. Nadolai, Bali, Desvai and Sadia, in the province of Godwar, were ancient seats of the Jains. Near the site of the fort at Pokaran there are ruins of an old Jain temple.

Vol. II. Mallani, Pp. 277, 278. The Bhojaks, although themselves Śaivites, worship at the Jain temples. Jatis (Jains) are worshippers in the Jain temples and are by profession school-masters.

P. 198. At Adoni are some Jain Tirthankaras carved upon rocks. Description.

P. 202. At Chinnatumbal there are two ruined and deserted Jain temples with the typical stone pyramidal roofs.

P. 206. The village of Peddatumbal contains representations of Jain Tirthankaras. Of the many deserted shrines three seem to have been originally Jain.

P. 210. One of the Mackenzie manuscripts states that king Bijjala built a fort and lived at Chippigiri a Jain colony in ancient days. On the hill north of the village is a Jain temple called the "Bastī". The temple contains several representations of seated and standing (nude) figures.

Pp. 232-233. In the side of old Kurugodu, stands a collection of Jain temples. The architectural designs in this district exhibit the gradual degrees by which the Jain style shades into the Chālukyan.

Pp. 242-243. The village of Kogali was once a considerable Jain centre. The Jain temple in it is still called the "Basti". There are many Jain relics scattered in the village. Inscriptions of the place record gifts to the Jain temple of Chenna-Pārśva in the village by the Hoysala ruler Virā Rāmnātha in 1275 and 1276 A. D. and to the Virabhadra temple by Achyut Rāya of Vijayanagar.

P. 238. One of the twelve inscriptions of the Western Chālukya king Vikramaditya VI refers to the Jain temple of Brahṃa Jinālaya in a village anciently called Bālguli.

P. 273. The stepped towers of the group of Jain temples in Hampi are very noticeable. Besides this group and the Gānagiri there is another Jain shrine.

P. 291. Kotturu was once a stronghold of the Jains. Basappa Vanquished the Jains of the place in controversy and converted them to the Lingāyet faith, and set up a lingam in their principal temple. This temple is now known as the Murukallu-math. It is an unusually good specimen of an undoubtedly Jain temple.

Pp. 300-301. In the Rāyadurg taluk office there is a Jain image of a nude male figure, fully described. The whole sculpture is executed with much detail and finish. Along the foot of it runs an inscription.

There are some Jain antiquities in Rāyadurg. These are carvings on rocks known as "Rasa Siddha's hermitage".

The Imperial Gazetteer of India. New Edition : 26 Volumes.

The First Edition of the Imperial Gazetteer of India was published in 9 Vols. in 1881. A second edition, augmented to 14 Vols., was issued in the years 1885-7. The second edition having passed out of print, a New (third) Edition, consisting of 26 Volumes was published in 1908. The single Volume of "The Indian Empire" was expanded into 4 Vols. and was entirely rewritten. The articles of the body of the Gazetteer also were rewritten by "Census Superintendents of the Provinces for States in 1901". Comparative statistics were given for the three Census Years 1881, 1891 and 1901.

In the entries below of the second edition (1885-87) corresponding numbers of the volumes and pages of the New Edition (1908) have been given in () brackets alongwith the newly added materials.

P. 108. The Parvārs, who are Jains and Agarvāls, are very rich and among modern temples theirs are perhaps the most beautiful and costly. There are fair examples of these in Jubbulpur and Marwar. The Parvārs came from Bundelkhand.

In a car festival the Jain gods are placed in a temporary pavilion and thousands of Parvārs flock to take part in the festival.

Pp. 65-66, 258-259. Arang is conspicuous for its Jain remains. The Jain temple of Arang is ornamented on the exterior with Jain devis and other figures and inside there are three big nude images. In another place are found 3 naked Jain figures with the symbols of elephant, a conch and a rhinoceros representing Ajitanātha, Neminātha and Śreyāṃsa respectively. About 6 or 7 years ago a Jain statuette made of a precious stone was discovered.

Pp. 51-52. Sārāks—Jain by origin—district still contains a considerable number—their ancestors built the temples at Pāra, Charra, Borām, and another places. DALTON places them in five or six hundred years before Christ and identifies with colossal image now worshipped at Pakbira under the name of Bhīram as Vīra, the 24th Tīrthānkara. Between 10th and 16th centuries they were destroyed by Bhūmij and others.

Pp. 83-85. Sārāks : an archaic community; found in considerable number in Mānbhūm and adjoining districts. Their accounts form Mr. GARR's census report.

The word Sārāk derived from Śrāvaka (hearer) indicating the laymen distinguished from the Yatis or monks, and still survivors as a regular caste (Saraogi), origin of the caste according to Brahma-Vai-Varttapurāṇa the union of a Jotaha man with a woman of the Kuvinda or weaver caste. This shows that at the time when this Purāṇa was, or when the passage was interpolated, the Sārāks had already taken to weaving as a means of livelihood. Mr. RISLEY (Census of India) says that the Sārāks of Manlehūm, though now Hindus, retain traditions of having formerly been Jains.

Manlehūm and Ranchi Sārāks originally Agarwāl, migrated from the country on the bank of Sarajī (U. P.); first settled in Dhalbhūm according to Maulehūm Sārāks Ranchi Sārāks first settled in Ogra near Purī and later in Chotā Nāgpur; Burdwan and Brbhūm Sārāks came from Gujarāt. They were traders and revered Parśvanatha. They have ten gotras. Their sub-caste based on locality and trade. They are strict vegetarians and do not use the word "cut". Mostly found in Raghunāthpur, Pāra, Jhapiā. According to DALSON (Ethnology of Bengal) they had never been convicted of any heinous crime.

C. HAYAVADANA RAO. Mysore Gazetteer. Vol. I.—Descriptive (New Edition), Bangalore, 1927.

P. 178 Right-hand and left-hand castes : castes termed Pannas or professions, are 18 in number; Right hand and Left hand, Jainia traders or Komati traders come under the Right hand division.

P. 225. Heggade was the Jain designation of the Headman of a village.

Pp. 229-30. Jain (20,700). The term Jain signifies more a religion than a caste. In it are found persons belonging to different castes. Thus there are Jain Brahmins, traders Chaturakshatri, Panchama Kshatri weavers, calendarers and dyers who call themselves Gadiyas. Some of the Sadas (q. v.) in the State are Vokkaligas by profession, but in religion are Jains. Most of the immigrant Mārwarī traders are Śvetāmbaras. The Digambaras are indigenous to the State. The usual caste title of Mysore Jains is Ayya.

Pp. 230-31. Kuruba : A caste of shepherds and blanket weavers; also agriculture. Connected with the Pallava Kings of the South. The earliest kings of many dynasties of the South rose from this caste. The Hali Kurubas, abstain from liquor. A Gauda (or headman) being at the head of each territorial section Śaivism is professed by many. The usual titles are Gauda and Heggade.

Pp. 246-47. Sadas : These are cultivators found chiefly in the Shimoga and Chitaldrug districts. They appear to have been originally Jains, though many at present profess the Lingāyat and Brahmanic religions. The Jains worship the Tirthankaras and Hindu Gods as well. They are strict vegetarians and total abstainers. The usual caste title is Gauda.

- Pp. 265-66. Early Kannaḍa authors: The first cultivators of the Kannaḍa language for literary purposes were the Jainas, down to the 12th century; we have, with very few exceptions, Jaina authors. There were few compositions by the Jainas during the later periods. The earlier Jaina works are champu kāvyas.
- Pp. 284-95. Jainism :
- P. 284. Its existence in Mysore brought to light by col. Colin MACKENZIE in 1799. In Southern India they were established from a very early period. The oldest Tamil and Kannaḍa literature is of Jain authorship and to the Jains is due the first cultivation of these languages. Jainism described.
- P. 286. Jain immigration in Mysore : Bhadrabāhu and his disciple Chandragupta, the great Maurya Emperor, led a colony of Jain emigrants from the north to the south.
- Pp. 287-89. Their chief Mutts and Gurus : The principal seats of Jain faith in Mysore are Śravana Belgōla in Hassan District, Maleyūr in Mysore District, and Huncha in Shimoga District. The guru of the Śravana Belgōla Mutt claims to be the guru of Dilli (Delhi). Hemādri (Maleyūr), Sudha (Sode in Northern Kanara), Sangitapura (Hāduvalli), Svedapura (Bilige), Kshémavenu (Mudu Bidare), these last three in Southern Kanara, and Belgula (Śravana Belgōla) samasthans. The present religious establishment is attributed to Chāmunda Rāya in 983 A. D. Succession of gurus (Mula-sangha, Desi-gana, Pustaka-gachh. According to a list from the maṭha; names given.

From 1117, the gurus all bear the name of Chārukirti Panditāchārya and endowments have been granted to the maṭha by all succeeding lines of kings.

The Maleyūr maṭha is now closed. Akalanka, a yati of Maleyūr and Bhaṭṭākalanka is the title of the line of the yatis of that place.

- Pp. 288-89. The Humcha mūṭha was established by Jinadattarāya, the founder of the Humcha State, in about the 8th century. The gurus, as given in the list, were of the Kundakundānvaya and Nandisangha. From Jayakīrti Deva, they were of Sarasvatigachcha. List given. The gurus are now named Devendra Tirtha Bhattāraks.
- P. 289. Theio sects: The Digambara, clad with space, that is, naked; and the Śvetāmbara, clad in white. The first is the original and most ancient. The yalis in Mysore belong to the former.
- P. 290, Their moral code. Five Maha-vratas or great duties. Four Dharmas or merits; three restraint. The practice of Samādhi, Sanyasana or Sallekhanā (or religious suicide) is considered meritorious. Numerous instances of Sallekhana recorded in inscriptions dating from 600 A. D. to 1809 (Epi. Carn., II, Śravaṇa Belgoḷa).
- P. 291. Their ritual. Their sacred books - Pūrvas, Āgamas; their language—Ardha-Māgadhī; in the 11th century, they adopted the use of Sanskrit. In the Edicts of Asoka and early Buddhist literature, Jains are called Nigrantha; with reference to their philosophical tenets, they are designated Syādvādiṇs (those who say perhaps, or it may be so) the doctrine explained.
- Fp. 293-94. Their Tirthankaras : List of 24 Tirthankara with their names, signs and Sāsana Devis given. List of Jain Purāṇas with dates, authors and names.
- Pp. 294-95. Jainism in Mysore : The history of the spread and decline of Jainism in the State, is closely bound up with the history of the State itself. It was the State creed in the time of the Gangas, of some of the Rashtrakutas and Kālachūryas and of the early Hoysalas. Also of the minor States of Punnata, of the Santaras, the early Chongalvas and the Kongālavas. But the Chola conquests in 1004, the conversion of the Hoysala king in 1117, and the assassination of the Kālachūrya king in 1167, were severe blows to its influence.
- P. 295. The introduction of Jainism into the State was due to Chandragupta and the establishment of Buddhism into it was the act of Asoka, his grand son.

- P. 372. Of the total population of the State, 35 per cent. were returned as Jains (21,000). In every, 10,000 persons in the State there are 35 Jains. Census of 1921.
- P. 377. They have increased in the past 40 years (1881-1921) by 92.7 per cent. The Jains in the State represent a past in which their forbears played no mean part, as much in the political as in the literary field. A larger population at one time claimed adherence to their religion and great kings and able generals professed it. Of the districts, Shimoga has the largest number of them in proportion, to the population, viz, 6 in every 1,000. Kaḍūr and Tumkur Districts show 4 in every 1,000 and Kolar nearly the same number. Chitaldrug and Mysore show less than 2 and stand last. Bangalore and Hassan Districts each with 3 in every 100 stand between Kolar and Mysore. The comparatively large number in Shimoga is due to the existence there between 8th and 12th centuries A. D. of a Jain principality with its capital Humcha; so is the case of the Kaḍūr District.
- P. 386. The proportion of females to males among the Jains is only 8 : 26 per mile.
- P. 394. The proportion of literature among the Jains is 203 out of every 1,000 persons of the age of 5 years and over.
- P. 395. The high literacy of the Jains is explained by the fact that they are largely engaged in trade or industry, in which a knowledge of letters is necessary. They have besides a traditional love for letters.

The Jain system of education :

- Pp. 473-75. Mysore State, the chief centre of Jainism of India, and the prime seat of Digambara Jains; their system of education, based on the Brahmanic model. The Sūtras lay down specifically how a pupil should behave towards his teacher, and how a teacher should treat his pupil. Learning given an exalted position; Jains have developed vast literature in Sanskrit, Prakrit and the chief Dravidian languages of South India. The secular pursuits which the generality of the Jains pursued—and still pursue—made them popularise the secular aspects of education to a large extent. The Jains honoured the educated is testified by their extant literature and inscriptions found in the State. They were among the first to use the vernacular languages for literary purposes. They specially revere, in their prayer-formula, their teachers (upadhyayas).

- P. 663. The inscriptions at Śravanā Belgola have established beyond doubt the antiquity of the Jains and their priority to the Buddhists; they have furnished important information regarding Kannaḍa literature and its antiquity. The Jain sect is one of the most ancient in India—its discovery first made in Mysore.
- P. 666. The Jain work Lokavibhāga, supplies the date Śaka 380 as the 22nd year of the reign of Simhavarmā, the Pallava king of Kāñchi, Kaṭyaṇakāraka, a medical work of Ugrāditya, a contemporary of the Rashtrakūta King Amoghavarsha I and the Eastern Chālukya King Kali Viṣṇuvardhana.

Chapter VII.—Public Instruction :

The Jain System of education :

- Pp. 473-75. Mysore chief centre of Jainism and prime seat of the Digambara Jains and long and uninterrupted history in it. Teaching a duty with the Jains. Strict discipline, monk not allowed to go out without permission of the teacher. Twenty-five virtues to a teacher and ten of a lay disciple. Obedience of a teacher. Learning given an exalted position, and it is evident from the vast literature the Jains have developed in Sanskrit, Prakrit and the chief Dravidian languages of South India. Religious instruction is necessity. But the secular pursuits which the generality of the Jains pursued—and still pursue—made them popularize the secular aspect of education to a large extent. Their literature bears ample evidence for this view. Oral teaching was at first the rule. The Jains honoured the educated. They were among the first to use the vernacular language for literary purposes. They attach special merit to gifts of the four kinds ; food, shelter, medicine and teaching (Epi. Carn. II, Srav. Bel. 126 dated III A. D.). The earliest Jain inscription refer to the intellect of person being "brightened by the water of learning" (Epi. Carn. II, Srav. Bel. 75, dated 950 A. D.). Numerous inscriptions of the 12th and 13th centuries are a witness to the high state of learning and teaching then current among the Jains in the State.

- P. 663. Archaeological Survey : The inscriptions at Sravana Belgola have established the antiquity of the Jains and their priority to the Buddhists. They have furnished information of the utmost importance regarding Kannaḍa literature and its antiquity. The Jain sect is one of the most ancient in India.

- Pp. 63-64. Stone inscription : rock inscriptions on the^a Chandragiri hill at Śravana Belgola (E. C. II, Ins. at Sr. Bel., Nos. 1—59, New Edi), including the epiaph of the Jain teacher Prabhāchandra, which commemorates the migration of Digambara Jain to Mysore and their settlement of Śravaṇa Belgōla; the epitaph of the great Western Ganga prince, Nolambāntaka Marasimha II, incised about 975 A. D. at Śravaṇa Belgōla (E. I. V, 101 and E. C. 11, Ins. at Sr. Bel. No. 59 New Edi.-Old Edi. 38) and of the Jain teacher Mallisena, incised about 1129 A. D. (E. C. 11, Sr. Bel. No. 67, New Edi.). On the Vindhyagiri, Sr. Bel., on the rock outside the first entrance of Odegal basti, there are ten inscriptions in characters "older than those of the oldest inscription hitherto known on this Hill".

Stone inscriptions on pedestals : the colossal statue of Gommatesvara at Śravaṇa Belgōla (E. C. 11, at Sr. Bel. Nos. 175-177 and Nos. 179-180, New Edi.). The inscriptions underneath it are in Nūgari, Marāṭhi, Purvada Hala Kannada, Grantha and Vattelattu and Hala Kannada. Date of its execution was about 983 A. D. An inscription dated in 1160 A. D. in the reign of the Hoysala king, Narasimha, is engraved near the left foot of the Gommatesvara. Ten inscriptions, are also of time of Narasimha I, are engraved on the pedestal of the images in the cloisters around Gommatesvara. The date of these records is about 1170 A. D. An inscription, of the reign of Ballala II, engraved on the pedestal of the image in Akkanna basti, records it was built by one Achāmba, wife of the minister Chandra-mauli. An inscription on a broken image at Jakkikatte, Sr. Bel., shows that it was dedicated to Vṛishabhaswāmi, by Jakki the minister Ganga Raja's elder brother's wife (M. A. R. for 1901, para 77).

- P. 68. Inscriptions, composing of a communal difference between the Jains and Vaiṣṇavas by the Vijayanagar King Bukka-Rāya (E. C. II, Sr. Bel. 136, Old Edi. and 344 New Edi.) which sets out the decree of reconciliation passed by him.
- P. 69. Records registering donations, and endowments ; Some of the charters of the early Kadamba Kings of Banavāsi were issued to convey lands and villages to the God Jueन्द्रa, and to members of various Jain sects for the maintenance of the worship of that God (I. A. VI, 24; I. A. VII, 33).
- P. 137. Religion : Jainism competed for supremacy with both Buddhism and Brahmanism from very early times, and succeeded during the Ganga times 2nd to 11th century A. D. in firmly establishing itself in the land. To this period belong the Jain monuments,

The kings of the Hoysala dynasty (11th to 14th century) were staunch Jains upto the time of Vishnuvardhana (1111—1141 A.D.) and favoured much the Jain religion, but after his conversion to the Brahmanic faith, Vaishnavism gained considerable strength and spread over the country. The adherents of the three religions (Buddhist, Brahman Jain) drew on a common stock of symbolism in the same way as in early times. The Jain statues are, however, distinguishable from the Brahman by their nudity, but the accessions of both do not differ widely.

- P. 144. Chālukyan times (11th to 13th century): A chief called Nagavarmā built habitation to the four different sects—Jain, Vishnu, Kṣvara (i. e. Śiva) and Muni (i. e. Sākya Muni) (E. C. VIII, Slikarpur 20, dated in 1048 A. D.). An inscription dated in the 12th century refers, in giving list of Jain gurus, to one Vimalachandra, who put up a writing on his door in the public street, describing among other religions, the Tathagata Sectarians. This inscription at Jodī Basavapatna (E. C. III Mys. i T-Narasipur, 105 A. D. 1183). Celebrates the Sallekhanā of Chandrabha muni.
- P. 154. Gangas 2nd to 10th century A. D. Though the Ganga dynasty of kings professed the Jain religion; they patronised the Brahmins and made grants to them. The sculpture of the Brahmanic temples of the period could not have differed much from the prevailing style of the early Jains.
- P. 170. Later Kadambas, 10 to 11th century A. D. Chāmuṇḍa Rāya not to be confused with the name sake connected with Śravaṇa Belgola in the 10th century A. D. who recognizes the overlordship of Chālukya Somēśvara I Trailokya Malla Deva, was, a patron of all religions. Through his agent, Nāgavarma, he erected in 1043 A. D. habitations for the four prominent religious orders of the time in the Banavāsi country—Jain, Vishnu, Śiva and Buddhist (called Munigana, i. e. gans or sanghas of Sākya Muni's religion).
- P. 177. Kālachūryas : Though Bijjala, the first of the line, was a Jain by birth and persuasion he was tolerant towards Brahmanism, the religion of Kesirāja, his Governor at Banavāsi.

- Pp. 252— Jain. Gangas. Priority of wooden over stone sculpture. Conversion of wooden into stone temples.
- Pp. 252-53 Jainism has long been one of the chief religions of Mysore; its influence dates from a period long anterior to the introduction of Buddhism. The first structures raised for religious purpose by the Jains were in wood in later days, the old structures were, converted into stone Chaityālayas. References to this conversion in the extant inscriptions: 9 vide E. C. VII, Shikarpur 136 dated in 1068 A. D and Shimoga 41 dated in 1122 A. D. From the first inscription we learn that Lakṣmaṇa, the minister of Som-śvara II, the then Chālukyan Emperor, at the instance of Śāntinātha, his minister at Banavāsi, built of stone the Mallikamode Śāntināth Basadi at Baligami, which was till then a wooden structure. The second inscription is of Nanniya Ganga, which mentions that Daṇḍiga and Madhava of the Ganga line had established on the hill of Mandali a basadi; afterwards the kings of Ganga line caused it to be built of wood. Bhujabala Ganga Perinadi Deva, made this basadi "the chief of all the basadis, giving it the name of pattada basadi and in Saka 1027 (A. D. 1105) granted lands to it. His son Nanniya converted in 1122 A. D. the wooden basadi of his grand-father into a stone one. For the promotion of the Jain faith he erected twenty-five chaityālayas.
- Pp. 253-55. The earliest Jain monuments: The earliest references to Jain monuments go back to very early times. Leaving aside the period covered by Chandragupta, we find the first definite references to Jain monuments in the reign of the Ganga kings; these are of three classes—Jinālayas, bastis or chaityālayas which are temples; free standing monuments, like the Gummata Image and stambhas or pillars; and memorial slabs or Virakals, etc. The first definite mention of a Jain temple is contained in the Manne Plates of the Ganga king Marasimha dated in 707 A. D. (E. C. IX, Nelamangala, 60, Mārasimha) general Śrīvijaya, built a lofty Jinendra temple. The Devanhalli plates of the time of Śrīpurusha record a grant to a Jain temple called Lokatilaka Kandachi, (E. C. IV, Mysore ii. Nelamangala 85, dated in 776 A. D.). All the bastis situated on the Chandragiri hill probably go back to the 8th century. All these are in Dravidian style of architecture. Description given. The Chandragupta basti on this hill, attributed to the great Maurya Emperor Chandragupta, is one of the oldest on this hill (8th or 9th century A. D.). Other bastis description given. The 64 bastis of Panasoge; the Ganga king Mārasimha I, (961-974) made a grant to it; the Chengāḷva king, Rajendrachola Nanni-Chengāḷva, a feudatory of the Chola king Rajendrachola, rebuilt them about the middle of the 11th century. The two ruined bastis at Angadi, Mudgere taluk, may represent Hoysala buildings of an early type; they mark the transition from Chālukya to the purely Hoysala style (E. C. VI, Mudgere 9 to 18, the oldest inscription being No. II, a Jain epitaph dated about 1000 A. D.).

- P. 256. Stambhas : Of the Ganga period, two kinds—Mānastambhas and Brahmadeva Stambhas. Kuge Brahmadeva Pillar 974 A. D. Tyagada Brahmadeva Pillar, 983 A. D.

- Pp. 257-270. At Śravan Belgōḷa : Statues; the Gommateśvara Statue 913 A. D. Description and history given. Other Gommateśvara statues : one at Śravanagutta, near Yelwal, in Mysore Taluk; one at Yenur (South Kanara dist.); another at Karakala; history and description given.

FERGUSSON's description of the Gominata (History of India and Eastern Architecture, 11—74) given. Workman's description (Through Town and Jungle, 82—84) given.

Particulars about Gommata statue from E. C. II, Śravan Belgōḷa, new ed., no. 234 of about 1180 A. D.—given. Mr. Narasimhachār's account, given.

Date of the statue 983 A. D. arguments given. The Bharateśvara statue; circa 10th century; on the Chandragiri Hill, description given.

- P. 275. Western Chālukyas—Someśvara II. Pillar of Victory at Śāntinātha Basti, Baliframi, 1159 A. D. : Under the Chālukya rule, numerous Jain monuments came into existence in the old Kadamba country. At the Śāntinātha Basti at Baligami was set up in 1068 A. D. by Lakshma, the governor of Banavāsi, a pillar of victory, which with the temple has disappeared (E. C. VII, Shikarpur 136), its probable site being marked by a massive seated Jain figure in the yard of a private house at Baligami.

- P. 276. Vikramāditya Brahma—Jinālaya, Kuppattur, 1077 A. D. : consecrated by the virtuous queen Mālala Devi through the Jain teacher Padmanandi Siddhānta Deva. Jain Basdis at Humcha, 1077 A. D. : the Pancha-basadi, the Urvi-tilakam (a glory to the world); the five basadis were built in 1077 A. D.; foundation laid by the Jain saint Śrīvijaya Deva (also called Pandita Pārījāta), the preceptor of Chattala Devi, the Pallave queen. (E. C. VIII, Shimoga ii).
- P. 277. Tattakere, Havage and Nellavati Basadis, 1085 A. D. : Built by Ganga feudatories of the Western Chālukyas (E. C. VII, Shimoga 10). In 1113 A. D. in the reign of Bhujabala Ganga Permadi Deva, a Ganga feudatory of the Chālukyas, his wife Bachala Devi built a Jain temple at Bannikere (E. C. VII, Shimoga 97).
- Pp. 277-278. Hoysalas. Vinayāditya. Temples at Sosevur or Angadi circa 1050 A. D. : On the subversion of the Gangas by the Cholas in 1004 A. D., the Hoysalas rose to power in the west of Mysore. Their birth place was Angadi and they were Jains by religion. The finest and oldest sculpture is in the Jain bastis at Sosevur or Angadi 11th century; a Jina and a Yakshi.
- P. 278. Jain temple, Hale Belgola, 1094 A. D., a ruined Jain temple in Hoysala style; description given. (E. C. V. Chennarāyapatna 148); records a grant by Ereyanga, father of Viṣṇu-vardhana, to the Jain guru Gopanandi.
- P. 279. Basti at Haṭṭa : Cir. 1100 A. D. : Nagara Jinālaya; has a beautiful image, which was set up by Mariyanedaṇḍa-nāyaka, the father-in-law of king Ballala I. Restoration of Jain temples by Punisa, 1116 A. D. : Punisa, the General of Viṣṇuvardhana, employed his wealth in restoring Jain basadis throughout Ganga-vadi (E. C. IV, Yedatore 6).

Trikūṭa Basti. Chāmarājanagar, 1116 : Punisa built a basadi at Chāmarājanagar, called Arakottara. It was also called Trikuṭa-basadi (E.C.IV, Chāmarājanagar 83). In 1117 A.D., he built the Indirakulagriha at Śravaṇa Belgola (E. C. II, Sr. Bel. 74). His wife Lakshmi built in 1116 A. D. the Erudukatte basti dedicated to Ādinātha, Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa (E. C. II, Sr. Bel. No. 130).

- P. 279-80. Terina Basti, Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa, 1117 A. D. : also known as Bāhubali Basti, from Bāhubali (or Gommatā); a curious car-like structure in front of it, known as mandara and sculptured on all sides with 52 Jain figures. Two varieties of mandara, namely Nandiśvara and Meru; it belongs to the latter class. Sr. Bel. 7, dated 1117 A. D.

Vishṇuvardhana Kattale Basti on Chandragiri Hill, Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa, 1118 A. D.; another basti built by Punisa himself is the Kattale or dark basti; has a fine seated figure of Ādinātha, 6 feet high, description given. The is the only temple on the Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa hill which has a circumambulatory passage around the garbhagriha.

Basti at Jinanāthapura, 1117 A. D. : Ganga Rāja founded Jinanāthapura, about 1117 A. D. together with the basti at that place; a fine specimen of Hoyasala work; it is the most ornate of the Jina temples in the state.

- P. 281. Other bastis of the regin (Vishṇuvardhana) : the Savati Ghandavarana basti on Chandragiri Hill at Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa built by his queen, Santala Devi in 1123 A. D.; Mallinātha basti at Abalwadi in Koppa Hobli, Mandya Taluk, built in 1130 A. D. (E. C. I, Mysore i, Mandya 50); the Pārivanātha basti at Basti halli, near Halebid renowned for its turned and polished pillars, erected in 1133 A. D. (E. C. IV, Hassan, Belur 124); Samanta Sopra, built a lofty chaityālaya at Heb-Biddiruvadi (E. C. IV, Nagamangala, 94), it was called the Ekkoti Jinālaya (E. C. IV, Nagamangal 95).

- Pp. 281-82. Narasimha I, Bhandari Basti, Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa, 1141 A. D. : the largest temple at Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa, dedicated to the twenty-four Tirthankaras; description and history given, Sr. Bel. Inss. Nos. 345 and 349. Beautification of Chandragupta basti C, 1145 A. D. Various additions to the Chandragupta basti on Chandragiri Hill at Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa were made in the 12th century; details given; the screens are carved with minute figure sculptures supposed to represent scenes from the lives of the śruta-Kevali Bhadrabāhu and the Maurya Emperor Chandragupta.

- P. 283. Śāntiśvara basti Nittur, 1150 A. D. : the navaranga has beautiful carved ceilings.

Parśvanātha Basti, Heggere, 1100 A. D. : a fine specimen of Hoysala architecture; description given. (E. C. IV. Chikanayakanhalli 21).

- P. 284. Mahānavami Maṇḍapa, Śravaṇa Belgoḷa, 1176 A. D. : of the time of Ballala II; and epitaph of Jaina teacher Nayakīrti, who died in A. D. 1176 (Sr. Bel. No. 66).

- Pp. 284-85. Ballala II. Akkana Basti, Śravaṇa Belgoḷa 1181 A. D. : description and history given; built in 1181 by a Jain lady Achiyukka, wife of Chandramauli, the Brahman minister of the Hoysala king Ballala II.

- Pp. 285-86. Śāntinātha Basti, Magudi. 1182 A. D. : description and history of the shrine and the image given; built by Sankara Samanti, the general of the ruling Hoysala king, Ballala II.

- P. 286. Śāntinātha Basti, Śravaṇa Belgoḷa, 1200 A. D., a fine example of Hoysala style; on the outer walls are images of Jinas, Yakshas and Yokṣts. Lofty Jain image, Basti Hoskote, cir. 1200 A. D.

- P. 287. Brhmadeva Pillar, Kambadahalli Basti, cir. 1200 A. D. : 50 feet high, loftiest in the state; on the top a seated figure of Brahma.

Ballala III. Mangayi Basti, Śravaṇa Belgoḷa, 1325 A.D. : built in 1325 A. D. by Mangayi of Belgoḷa, a crest jewel of royal dancing girls, and a disciple of Abhinava Charukīrti Panditāchārya. Jain tombs Silakūṭas at Jinanāthapura, 1213 A. D. : Śravaṇa Belgoḷa; an inscribed tomb, generally known as samādhi maṇḍapa, but designated silakūṭa, commemorates the death in 1213 A. D. of Bālachandra Deva's son, a disciple of the royal guru Nemi-chandra Pandita of Belikumiba; (E. C. II, Sr. Bel. No. 389), another tomb of ascetic Chārūkīrti Pandita, who died in 1643 (E. C. 31 Sr. Bel. No. 362).

- P. 288. Nishid's at Halebid, 1295 A. D. : at Pushpagiri, near Halebid; they are memorials to Jain gurus who performed the austere religious fast called sallekhanā; one commemorates the death of Vardhamāna Maladhāri Deva in 1295 A. D.; more in the Jain temples at Halebid (E. C. V, Belur 131—4); they have the figure of the guru and his disciple sculptured at the top, with their names written below, and a small table, called thavana kolu, on which the book that is taught is supposed to be placed, is represented between them (M. A. R. for 1907-08, para 50).

Mediaeval Period

- Pp. 307-10. Jain : Hoysala patronage to Jainism decreased as it increased in favour of Vaiṣṇavism, though there was throughout the Hoysala period a marked similarity in the treatment extended to both the systems of faith. The same equality of treatment marked the sovereigns of the house of Vijayanagara, who succeeded the Hoysalas practically throughout the whole of India south of the Krishna. But Jainism, however, declined as a faith from about the 14th century and was practically eclipsed by the rival faiths. This falling off of Jainism from its high position from about the 14th century, is fully reflected in the practical cessation of architectural and sculptural activity from about that time; only a few cases of construction and that not always of any great merit are met with; several examples are given.
- Pp. 310-15 Mysore artists : the index label, indicating the event or person depicted in the sculpture or the name of the sculptor concerned in the work; some names connected with the Jain monuments given.
- Pp. 328-29. Metallic and bronze images : Jain : some Jain images at Śravaṇa Belgōla of the 12th century, some of 1850-58 A. D. Representations of Tīrthankaras, Gommata, Panch-Parameshtī, Nava devata, Nandiśvara, Padmāvati, Jvālāmālīni Sarasvatī, Gaṇadhara-pada and Śruta (the sacred Jain scriptures, shown in the shape of a tree). The nava devatā bimba, or image of the nine dieties, has besides, the Pancha Parameshtīs, Jina dhrama (or Jain religion or law), Jināgama (or Jain scriptures), Jina chaityālaya (or Jain temple), represented by a tree, a thavana kolu or stool for keeping the book in reading, a Jain figure, and a mantapa or pavilion (vide E. C. II, Sr. Bel. New Edi. intro. 29-30).

- P. 335. Paintings : The walls of the Śāntinātha basti (12th or 13th century) on Chandragiri Hill at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa and its ceilings were adorned with paintings, of which only a few traces are now left.
- Pp. 338-39. The walls of the Jain maṭha at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa have illustrations of scenes from the lives of some Jainas and Jain kings; Dasarā Darbār of Krishna Rāja Wodeyar III; Pancha-Parmeshtis, Neminaṭha, swāmi of the maṭha, Paśvanātha's Samavasāra, scenes from the life of the emperor Bharata, scenes from the life of the Jain prince Nāgakumāra, forest scene, the six leśyās of Jain philosophy (description given).
- P. 347. Caves : some at least of the earliest caves were other than Buddhist in origin—either Brahmanical or Jain. The caves on the Beṭṭadapura hill, the peculiarly mixed Brahman and Jain images in it will be found described in volume V of this work.
- P. 349. Jain monuments : Jain temples, flourished side by side with Buddhist vihāras for long after until Buddhism ceased in the State about 13th century. The temples (Jain) of the Ganga period range from about the 2nd to the 10th century A. D. Associated with the Jain temples of their time are the monolithic stambhas detailed in Chap. V above. The Gangas followed the Dravidian style.
- Pp. 349-51. Jain Architecture : Jain architecture in its essentials follows the Dravidian style. In this State, it is represented by two classes of structures, bastis and beṭṭas (for beṭṭas—see E. I. VIII, 138, No. 5). The bastis are Regular temples, containing an image of a Tīrthankara. The beṭṭas (literally hills) are courtyards,—properly, though not always, at the summit of a hill,—open to the sky, and containing a colossal image of Gommateśvara. The rise of the Virāśaiva cult checked the growth and even converted a number of bastis into Śaiva temples. The principal group of bastis are at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa. They have been described by Narasimhāchār (Inscriptions at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa E.C. 11). FERGUSSON's description given.

- P. 370. Longas have been formed by cutting down a seated Jain figure into the required shape (E. C. VII, i. Intro. P. 31).
- P. 383. Tanks : The famous kunigal tank was built in 1394 A. D. by Irugappa, the general of Harihara II, the Vijayanagara king and the author of the Sanskrit lexicon Nānārtha Ratnamālā (M. A. R. for 1919, para 31).
- Pp. 405-406. Sanskrit literature ; Pūjyapāda's Śabdāvatāra, a commentary on Paṇini has not yet been discovered. The earliest reference to Pūjyapāda is in an inscription dated 729-30 A. D. of the time of the Chālukya King, Vijayāditya.
- 5th century A. D. : Lokavibhāga, a Sanskrit work on cosmography by Siṃhasūri, a Jain author (5th century A. D. has been found by the Dept. of Archaeology in Mysore. Sarvanandi the copist of this Ms., lived at Pāṭalika or Pāṭaliputra, now represented by Tirupapuliyur a part of modern Cuddalore town, which was originally a Jain centre. This town was situated in the Pānārāshtra, or the dominion of the Bāna Kings of the time. This work enables us to fix the period of Pallava King Siṃhavarma (Pallava). The Śaka year given is 380, corresponding to the 22nd year of Siṃhavarma's reign (458 A. D.); this date gives clue to the kind of literature the Jain scholars studied about the 5th century A. D. Trailokyaprajñapti, a Prakrit work referred to in the Lokavibhāga, shows that Prakrit was also cultivated at that time, though it was fast yielding its place to Sanskrit.
- P. 406. Period of the Kadambas (3rd to 6th century A. D.) : The Jain disputant, Samantabhadra, his several Sanskrit works commented upon by Kannada writers; his work Ratnakaraṇḍaka. Pūjyapāda, besides Śabdāvatāra, he composed a Sanskrit grammar called Jainendra (one of the eight original authorities on Sanskrit grammar); also known as Aneka Śeṣa Vyākaraṇa; his other works were, Śarvārthsiddhi, Jainābhisheka and Śamādhisatak. Pūjyapāda's disciple Vajranandi founded a Tamil sangha at Madura. This Vajranandi is different from the author of Navastotra (Sr. Bel. Ins. No. 67 of 1129 A. D.).
- P. 407. Padma-charita or Mahā-Rāmāyaṇa a work by Ravishēpachārya (7th century A. D.); contains one of the earliest versions of the story of Rāma.

Aṣṭaśaṭi, a commentary on Samantabhadra's Āptamīmāṃsā by Akalanka (8th century A. D.), a celebrated Jain philosopher who defeated the Buddhists at Kanchi. The later Sanskrit work Akalanka-charita gives an account of this disputation.

- P. 407. 9th century A. D. Uttara Purāṇa by Gṛnabhadra, is in Sanskrit written in 898 A. D. The Rāshtrakūṭa King Nripatunga (or Amoghavarsha, 815-877 A. D.) was an author in Kannada and Sanskrit; his Sanskrit work on Morality translated into Tibetan.

Kalayāṇa-Kāraṇa, a work on Medicine, by Ugrāditya (9th century A. D.), a contemporary of the Rāshtrakūṭa King Nripatunga and of the Eastern Chālukya King Kali Vishnuvardhana V. This work gives a long discourse on the uselessness of flesh diet at the end.

- P. 408. 10th century A. D. In the 10th century, translations from Sanskrit were prominent. Pampa gave his version of the Bhārata. Ponna (Ubhaya Kavi Chakravarti) wrote both in Sanskrit and Kannada. Ranna's Gadāyuddha, an episode from Bhārata. Nāgavarma gave a version of Bāṇa's Kādambarī.

- P. 408. 11th century A. D. : Liṅgānuśāsana, a work on Genders by the Jain author Harshavardhana, son of Śrīvardhana (11th century A. D.).

- P. 409. 12th century A. D. : Dharmopadeśāmṛta, a Sanskrit work on Jain philosophy by Padmanandi (12th century A. D.). The Jain guru Prabhāchandra author of a celebrated work on logic. Abhinava Pampa wrote a Kannada version of the Rāmāyaṇa. Kaṇṇaparya gave in his Neminātha Purāṇa, the stories of Krishna, the Pāṇḍavas and the Bhārata War. Jagaddala Somanātha translated Pūjyapāda's Kalyāṇa-Kāraṇa, a treatise on medicine—entirely vegetarian treatment. Vṛitta Vilāsa rendered into Kannada Amitagati's Dharmaprakāśikā, which is a critical examination of Brahman religious beliefs. Nemichandra based his Kannada novel Lilāvati on Subhandus romance Vāsavadattā.

- P. 410. 13th century A. D. : Sisumāyana (circa 1232) based his Anjanā-charitra on Ravishēṇa's Sanskrit Padmācharitra; Nagarāja (circa 1331 A. D.) based his Puṇyāśava, on a Sanskrit work,

- Pp. 411-12. 15th century A. D. : Nemi-handra, a Jain author, wrote a legal treatise entitled Traivarnikācārā Āmatatva-parīkṣhaṇa, by Devaraja, Jain author; it deals with philosophy. Irugapa, the general of the Vijayanagar King Déva Rāya I, another Jain Sanskrit author, wrote the metrical lexicon Nānārtharatnamālā. His guru Śruta-Kīrti (or Śrutamuni) was author of Raghava-Pāṇḍavīya.
- P. 412. 19th century A. D. : the most prominent work rendered into Kannada was Jivandhara Charita Bhāskara (cir. 1485) gave one version; then Bommarasa of Terakanambi (c. 1485) gave a second one; and Kōtīśvara of Tuluvadēsa (c. 1500) gave a third one.
- P. 414. 17th century A. D. : Bhaṭṭākalanka Deva's Karṇātaka Śabdānuśa-snum, written in 1604 A. D. is a work in Sanskrit though dealing with the grammar of the Kannada language. Vaiṣya-nighaṇṭu, a medical lexicon by Chikkana Paṇḍita, a Jain author who was patronized by Chikka Deva Rāja Wodeyar.
- Pp. 417-20. Undated works : Tatvārthasūtra by the "illustrious Umāśvāti", otherwise called Padmanandi, the first in the line of Jain gurus. He was also known as Konda-muniśvara, who "acquired the power of moving in the air". His another name Gridhrapin-chhāchārya. The earliest inscription in which he is named is dated in 1163 A. D. He is described as a successor of Chandra-gupta, the disciple of Bhaṭṭarabāhu, we may have to set down Umāśvāti to about the 1st century A. D. A commentary on this work Tatvārthasūtra was written by Śivakoṭīśūri, a successor of his, and disciple of Samantabhadra; he may be assigned to the 5th cen. A. D. Vrata-svarūpa by Prabhāchandra; it gives the results of the observance or violation of some of the Jain vratas. Gāyatrī-Vyākhyāna is a Jain commentary on the Vedic verse called the Gāyatrī, which comes to the conclusion that the God invoked in it is none other than Jain. A commentary on Dhananjaya's Raghava Pāṇḍavīya by Nemichandra, disciple of Devanandi, who again was the disciple of Vinayachandrodyā Paṇḍita. Śrutakīrti wrote with great skill the Raghava Pāṇḍavīya reading forwards or backwards. Nemichandra assigned to the 12th century, while Śrutakīrti to the 15th century; the latter's disciple was Charu-kīrti, the author of Sāratraya and other works.

- P. 420. Sanskrit Inscriptions : Mallinātha a lay disciple of Maladhāri-deva, composed the impressive inscription numbered Śravaṇa Belgola 67, dated in 1129 A. D. in kāvya style teeming in ślesha. Heggade Mardimayya, and Pērgese Chavarāja, lay disciples of Prabhāchandra-siddhānta Deva were authors of several inscriptions in mixed Sanskrit and old Kannada. They date from 1115 to 1121 A. D.
- Pp. 424-25. Prakrit works : Prakrit works have come down to us, mostly in connection with the Jains; it was until the 11th century the sacred language of the Jains. In that century Sanskrit was adopted by them; they largely employed the dominant vernaculars of the countries in which they promulgated their religion. Thus, in Mysore, Kannada was cultivated by them; in the Tamil country, Tamil which owes much to them, in the Telugu country, Telugu was equally largely used by them, though their works have not, singularly enough, come down to us in the profusion they have done in the Kannada and Tamil countries. Trailokyapragṇapati, a work in Prakrit on cosmology, does not give the name of its author; it should be earlier than the Lokavibhāga, which was copied in the 5th century A. D. The Jain poet Śrīvardhanadeva (Tumbalurāchārya) of the 7th century A. D., wrote some works in Prakrit. Anuprīkṣha, by Kundakundāchārya; Darśanasāra by Devasena. Jñānachandra-charite, in Kannada composed by Pāyanavarni in 1659; the story was originally written in Prakrit by Vāsachandra, subsequently rendered into Kannada Shatpati by Pūjyapādayogi; Pāyanavarni's work is based on the latter. Private libraries in the State possession many other Prakrit works.
- Pp. 425-27. Kannada Literature : Kannada one of the earliest of all the South Indian languages. Bhattākālanka in his Śabdānuśāsana mentions the Chūḍāmani (96,000 verses), the most important production in early Kannada literature; its author was Śrīvardha (Tumbalurāchārya); work not yet discovered; Śrīvardha praised by the celebrated poet Dandī (7th century) Shyamakundachārya wrote in Kannada in about 700. Amritasāgara, a Jain Tamil poet, who lived before the 11th century mentions in his work on Prosody, existence of Gunagankyam, a work on Prosody in the Kannada language; name of the author not known and the work not available; probably the work was dedicated to the Eastern Chālukya

King Vijayāditya III (844-888). Nripatunga, or Amoghavarsha, a Rāshtrakūṭa king (814-877), his work Kavrajamārga on poetics.

- P. 428 Pampa wrote the Ādi-purāṇa and Vikramārjuna-Vijaya (Pampa-Bharata, in 941) he was a Jain.
- Pp. 428-29. Kannada writers of the 10th century; Ponna, author of Santi-purāṇa; he received the title Kavichakravarti from the Rāshtrakūṭa king Krishna III (939-968). In 978, we have Chāmuṇḍarāya, author of the Chāmuṇḍarāya-purāṇa and in 993, came Ṛanna, author of Ajita-purāṇa and of Sahasra-Bhīma-Vijaya (Gada Yuddha) he received the title Kavichakravarti from the Chālukya king Tailapa (973-997). At the same time as the two preceding, we have Nāgavarma I, a younger brother of Chāmuṇḍarāya, was the author of Chhandombudhi (the first work extant on prosody) and of Kadambari. All three have had as their preceptor Ajitasena, Guru of the Gaṅga king Rāchamalla.
- Pp. 429-30. Writers of the 11th century Śrīdharaśārya wrote the Jātaka-Tīlaka (1049), the first work on astrology in the Kannada language; Śāntinātha, author of the poem Sukumāra Charite (1068).
- Pp. 430-31. Writers of the 12th century : Jain authors . Nāgachandra or Abhinava-Pampa, author of Ramachandra-charita-Purāṇa (Pampa-Rāmāyana), and of Mallinātha-Purāṇa, Nayasena, author of Dharma-mrita (1112); Rājāditya, author of Vyavahāra-Ganita and other mathematical works ; Kīrtivarma, a Chālukya prince, author of Gō-Vaidya, the earliest veterinary work in Kannada , Brahmasiva, author of Samaya Parikshe ; Karnapārya, author of Nemunātha-Purāṇa; Nāgavarma II, the Katakachārya (poet laureate) of the Chālukyan king Jagadekamalla II and author of several important works, namely, Kāvya-valokana (on poetics), Karnāṭaka-Bhāṣa-Bhūṣabhūṣana (grammar) and Vastukosa (lexicon); Jagaddala Somanātha, author of the medical work Karnāṭaka-Kāṭyanakarakā; Sumanobana, the Katakachārya (poet laureate) of the Hoysala king Narasimha I; Vrittavilāsa, author of Dharma-Parikshe and Śāstra-Sāra; Nemichandra, author of a romance called Līlāvatī and a Purāṇa called Ardhanemi; Sujanot-tamsa, author of a paucyric on Gommata; Aggala, author of Chandra-prabha-Purāṇa (1189); Achanna, author of Tardhamāna

- P. 438. Writers of the 19th century : Jains : Devachandra, author of Rājāvalī-Kathe (1838), a cyclopaedia of Jain traditional history and chronology. Chandra-sāgaravarṇī, author of Kadamba-Purāṇa and other works, was a voluminous Jain writer.

Telugu Literature :

- P. 443. Poets in two languages : The earliest Telugu literary works date from the 12th century A.D. Bhīma Kavi's Kavījanāśrayamu, modelled on Nripatunga's Kannada work Kavīrajamarga (9th century A.D.). The work is dedicated to one Recha, a Śrāvaka and disciple of Vadindra Chudamaṇī, a Jain guru. Bhīma Kavi lived towards the close of the 11th century A.D. in the reign of King Anantavarma Choda.

Tamil Literature :

- P. 445. Early Tamil Literature and its indebtedness to Kannada : Tamil literature, like Kannada owes much to Jain authors. The earliest known Jain poets in Tamil belong to the 7th or 8th century A. D. The religious connection between the Jains of the Kannada and Tamil countries (both Digambaras) enabled them to keep touch with each other. Thus, one of the disciples of Pūjyapāda (6th or 7th century A.D.). Vajranandi migrated to the Tamil country and founded a Tamil Sangha at Madura ; he was earlier than the Naladiyar and Kural (8th century A.D.). A great Kannada work, Chūḍamaṇī by Sri Vardhadeva, also called Tumbalurāchārya, (7th century) from his birth-place, Tumbalur (identified with Dombalur, near Bangalore or more likely with Tumbala, near Yedatore in T. Narasipur Taluk). This Chūḍamaṇī and another work Chintāmaṇī have not so far been recovered in Kannada, though there is an ancient Jain work of the name of Chintāmaṇī in Tamil.

The testimony on which it rests. Chandragupta, the Mauryan Emperor was a born Jain and lived and died a Jain. Opinion of Sir Vincent SMITH (Early History of India—4th Edi. 1924). Ponnata Kingdom, the Ponnata of Ptolemy, whose capital was Kirtipur, the modern Kittūr, on the Kapini, in the Heggaddévan-kote Taluk of the Mysore District.
- Pp. 478-79. Aśoka—his early life. He was at first a Jain (Thomas Jainism or the Early Faith of Aśoka); Aśoka introduced Jainism into Kashmir (Abul Fazl, in the Ain-i-Akbari), which is confirmed by the Rājatarangini, recording that Aśoka "brought in the Jina Śāsana". His grandson Daśaratha dedicated the Nāgārjuni caves to the Ājivikas, a sect of Jains, who may be regarded as the fore-runners of the Digambaras, while his grandson Samprati was certainly a Jain. Aśoka eventually embraced Buddhism.
- Pp. 589-90. The Gangas: Circa 2nd century A.D. to 11th century A.D. Origin: Dadiga and Mādhava the two brothers were helped by the great Jain Āchārya Sīmhanandi, of the Kānūrgaṇa (or Krānūrgaṇa) and founded the kingdom named Gangavādi, a Ninety-six Thousand country. With Nandagiri as their fort. Kuvalāla as their city, the Ninety-six Thousand as their kingdom, Victory as their companion in the battlefield, Jinendra as their god, the Jina matha as their faith, Dadiga and Mādhava ruled over the earth.
- P. 620. Tadanagala Mādhiava or Mādhava III (450-475 A.D.) the Ganga king, his Nonamangala grant (E.C. X Mular, 73) dated in his 13th year to a Jain temple.
- P. 622. Avinita (480 A.D.) son of Mādhava III; his Jain grants in the 1st and 36th years of his reign, contained in the Nonamangala and the Mercara Plates. The Jain temples to which the grants were made were in the Punnad Ten Thousand and one of the grants was by the minister of Akālavarsha (a Rāshtrakūṭa king). The Punnad Ten Thousand formed the southern portion of Mysore, and seems to correspond with the Padi-nād or Ten-nād country of later inscriptions.

- P. 623. Avinita, according to Malur 72, was brought up as a Jain, the learned Vijayakīrti being his preceptor.
- P. 627. Durvinita (550—600 A.D. or 605—650 A.D.) : the author of a Śabda-valāra the name of a nyāsa on Pāṇini always attributed to the Jain grammarian Pūjyapāda. Possibly Pūjyapāda was his preceptor, as the latter's Jainendra belongs to the latter part of the 5th century A.D. (I. A. XLIII, 211) and he was probably a contemporary.
- P. 629. Mushakara or Mekkara (? 550 A. D.) son of Durvinita; A Jain (Ganga) temple (called Mekkara-vasti) was erected in his name at Lakṣmēśvara in the Miraj State in the Dharwar District. The erection of this temple points to an extension of the Ganga kingdom in that direction. From this time the Gangas seem to have adhered more steadily to the Jain religion.
- P. 635. Śrīpurusha, Muttarasa (726—776) : his Devarhalli grant to a Jain temple (E. C. IV, Nagamangala 85 and I. A. 11, 155, 370) dated in the 50th year in Saka 698 or 776 A.D. ; and Narasimharajapura grant to a Jain Chaityālaya (M. A. R., 1919-1920), about 780 A. D.
- P. 642. Sivamara II, Saigotta (788—812 A.D.). He erected and endowed a Jain temple at Kummadavada (now Kalbhāvi in the Belgaum District). He also built a basadi on the smaller hill at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa—Chandranāthasvāmi temple.
- P. 650. Dindiga or Prithivipati I (? 850 A. D.) : He with his queen Kampita witnessed the nirvāṇa of the Jain āchārya Ariṣṭanemi on the Katvapra hill at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa (M. A. R. 1908-1909, para 45).
- P. 655. Rājamalla, Satyavākya I (about 817 A. D.) : He was the founder of the Jain cave at Vallimalai in the North Arcot District, (E. I. IV, 140).

- P. 656. Nītimārga I (853-860) : According to Kudlur grant he professed the Jain faith.
- P. 659. Rājamalla Satyavākya II (870-907 A. D.) : The Biliur grant of 888 A.D. records a gift of twelve villages on the Peddoregare (Lakshmanatīrta) by the king to a Jain priest for the benefit of the Panne Satyavākya Jaina temple of the Panne—Kadanga in Coorg. His Narasapur grant of 903 is also to a Jain. Rājamalla II was like his father (Nītimārga), a Jain in his faith. His tolerance, his grants to Brahmans.
- P. 661. Būtagendra or Būtarasa (870-907 A. D.) : spoken of as a "devout Jain" and "of truthful speech and conduct as enjoined by the purport of all sciences".
- P. 663. A nisidhi tombstone for a Jaina teacher named Elāchārya, who subsisted on water for one month and expired by śamādhi after the fast of eight days known as Aṣṭopavāsa (M. A. R. 1913-14, para 63). In the reign of Ereyappa or Nītinārga II (887-935 A. D.)
- Pp. 663-66. Erayappa or Nītimārga II (887-935 A. D.) : A great minister of Nītimārga II is mentioned in a mutilated inscription on the doorway of the Iruve—Brahmadeva pillar at Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa. A son of this great minister was Narasinga. Nagavarma, this unnamed great minister's son-in-law, committed, sallekhanā, at this temple (M. A. R. 1908-09, para 59). Nītimārga was also a Jain by religion.
- P. 669. Būtuga (Nanniya Ganga), Rājamalla's youngest brother, with his queen made a grant to a Jain teacher (M. A. R. 1923. No. 113).
- P. 672. Būtuga II (925-960 A. D.) : his Sudi plates dated in Saka 860 or 938-939 . D. which record a grant to a Jain temple (E.I, 111, 164) have been declared spurious, on what appear to Mr. Narasimhachar (M. A. R. 1920-21, para 55) "very weak grounds".
- P. 675 The Ichavādi stone grant, in Shimoga District, records a gift of wet lands by Būtuga II (as Nanniya Ganga) and his queen to a Jain priest in favour of a basadi constructed by him (M.A.R. 1923, No. 113). He was well versed in Jain philosophy and worsted a Buddhist controversialist in an open debate.

- P. 676. Marula Deva or Punuseya—Ganga or Kaliyuga—Bhima (contemporary of Rāshtrakūṭa Krishna III, Butuga's son. He was a devout Jain and possessed exceptional skill in politics and was of a religious turn of mind. He died without ascending the throne.
- Pp. 676-82. Mārasimha III (961-974 A. D.) ; Marula Deva's younger brother Marasimha III, succeeded his father on the Ganga throne. He was the donor of the Kūdlūr plates to a great Jain scholar. It is dated in Saka 884 or A. D. 962. Of him a long account in E. C. II, new Edn. No. 59, old Edn. 38) both of his achievements and his death in 974 A. D. He maintained the doctrine of Jina and erected basadis and mānastambhas at various places. He relinquished the sovereignty, and keeping the vow of all-khanā for three days in the presence of Ajitabhaṭṭāraka, died at Bankapur in 974. His various achievements described. The Rāshtrakūṭa king Krishna III (better known as Akālavarsha III) crowned him king of Gangavadi. Mārasimha's other names were Guttiya Ganga and Nolambantaka. Si-Mārasimha did good to the cattle. The Ganga kingdom, during his reign, extended as far as the Krishnā and included the Nolambavādi 32,000, the Gangavadi 96,000, the Banavāsi 12,000, the Santalige 1,000, and other provinces (E. I. IV, 352).
- Pp. 685-87. Chāmuṇḍa Rāya, the minister and general of Rāchamalla IV. He was one of the greatest ministers known to Ganga history. In the Jain religion his name stands high and is referred to in several inscriptions as merely Rāya. The story of his achievements and pious deeds is told in a few inscriptions found in Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa and in a work of his own. He belonged to the Brahma-Kshatra race. He had many titles, a list of them is given in Chāmuṇḍa Rāya Purāṇa (978 A. D.). His sacred erections at Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa are Chāmuṇḍa Rāya-basti and the colossal image of Gommateśvara, about 983 A. D. He was a devout Jain and his guru was Ahitasena, the same great saint at Bankāpur before whom Mārashimha III performed sallekhanā. Rāchamalla IV, during whose reign the Gommateśvara image was completed, is as much connected with it as that of his minister, Chāmuṇḍarāya. Chāmuṇḍa Rāya's son, Jinadevana built a temple at Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa (Srav. Bel. No. 121).

- P. 689. Ganga Permānadi (Rakkasa-Ganga) mentioned in E. C. III, GR. Mandya 78, lived down to 1024 A. D. Pergade Hasam built a new Jain temple, in whose favour a grant is recorded, at Talkād.
- P. 704. The Chālukyas : Pulakesi II—Jain temple erected in his name to Puligere (Lakshmeśvara in Dharwar Dist.)
- P. 720. An inscription on a stone built into the wall of the kitchen in the Rāma temple at Kūdlūr, records a grant to Jain temple; the inscription belonged to an older temple. It refers to a private grant to an eastern basadi, in the reign of a Ranapākarasa (about the 8th century), early Chālukyas.
- P. 726. Rūshtrakūtas : Dantidurga identified with Sahastunga to whom Akalanka-Deva, the great Jain guru, describes the greatness of his own learning (Srav. Bel. new Edn., 67, dated in 1129 A. D.)
- P. 729. Govinda II, identified with the king Vallabha mentioned as ruling over the South in the Jain Harivamśa, composed in Saka 705 or 783 A. D., as the son of Krishna (I) entitled Akalavarsha (E. C. XI, Intro. 8; and Mysore and Coorg from the Inscriptions, 68).
- P. 733. Kambha (802-807 A. D.) : He was Dhruva's eldest son. He made a grant, at the request of his son Sankaraganna, to Jain basti at Talkād built by Śrīvijaya-Rāja, a Mahāsāmanta of his brother Govinda III. He is the same person at whose request, Kambha, made a similar grant to another basti built by him at Manne (Manne Plates of 802 A. D.).
- P. 736. Vimalāditya of the old and defunct Chālukya family was the sister's son of Chāki-Rāja, the Rāshtrakūta viceroy in Gangavādi. He was the governor of the Kunigal-desa. His evil influence of Saturn was removed by Arka Kīrti, a Jain Saint whom he made, with the sanction of Govinda III, the grant of a village named Jalamangalam (in the Closepet Taluk, about 20 miles south-east of Kunigal), E. C. XII, Gubbi, 61, text page 49. Arkakīrti belonged to the sect of the Yāpanthyas.
- Pp. 738-46. Amoghavarsha I (815-878) his other names—Nripatunga; Atisayadhiavala. Succeeded Govinda III; had a long reign of 62 years. Many titles are ascribed to him in his work Kavirājamārga. Transferred his capital from Nasik to Mānyakkheta (Malkhed) the Mankir of the Arab writers. His war against the Gangas. His policy towards the Gangas. His Kavirājamārga, the earliest known work on metrical composition in Kannada; it gives a glowing account of the country and of the culture of the people. His religion and literary works : He professed the Jain religion, quite unlike the other kings of the Rāshtrakūṭa line, who were devout worshippers of Śiva. He was the disciple of Jinasena, the well-known Jain author of Ādi-purāṇa, who bears testimony to the fact in the Parivabhyudaya. References to Amoghavarsha in the Jayadhavalatīka, in Viñāchārya's Gaṇitasārasaṅgraha, in the Śabdamañidarpana and in the Śabdānuśāsana. In Saka 797-799 (or A. D. 875-877) he composed a Sanskrit work called Parinottara-ratnamūla. A Tibetan translation of it discovered by SHIEFNER, confirms the author's name as Amoghodaya which stands for Amoghavarsha. Nriptunga, another name of Amoghavarsha. His Kavirājamārga mentions many Kannada authors anterior to the royal author. His trans-Indian reputation. About 875 A.D. he abdicated the throne in favour of his son, Krishna II, and spent the remainder of his life in literary and religious pursuits.

- Pp. 746-47. Krishna II (880—911 A.D.) : Succeeded Amoghavarsha I ; he was also known by the names of Kannara II and Akālavarsha ; the Jain disputant Paravadinalla gave the derivation of his name (Strav. Bel. 67). One Sattarasa, the Nāl-gavunda of Nāgarakhanda 70 fell, on which the office was bestowed by the king (Krishna), on his widow Jakkiyabbe, who held it with great credit for seven years. She is described as "skilled for good government". She expired in performance of (Jain) vows in 918 A. D. (E. C. VII, Shikarpur 219, A. D. 911).
- P. 749. Indra III (912-916 A. D.), son of Krishna II, succeeded him. He was a Jain in faith.
- P. 752. Govinda IV (918-933 A. D.), younger son of Indra III. His Mahā-sāmanā, Kannara a governing over the province of Sindavadi 1000. This feudatory Kannara and his Jain queen Chandiyabbe are referred to in an inscription (M. E. R. 1916, Appen. B, No. 540; 932 A. D.)—Nityavarsha a title of Govinda IV.
- P. 760. Khottiga, Nityavarsha (966-971 A. D.), succeeded his brother Krishna III. He was a Jain by religion. He caused a pedestal to be made for the bathing ceremony of a Jaina saint named Sānti, at Danavalapadu, in the Cuddapah District. He was also the overlord of the Kadambalige 1000, which was governed in his name by one Pandayya (or Pandiga) who was connected with the ancient Chālukya dynasty. Pandayya's wife, Jakki Sundari was a Jain. She built a basadi, to which a grant was made by Pandayya. Danavalapadu—a sacred Jain place.

- P. 761. Indra IV, (died 982 A. D.). He retired to Śravaṇa Belgōla and there starved himself to death by the Jain rite of sallekhanā in 982 A. D. An inscription (Śravaṇa Belgōla 133) describes him as great in war and liberality.
- P. 763. Simultaneous fall of Rāshtrakūṭas and Gangas, meant a great blow to the Jain faith. With rare exceptions, the Ganga kings were Jains by religion, and though most of the Rāshtrakūṭa kings were Śaivas, some appear to have been Jains. But the disappearance of these two dynasties did not for the time being affect the Jain religion, though the Śaiva faith was competing with it for supremacy.
- P. 768. Chālukyas (of Kalyāṇi)—Taila II (973-997 A. D.). He patronised the Kannada poet Kaviratna, who wrote Ajītapurāṇa in 993 A. D. and received from Taila II the title of Kavichakravartī, (M. A. R. 1908-09 and Ins. at Sia. Bel. Intr. 76 where Taila III is a slip for Taila II; Sia. Bel. 449).
- P. 769. Satyāśraya; Iriva—Bedengal (997-1009 A. D.) succeeded Taila II. He was a Jain by religion; his Guru was the Jain teacher Vimalachandra (E. C. VI, Mudgere II).
- P. 775. Jayasimha II, Jagadekamalla (1018-1042) Chālukyan King: His queen Sūggaladevi, converted him from Jainism to the Śaiva faith. He was originally a Jain like his forbears and honoured Jain teachers.
- P. 778. The Jain saint Vādirāja was honoured by Jayasimha II. (Sra. Bel. 67 & 69; 1129 & 1100 A. D.).
- P. 779. Someśvara I (1042-1068): The influence of the Kālamukha ascetics, continued in this reign; they had some influence in checking the growth of Jainism.

- P. 780. On the accession of Someśvara I, about 1042 A. D. the Cholas burnt Pulikesa Nagar (Lakshmeśvar in Dharwar District) and destroyed its ancient Jain temples.
- P. 783. An inscription at Annigere in Dharwar states that the wicked Chola (Rājādhirāja), penetrated the Belgoḷa country and burnt the Jain temples erected there by the Ganga king Ganga-Permadi, but yielded his head to the Chālukya king Someśvara in battle, (FLEET. Dynasties of the Kanarese Districts, 441).
- P. 784. The Santara kings acknowledged Someśvara's suzerainty; Vīra Santara built many Jain temples. His wife Chāgala Devi also dedicated a Basadi in her own name.
- P. 785. In a record dated in 1055 A. D. is mentioned a fifth by a Jain teacher to a basti built by Durvinita at Kogali. Durvinita possibly a Ganga king.
- P. 789. Someśvara at first a Jain by religion, later a Śaivite. He honoured Swāmi, a Jain teacher, with the title of Śabda Chaturmukha (Sra. Bel. 67 dated in 1129 A. D.).
- P. 794. Someśvara's viceroy Mahāsāmanta-Udayāditya was tolerate to the Jain faith (Shikarpur, 221).
- P. 795. He obtained a grant for a Jain basadi at Baligami (in 1075).
- P. 796. Lakshmaṇa an important functionary at the court of Someśvara II; His minister and chief treasurer was Śāntinātha, who was a Jain and a most distinguished poet, author of Sukumāra-charite; his title Sarasvatimukha-mukura; he persuaded Lakhmana to build Śāntinātha basadi at Baligrama. Someśvara II was a Saiva; during his period, the Kālamukha ascetics eclipsed to some extent the Jains.
- P. 818. Mahāmaṇḍaleśvara Joyimmarasa, a feudatory of Vikramāditya was a Jain by faith and was entitled Pesāngagaruda (inscription found at Konakondla, Gooty Taluk, Anantapur); his wife Navikabbe, built a Jain temple called Chatta-Jinālaya, at Kondakundaya-tīrtha (modern Konakondla) in the 6th year of Vikramāditya's reign (about 1081 A. D.). He had charge of the whole of

- Adoni (Sindavadi) and parts of Anantapur and Raichur Taluks, with his capital at Tumbalam.
- P. 826. Though Vikramāditya VI was probably a Jain in religion (he built a basadi when he was governor of Banavāsī), he favoured the Kālamukhas (Śaiva); he was catholic in religious patronage.
- P. 832. Baligami, the capital of the Banavāsī 12,000 : the Jains held their place in it equally with other religions. One inscription (Nagar 35) dated in 1077 A. D. in Vikramāditya's reign, shows the existence of numerous Jain philosophical and other literary works in it. A Jain teacher was called Śrīvijaya, "from giving śāstras to the learned and their needs to the destitute (ibid.)."
- Pp. 880-82. Bijjala (1156-1167 A. D.), the Kalachurya was Jain. Basava, the promulgator of the new Śaiva faith (Virasaivas), was his minister. The Bijjala Rāya Charita, enshrines the story of these two, according to the Jains.
- Pp. 887-90. Basava Purāṇa refers to the Jains and their shortcomings, Ekanata Ramayya a disciple of Basava, persecuted the Jains.
- P. 899. The Kālachurya dynasty did not last beyond a short period of about twenty-seven years. The rise and rapid growth of Virasaivism was one of its chief features. Bijjala was not converted to it. Virasaivism claimed many of the Jain temples and with but a little change, converted Jain images even into the Linga.
- P. 900. About the 3rd century B. C. there were already professing Buddhists and Jains in and about the Chola country.
- P. 903. In the 7th century A. D. Buddhism was in a decaying state, Jainism and Brahminism being in the ascendant.
- P. 934. Sundara Chola's daughter Kundavai built three temples at Daṇḍapuram, one to Śiva, another to Viṣṇu and a third to Jina called Kundavai-Jinālaya and made costly gifts to them.
- P. 942. Rājārāja I, (985-1013) : his sister Kundavai, though a devout Śaiva, her charities extended to Viṣṇu and Jain temples as well; Kundavai-Jinālaya on the rock close by Tirumalai, ten miles north of Polur; her other benefactions to Jain temples are known (M. F. R. 1887, para 7).

- P. 960. In 1008 A. D. Rājārāja confiscated to the villages concerned the lands of those who did not pay the taxes due along with their brethren; this order was made applicable only to "villages of Brahmanas", "villages of Vaikhanasas (Śrīvaiṣṇavas of pre-Ramānuja time) and "villages of Śramaṇas", i. e., Jains.
- P. 982. This shows that the Jains enjoyed equal privileges with others. Private gifts to Jains were still common and Jainism flourished side by side with the other two religions. In the seventh year of Rājārāja's reign one Virasolan, a subordinate of his, made a gift not only to Brahmanas but also to a Jain temple (M. E. R. 1915, App. B, 116; E. I. iv 136).
- P. 1058. Rājendra Chola I was succeeded by his son Rājādhirāja I (1018-1055); a wicked Chola, he penetrated into the Belvola country and burned the Jain temples which Ganga-Permadi, the lord of the Gangamandala, had built in the Annigeri-nūdu (FLEET, Kanarese Dynasties, 441).
- P. 1274. Cholas of Nidugal : Irungola II; in an inscription dated in A. D. 1232, he made a grant for a Jain Basadi on the Nidugal hill, otherwise called Kalanjana (E. C. XII, Pavagada 52).
- P. 1297. Chola period : Both Buddhism and Jainism inculcated the worship of the "teacher" (or guru). With the gradual subsidence of these faiths and the rise of the cults of Śiva and Viṣṇu, the worship of the "guru" was taken by these faiths.
- P. 1310. Hoysalas : story of their origin; they claim to be Yādavas and of the Lunar race; the first few kings of the family were Jains, and the progenitor of the family was Sala; the Tati connected with the story was Sudatta (E. C. II, Śravaṇa Belgoḷa 28) and according to another, he was named Vardhamāna Munindra (E. C. VIII, Nagar 46).
- P. 1318. Vinayāditya II 1047-1100 A. D.; he was a devout Jain; he built a basti at Mattavara (A. D. 1077). A Śravaṇa Belgoḷa record dated in 1129 A. D. states that he became a great king by the favour of the Jaina teacher Śāntideva (Sr. Bel. 67-54 - Old. Edn.). Another states that he built many tanks; temples and Jaina

- shrines (ibid 143); the Jaina basadi at Angaḍi (c. 1050 A. D.); the Ādinātha-basti at Chikka Hanasoge (c. 1090 A. D.).
- P. 1320. Ereyanga, 1063-1095 A. D. He was a devout Jain, his guru being Gopanandi, to whom he made a grant in 1094 A. D. (E. C. V. Channarayapatha 148).
- P. 1321. Mariyāne-daṇḍanayaka (father-in-law of Ballala I) was a devout Jain. With the merchants of Belegere-pattana, he set up the Jain image in the basti at Hatna in the Tiptur Taluk, the image was consecrated by Śubhachandra (M. A. R. 1918, para 93).
- P. 1322. Ballala I, suffered from some terrible disease of which he was cured by the Jain guru Chārūkīrti pandita (Sr. Bel., New Edn. Nos. 254 of 1398 and 258 of 1432 A. D.); Bhujabali-tataka of Doddaiya (c. 1550 A. D.).
- P. 1326. Bitti Deva, or Viṣṇuvardhana 1111-1141 A. D. was a Jain; Rāmānuja converted him to Vaiṣṇavism; he, even after his conversion was a tolerant ruler and a friend as much of Jainism as of Vaiṣṇavism or Śaivism. His most able generals were Jains and they are recorded to have restored Jain temples on an unprecedented scale.
- Pp. 1337-41. Bitti Deva's generals and ministers : foremost among his generals was Ganga-Rāja, the conqueror of Talkād, he was a great supporter of the Jain religion, perhaps the greatest after Chāmuṇḍarāja; he was the disciple of Śubhachandra-Siddhānta-Deva; he restored all the Jain temples of Gangavadi; his eulogy; he is said to have converted the Gangavadi 96,000 into Kṛpāna, identified with Hiuen Tsiang's Konkanapura and Kopal, a Jain place of pilgrimage in the S.-W. of the Nizam's Dominions. He built Jinanāthapura, close to Śravaṇa Belgōla. Grants conferred on him he made over to his guru for use in connection with Jain temples or for other charitable purposes. Thus was granted by him the villages of Parama, Bindiganavile, Govindavadi. He built the Jain temples : Indira Kulagriha (Śāsana-basti) at Śravaṇa-Belgōla; also the Kattale-basti; his wife built the Eradakatte-basti. His guru Śubhachandra died in 1123 A. D. Ganga-Raja's elder brother's wife Jakkanabbe built a tank and a Jain temple; her husband Dāḍḍanayaka Echa built Jain temples at Kopana, Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa and other holy places; he died by the rite of Sannyasana. Ganga-Raja's son, Boppa drove out the Kongas and other arrogant adversaries who were thorns to the country; he built the Jain temple Trailokya-Ranjana (Boppana-chaityalaya) and the Pārśvanāth-basti (Droha-gharatta-Jinalaya). He also built the Śāntiśvara-basti at Kam-badahalli. He was probably the Boppana, the general of Bitti-Deva; he gained a victory at Halasur.

Closely related to Ganga-Rāja were the generals Mariyāne and his brother Bharata; both were generals under Viṣṇuvardhana and his son Narasimha I. Bharata erected the two images of Bharata and Bāhubali, the sons of Rishabhānātha, the first Tirthankara, at Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa. He is credited with the building of eighty new bastis and renovating two hundred old ones in Gangavadi. An equally famous general was Punisa, who was the conqueror of the Nilgiris; he employed his wealth in restoring Jain bastis throughout Gangavadi as they were in the days of the Gangas. The Pārśvanātha-basti at Chāmarājanagar was founded by him. His guru was Ajitasena-pandita-deva. He built the Mulasthāna-basadi of Viṣṇuvardhana-Poyasala-Jinālaya at Bati-Ho-kote, where his wife also built a stone basadi; her name was Dandanayakitti Jakkiyabbe.

Another general was Vishnu or Bittiyanna, and surnamed Immadi-daṇḍanayaka; he received his education under Śrīpāla a celebrated Jain teacher and logician of the time. His father was an old minister of the time of Ereyanga. The king treated him like a son.

Pergade Vasudeva, his son Udaṇḍitya erected a Jina temple called Vasudeva Jinabasti in his father's name.

P. 1342. A feudatory described by the names Bitti-Deva, Viṣṇu sāmanta and Viṣṇuvardhana, apparently after the king; he built Jinālayas also.

P. 1343. King Bitti Deva (Viṣṇuvardhana), his domestic life: he had a number of queens; of these, Santala-Devi was at first a strenuous upholder of the Jain faith but later embraced Vaiṣṇavism; she built the Savati-gandha-vārana-basti at Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa in 1123 A. D. ; she endowed it with a village and certain lands which she presented to her guru Prabhachandra. Her father was a Śaiva and her mother, Machikabbe, a devoted Jaina; Machikabbe's father and grand-father were generals.

- Pp. 1348-49. Religion and Society : Buddhism, Jainism and Vaiṣṇavism flourished in the reign of Vishnuvardhana as friendly faiths ; though he left Jainism for Vaiṣṇavism, his interest in the former did not abate. Thus in 1125 A. D. long after his conversion to the rival faith, we find him building a Jain temple for Śrīpāla-traividya-Deva, and presenting him a village as an endowment for it; this teacher belonged to the Akalanka-maṭh ; he was a great logician, dialectician, and a poet; his titles were Ṣaṭ-tarka-śaṣṭmukha, Vaṭṭbhasimha, Vaṭṭi-kolahala and Tārkika-chakravartī. Many other Jaina teachers flourished in Vishnuvardhana's reign, among these being Malliṣeṇa-Maladhāri (Ganadhara of the Kali age); Prabhāchandra, a disciple of Meghachandra-traividya, the guru of queen Santale I ; Subhachandra, the guru of Ganga-Rāja, who is described as a Siddhanandi in philosophy. Two of the greatest promoters of the Jaina religion Ganga-Rāja, Punisa flourished during his reign. The reign of Vishnuvardhana should accordingly be set down as one of the brightest in Jaina history.
- P. 1351. His change of faith did not mean any want of patronage in favour of the Jains, with whose teachers he seems to have kept close intercourse.
- P. 1352 Vishnuvardhana cannot have been the sectarian he is represented to have been in certain traditionary stories. These are undoubtedly later inventions worthy of no credence. Society too would not have tolerated such vandalism as the wild destruction of Jain temples which is attributed to him under the influence of Rāmaṇuja
- P. 1355. Narasimha I (1143-1173) : His rule : Narasimha I, though a Vaiṣṇava, was tolerant towards Jainism, the religion of most of his generals. He visited Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa in 1159 A. D. and made grants of villages to the temple built by Hulla.

P. 1357. His generals and ministers : Hulla, the treasurer, was a minister of Narasimha. He was a Jain. He had served under Vishnuvardhana and is praised as one superior to Brihaspati in politics and to Yogāndharayana in administration. He was a minister during the reign of Ballala II as well. He restored several Jain temples at Bankapura, Kalivita, Kopana and Kallengere, all places held sacred by the Jains, besides building five Jain temples at Kallengere and the Chaturvimsati temple at Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa.

Pp. 1358-59. Provincial rulers : A subordinate chief (Sāmanta) was Guli-Bachi, the lord of Manyakhedapura (Malkhed). He was the patron of four creeds, Bauddha, Jaina, Śaiva and Vaiṣṇava; he built Jain basadis in the name of his mother.

Another Sāmanta was Bitti-Deva; his mother Santale was the supporter of the four creeds. Bitti and his brothers were devout Jains and the gift made by his brother Govi-Deva are mentioned—the beautiful Pārśvanātha basti at Heggare in 1160 A. D.; his wife Śrīya-devī presented a Jain image which was once in the Raṅganātha temple at Huliya. Bitti had been general in the time of Vishnuvardhana, he was engaged in the wars against the Nilgiris and the Coimbatore country.

Pp. 1366-67. Ballala II (1173-1223 A. D.) : his generals, ministers and feudatories : Mahāpradhana Sarvādhikari Dandanayaka Bittimayya was the prime minister, Mahāsāmanta was Govi of Huliya who was the supporter of the four creeds—Māheśvara, Bauddha, Vaiṣṇava and Arhat. Chandramauli was the ornament of ministers, he was a worshipper of Śiva ; his wife Achambike was a devout Jain ; she built the Pārśvanāth temple (Akkana basti) at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa, to which at Chandramauli's instance, Ballala II generously granted a village; she obtained from the king the grant of another village for worship of the Gommatas. The general Vasudhaika-bandhava Rechimayya or Recharasa, who had rendered eminent services to the Kālacuryas, joined Ballala II and served under him, he built, about 1220 A. D., at Arsikere (Arsikere) the Sahasra-kūṭa-jinālaya and endowed it with the sanction of the king; Arsikere at that time contained a thousand steadfast Jain families and was styled the southern Ayyavale (Aihole). Recharasa set up also the god Śāntinātha at Jinanāthapura near Śravaṇa Belgola.

- Pp. 1371-1373. His (Ballala II) capital cities : Arsikere, a populous place with large number of Brahmans, Jains and Koyilal; it attracted the attention of donors like Recharasa, who built the Sahasra-kūṭa-Jinālaya in it in about 1220 A. D.

Religion, Architecture and sculpture : During the reign of Ballala II, Jainism and Vaishnavism flourished side by side, without the exhibition of any ill-will towards each other. Ballala II visited Śravaṇa-Belgola and made grants there as usual. The largest number of temples built in any single Hoysala king's reign was in that of Ballala II—Akkana basti at Śravaṇa-Belgola (1182 A.D.), Śāntinātha basti at Jinanāthapura, and Śāntinātha basti at Bandalike (cica 1200 A. D.); Sahasrakūṭa basti at Arsikere (C. 1220 A.D.)

- P. 1523. Harihara II's Jain minister Baicha's son Irugappa, a famous general; several records of his : two of these eulogies his guru Panditārya (Panditachārya, the guru of Bhima-devi; the Jain queen of Deva-Rāya I)—E.C.II, Srav. Bel. 337. Another record states that he built the Kunthu Jinālaya at Vijayanagar (S. I. I i. 156)—this is evidently the temple known today as the Gānigitti temple at Hampi. An inscription dated in 1422 A.D. sets out his pedigree and records the grant by him of Belgola for Gommatesvara (E. C. II, Srav. Bel. 253). The founder of the family was Baicha I, a general and minister of Bukka I. Baicha I and Iruga I were ministers of Harihara II and Bukka II. Irugappa was a Sanskrit scholar. His brother Baicha II was governing the Mangalur-rājya in 1407 A.D. (M.E.R. 1901. No. 41).
- P. 1529. In the reign of Harihara II, both Jainism and Virasaivism claimed an equal number of adherents and popularisers in the Kannada language.

- Pp. 1665-66. The period of rule covered by Mallikarjuna and Virupāksha (1446-1486)—some Jain poets : The most noteworthy among the Jain poets was Terakanambi Bommaiāsa who was the author of Sanatkumara-Charita, and Jīandhara-Sangatyā, the latter being a work of considerable interest. His grandfather Nemichandra won fame as a disputant at the court of Deva-Rāya II.
- Pp. 1668-69. & p. 1754. The Saluvas of Sangitapattana, Sanskrit for Hāduvalli, situated in Tuluvadesa (or South Kanara) were in power from about 1491 A.D. to about 1560 A.D. in a part of the present South Kanara District. They professed the Jain faith. They belonged to the Kāśyapa-gotra.
- P. 2097. Among the Jain poets of the period (Sadāśiva Rāya), the chief were Sālva, author of a Bhārata-Rasaratnākara and Vaidyasangatyā, and Doddaiyya, who wrote the Chandraprabhacharite (ibid 234-254).
- P. 2208. Tirumala (Viceroy at Serimgapatam—1585-1626 A.D.) : A record of his dated in 1626, registers a gift for the merit of his father and mother to a Jain Pandit.
- Pp. 2229-30. In the Mysore country there flourished during the reign of Venkata I many poets. The Jain lexicigrapher Devottama, whose work Nānārtha-Ratnākara deserves to be better known, probably lived about 1600. But the greatest poet and grammarian of the time was the Jain author Bhaṭṭakalaṅka-Deva who finished the famous work Karnāṭaka-Śabdānuśāsana in 1604. He was a poet at the court of Śrī-Ranga II and then at that of his successor Venkata I. His work bears eloquent testimony to the depth and range of his learning.

In the Gopinath Hill, on the north-east, is an ancient Jain inscription. The name Nandagiri (Hill of pleasure) was changed to Nandigin (hill of Nandi, the bull of Śiva), in the 11th century under the Cholas. As the Jain inscription begins by invoking the first Tirthankara Vṛishabha whose name means bull, helped towards suggesting the appellation.

Apparently till the 4th century of the Christian era, at all events, Prākṛit was the Official language and Prakrit and Sanskrit continued to interpret our thoughts and ideas for many centuries after the birth of Christ. The Jains gave up Prakrit and began writing in Sanskrit about the 5th Century A. D. Jainism was in vogue earlier than Buddhism under Chandragupta Maurya and Śrutakevali Bhadrabāhu.

B. C. LAW. Vaiśālī, Mahāvīra's Birth Place. (Jain Ant. Vol. X; No. I; Arrah; 1944; Pp. 16—18).

Vaiśālī (identified with the present village of Basarh in the Muzaffarpur dist. Bihar) the capital of the Licchavi Rājās and the head quarters of the powerful vajjian confederacy. The great city claims Mahāvīra as its citizen. He was known as tasāhe or Vaiśālīka, that is, an inhabitant of Vaiśālī. Kuṇḍagrāma, the birth place of Mahāvīra was a suburb of Vaiśālī. Mahāvīra's mother Trivālā was a sister of Ceṭaka who was one of the Vaiśālī Rājās. Out of the forty-two rainy seasons Mahāvīra spent no less than twelve at Vaiśālī.

Mahāvīra's parents were worshippers of Pārśva and followers of Śramaṇas. Śramaṇas or wandering ascetics had been in existence ever since the time of the earlier Upamiśadas and evidently the Śramaṇas that were followed by the parents of Mahāvira belonged to one of the numerous sects or classes of Indian ascetics. Mahāvira died at the age of seventy-two freed from all pains in the town of Pāvā.

A. N. UPADHYE. Tavanidhi And Its Inscriptions. (Jain Ant. Vol. X; No. II; Arrah; 1944; Pp. 49—51).

Tavanidhi is a Jain holy place, situated on the left side of Poona to Bangalore road, a couple of miles to the south of Nipani, in the Belgaum District. Its name variously written : Tavanidhi, Stavanidhi, Tavandi etc. A village is there known as Tavandi on the top of the hillock. In the valley there is a row of temples, five in number. This holy shrine is lately famous as Śrī Kṣetra Stavanidhi. A Māna-stambha is there in front of the central temple. Two Kannada inscription—Text given. The first inscription mentions Viranandi who flourished about the middle of the 12th century A. D. period assigned to the Pārivanātha image. Today Tavanidhi is famous for Brahmanātha or Kṣetrapala. Nayasena in his Kannada Dharmāmṛta refers to Pārivanātha at Tavanidhi which is known to be a holy place,

S. SRIKANTHA SASTRI. Identification of Tavanidhi. (Jain Ant. Vol. XI; No. 1; 1945; Arrah; Pp. 1—3).

A. N. UPADHYE has suggested in Jaina Ant. Vol. X; P. 51, that Tavandi, near Nipani in the Belgaum District is the famous Jaina holy place mentioned by Nayasena in his Dharmāmṛta. But here the author identified Tavanidhi with the village Tavanandi, in the Kuppagadde holebi, Sorab Taluk, Shimoga District of Mysore, Epigraphical evidences cited.

It may be inferred that this Tavanidhi was a Saiva Centre where as Tavanidhi near Sorab was sacred to the Jinas. Taking all these facts into consideration it is probable that Tavanandi near Sorab is Tavanidhi mentioned by Nayasena.

A. N. UPADHYE : Tavanidhi.
(Jain Ant. Vol. XI; No. II; Arrah; 1946; Pp. 15-16).

S. SRIKANTHA SASTRI has identified Tavanandi near Sorab as Tavanidhi (Jain Ant. Vol. XI; No. I; Pp. 1—3) and about the evidence of Śīlavijaya's Tīrthamālā he opines that it is not precise.

Dr. UPADHYE maintains that Śīlavijaya refers to Tavanidhi in Belgaum Dt, and quotes the text of the Tīrthamālā.

K. R. VENKATRAMA ANYAR. Āyirattali—A Cola Capital (Prs. Ind. Hist. Cong.) Allahabad, 1946.

P. 160. Āyirattali, also called Palaiyāru and Muḍikonḍasolapuram, one of the capitals of the Colas. Āyirattali means the 'thousand temples'. When Appar visited Vadatali or the 'northern shrine' of Palaiyāru he found the central shrine of Śiva obscured by a new vimānam put up by Jains, who had obtained possession of the place, and with the help of the chief of the place, probably the Muttaraiyar chief, he had the temple cleared of the Jains and caused a new vimānam to be built for Śiva.

P. 113. Chap. XI, Religion—In every 1,000 of the population are 27 Jains. Main variations since 1921—Jains—7.5.

P. 114. 79 per cent. of all Jains are found in Marwar (38), Mewar (22), Jaipur (10) and Bikaner (9) and are also returned in comparatively small numbers from other States, where they are in larger numbers, their variation per cent. in the decade is as in the margin. The increase in Bikaner is on account of greater openings for trade in the Canal Colonies, while the relatively small increase of 7.5 per cent. in the Jain population in the whole Agency is due to the absence of many males engaged in trade in all parts of India. The proportion of 1,060 females per 1,000 males, the absence of many married males and the prohibition of widow re-marriage are not factors that are conducive to a high rate of increase. The numbers by sects are as in the margin and show the actual variation in the intercensal period. The figures would appear to indicate that in 1921 many of the Śvetāmbar sect were returned under 'others' (unspecified).

G. S. GHURYE. Census contribution to the Racial Analysis of India : A valuation. (QJMS. Vol. 27—Nos. 3 and 4, 1937, Bangalore).

P. 297. Census of India, 1931 Vol. 1, Part III, by B. S. GUHA. There is no reason why, because one caste gives a low value of R. C. R. L. with another caste, which again gives, more or less, a similar value for R. C. R. L. with a third caste, that the first caste should give a low value for R. C. R. L. with the third. Instance from Dr. B. S. GUHA's own data. The R. C. R. L. between the Bania Jain and the Chitpavan Brahmins is 9.53, that between the Rajput and the Chitpavan Brahmin is 5.45 and yet that between the Bania Jain and the Rajput is over 14.

P. 299. In his attempt to explain the smaller value of this co-efficient between the Rajputs and the two Gujarat castes of the Bania Jain and the Kathi than those between these latter and the Malve Brahmins, Dr. GUHA employs the absence of the brachycephalic strain in the Malve Brahmins to account for the difference. But Dr. GUHA forgets to explain why the same 'brachycephalic' Rajputs do not show even such values of the R. C. R. L. with Nagar Brahmins and Audich Brahmin, while they show much smaller values of the co efficient with some castes of Maharashtra.

P. 315 Dr. GUHA concludes that there is "a very intimate relationship between the peoples having a more intermediate head-form in Gujarat, Maharashtra, Kannada, Tamil Nadu and Bengal."

Going through the table (A) one finds that intimate relationship exists between the Nagar Brahmins, on the one hand and Bania-Jain and the Kathi, on the other; and also, perhaps, between the Kathi and the Brahma-Kshatri; and the Audich Brahmin and the Bania-Jain.

P. 317. The Nagar Brahmin, the Kathi, the Bania-Jain, it is only the Bengali Kāyastha who has the third degree of association with them.

P. 319. From Table (A) it is seen that of the four Gujarat castes, the three peculiarly Gujarati castes, viz. Nagar Brahmin, Bania-Jain, and Kathi, show no association with any South Indian caste except the Kanarese Brahmin. Both the Nagar Brahmin, and the Bania-Jain, have only second degree of association with the Kanarese Brahmin, while the Kathi has none whatever. Two of them, viz., the Bania Jain and Nagar Brahmin have fair degree of association with the Marathi castes.

SWAMI PRAKASH CHANDRA. Census of India—Jaipur State, 1941. Part I, Report. Jaipur, 1942.

Pp. 14--25. Proportion per 1,000 of the total population and of each community living in towns—Jains—465. The proportion per 10,000 of urban population of each community as compared with that of rural one shows that the Jains living in towns is about four times more than those living in the villages.

P. 23. Mean-age—Jain—Males—1941 : 27.23; females 26.60. The Jains have had comparatively the highest mean-age which the Mohamadans the lowest—it therefore testifies that Muslims are very prolific as the number of children under 10 is higher than in any other community.

P. 25—Proportion of females per 1,000 males in Jain community in the districts :—

P. 37. Proportion per mile of each sex who are married at the age-periods, 0—5, 5—10, 10—15 respectively for the years 1941 and 1931.

P. 38. Comparative statement showing extent to which infant marriage (under 5 years of age) prevails among the Jains.

P. 39. The proportion of infant marriage among the Jains on the whole is rather low. Only 3 out of 15 units have recorded infant marriage among the Jain community. The highest proportion is noticeable in Dausa and Sawai Jaipur among males and the lowest in Malpura amongst females only.

Widowhood seems to be higher among the females of Jain community because social and religious sentiments debarring widow-marriage have this say to a large extent. The highest number of widowers and widows is among the Jains. The statistics show that though the Jains do not favour early marriages, yet the proportion of widowhood is very high.

P. 54. Out of the Hindu, Muslim and the Jain communities, the highest proportion of literate females is noticeable among the Jains and the lowest among the Hindus.

V. S. AGARWALA. A short guide-book to the Archaeological Section of the Provincial Museum, Lucknow, Allahabad, 1940.

P. 1. The sculptures in the Archaeological Section of the Provincial Museum, Lucknow belong to the ancient site of Kankālī Tilā near Mathurā. These date from the second century B. C. to about 1000 A. D. The specimens removed en bloc to the Lucknow Museum, were of the great Mathurā School, and consisted of seated and standing images of the different Jain Tirthankaras, beautifully carved states or tablets of homage (Āyāgapattas), various parts of ancient Toraṇas or gateways.

P. 2. The Mathurā School of art flourished in the Kushāṇa period.

Fig. 5. The slab was set up by Simha-nādika, son of a trader, for the worship of the Arhats. It belongs to the early first century A. D. Description given.

P. 3. This Āyāgapattā was dedicated by the lady Śivayaśā wife of the dancer (nartaka) Phalguyasa for the worship of the Arhat. Description given.

Another Āyāgapattā set up by the lady Achala, showing in the centre a seated Jina within a circle with four Nandipadas disposed exteriorly. Description given.

Goldsmith Nandighosha set up one Āyāgapattā. Description given.

Another Āyāgapattā showing a central Jina figure within a circle surrounded by four sacred symbols enclosed within circular ends of a conspicuous Svastika symbol. Detailed description given. Surrounding it are a Śūpha, Bodhi tree, Jina and an indistinct figure.

P. 4. Another Āyāgapattā set up in honour of the Tirthankara Mahāvira by the wife of a high dignitary of Mathurā. Description given.

P. 5. Tirthankara Images—A number of these images seated in meditation (dhyānamudrā) with pedestals inscribed and dated. The epigraphs are important for purpose of the early Jaina religious, history throwing light on the organisation of the Jaina community (Samgha) of ascetics and teachers of different Gaṇas, Śākhās and kulas. Āryavati and Sarasvati figures—the image of Āryavati is carved in the year 42 of the great Satrap Śodāsa, about the middle of the first century A. C. Description given. She is identified with the royal lady Triśalā Kshatriyāṇi, mother of Mahāvira.

The image of goddess Sarasvati belongs to the year 54 (132 A. D.). Description given. This image belongs to the Jaina pantheon and installed at the instance of a Jaina preacher in the Kottiyagāma. It is very striking that both Lakṣhmi and Sarasvati formed part of the Jaina pantheon from the very beginning of its religion art.

Pp. 7, 8, 9, Toraṇa (arch) and Bracket figures, Torara, Tymapanum, railing 10, 11, 12. pillars—description given.

Pp. 12-13. Tirthankara Images and Heads—Tirthankara statues belong to the Kushāṇa and Gupta periods (1st to 6th A.D.). Descriptions given and their dates assigned.

M. H. KRISHNA. The Guide to Śravaṇa Baḷgoḷa—Mysore. Review (QJMS Vol. 31, Nos. 3 and 4. 1941, Bangalore).

Derivation of the name; Chandra Gupta the earliest Mauryan Emperor and his Guru Bhadrabāhu; the image of Gomata under construction for over 10 years, the statue—serene and peaceful, impressive; contemplative of the struggling world, perfectly self-controlled. FERGUSON says, "nothing grander or more imposing exists anywhere out of Egypt and even there no known statue surpasses it". None can compare with this in expression, in impressiveness, in majesty, dignity, beauty of design and execution or in that calm, beatific spirit of renunciation; the orbit of its hypnotic influence; for at least 40 miles around the vision continues.

First treatise.

Generalities—The Jain grottos are not very numerous in the West of India. Among the 24 Tirthankaras, Neminātha and Pārśvanātha occupy there in general the first place.

Grottos of Nasik—The sculpture of these grottos resemble to the Jain sculpture more than to all other.

Grottos of Dhumnar— They present the characters of Jaina temples.

Grottos of Elūra— The Jaina grottos date probably from the 11th or 12th century.

Temples— The Jaina temples of the West India. Śatruñjaya, Gīrnār, Abu Statues. Description of a huge Jaina statue which is found in the district of Barwāni, on the Narbadā.

Inscriptions— The inscriptions of Gīrnār

Second treatise.

Grottos of Elūra. The fourth grotto of the first group is Jaina. It is of small dimensions and includes a statue of Neminātha. Grotto of Chandor. It contains the statue of a Tirthankara (Pārśvanātha or Neminātha) surrounded by two companions and two consorts, and by the images of other Tirthankaras. The sculpture recalls that of the Jaina temples of Elūra.

P. 45—Masjid-i-Kutbul-Islam. There is a stone pillar on the south Colonnade, bearing the figure of Buddha the ascetic, or one of the Jain Hierarchs, and this may probably belong to old Delhi.

Pp. 50-51.—do— Mr. FERGUSSON says of the Great Mosque : "The roofs and domes are all of Jaina" architecture, so that no trace of the Moorish style is to be seen internally. The pillars are of the same order as those used on Mount Abu, except that those at Delhi are much richer and more elaborate. They belong to the 11th or 12th century. On the roof and less seen parts, the cross-legged figures of the Jaina saints, and other emblems of that religion, may still be detected."

P. 51. The carved pillars in the Mosque itself, and in the courtyard, are Jaina in style, but no one figure so perfect as to be undoubtedly a Jain emblem.

P. 57. Jain style of architecture. Pillars in the mosque, they have a beauty and variety of ornament unequalled, so far as is known, in the whole of the northern part of India, and are some of the best samples of a style of architecture, evidently one suggested by that of the Jains, of which specimens abound in Rajputana and Bundelkhand.

P. 61. Pillars in the centre of the east colonnade in the mosque—these pillars are grouped together and their arrangements is octagonal in form. The column resembles the character of those to be seen in the Jain temples on Mount Abu, the lower shaft being long and the upper one short.

The 4th book of the second part (Pp. 485—512) is especially devoted to the Jain grottos and contains the following chapters :

Chapter I.—Generalities on the Jainism. The deliverance. Cosmogony. The principal Tīrthankaras. Vṛṣabha, Ajitanātha, Pārśvanātha, Mahāvīra. The Digambaras and the Śvētāmbaras. Moral. List of the 24 Tīrthankaras with their symbols, their appearance and the place of their nirvāṇa.

Chapter II.—Generalities on the Jain grottos, Age, number, architecture, images of the Tīrthankaras.

Grotto of Badāmi. Excavated towards the year 650 A. D.; its dimensions. Statue of Mahāvira seated : figures of some other Tirthankras, particularly of Pārśvanātha.

Grotto of Aihole— General description. Sculpture representing Mahāvira in the midst of a group of 12 other figures.

The two grottos of Pāṭnā— Brief description of the second. More detailed description of the first and of the statues that it contains. It is dated of about 9th or 10th century. Grottos of Chamar Lena (Nasik). Rapid description of these excavation relatively recent (11th or 12th century).

Grottos of the fort of Bhamer, to north-west of Dhulia. Only one presents some interest. Grotto of Ramcandra, to the north-west of Poona. Short description.

Chapter III.—The Jaina grottos of Elura.

1. Chota Kailasa— Imitation of the great brahmanical temple of Kailasa. Its dimensions. Some parts are in dravidian style. A mutilated statue bears the date Śaka 1169.

2. Indra Sabha—detailed description. The court. The statues of Pārśvanātha, of Gautamasvāmin, Mahāvira and of the goddess Ambikā, To the right of the court, there is an elephant on pedestal and a monolithic pillar 27 feet high, surmounted by a quadruple image. At the centre of the court, there is a pavilion with, quadruple image likewise. To the west there is a grotto with several statues, among which those of Pārśvanātha, Mahāvira and Śāntinātha, the last accompanied by an inscription. The great hall. The gigantic statues of Indra and of Ambikā. The figures of Tirthankaras. The sanctuary with the image of Mahāvira. To the south-west of the great hall, there is a cell with some statues of Jains. To the north-west, there is another similar cell. Seven plates beside text : LXXX, 2 : LXXXVI—LXXXIX; XCI, I and XCII, 2.

3. Jagannātha Sabhā—To the west of the court, a hall with carved pillars and inscriptions, not very legible, in old canara. In front of this hall, a chapel with statues. To the east of the entrance, a chapel with images of Mahāvira or Śāntinātha, of Pārśvanātha and of Gautama. On the upper storey, a hall with 12 pillars and numerous sculptures. To the west the last grotto. Three plates beside text : XC, XCI. 2 and XCII. 1 and 3.

4. Colossal statue of Pārśvanātha, on the top of the hill where the grottos have been excavated. An inscription, the translation of which, according to BÜHLER, has been given, is carved on this statue; it bears the date of 1234-1235.

Chapter IV.—Grottos of Dhārāsīnva—Description of the second, the third and of the fourth. These grottos are dated in the middle of the 7th century A. D. or thereabout. Plate XCIII.

Grottos of Ankāi Tankāi—The first four are the most important. The first is remarkable by its sculptures (Plates XCIV and XCV, I). The second contains the statues of Indra and Ambikā and the image of a Tīrthankara. The third offers, on each side of the vestibule which leads to the sanctuary, two statues especially, described; one represents Pārśvanātha and the other probably Śantinātha. The fourth grotto contains an inscription of the 11th or 12th century. The three other grottos are smaller than the precedents. The sanctuary of one of them shelters the image of a Tīrthankara reproduced in the plate XCV, 2.

Grottos of Gwallior : Five groups, the first of which consists of 22 gigantic statues of Tīrthankaras, among which those of Vriṣabha and of Neminātha. The second contains 18 great statues, and the three others, less important, offer nothing remarkable. Final remarks. The Jaina monuments do not go back beyond the 6th or 7th century. However the Jainism is as old, if not more, as the Buddhism. But while the Buddhism developed rapidly, the Jainism lay dormant in some way during several centuries, upto the moment when the disciples of Mahāvīra began to construct, some temples of all beauty. Those of Gujarat, constructed in the 11th or 12th century, are perhaps the most remarkable in the whole of India. As regards the grottos, they represent only an episode in the history of Jaina architecture.

At Dailwādū, a village of the mount Abū one sees still to-day five Jaina temples, which the pilgrims visit every year. Four of these temples constitute a group, the fifth of which has been separated. All are remarkable for their architectural beauty.

The most ancient of them is dedicated to Vṛṣabhadeva; it was constructed in 1030 A. D. by Vimalaśah, a merchant of Anahilvād.

Detailed description of this temple.

Another, built by the two brothers vastupāla and Tejahpāls, Ministers of the king Viradhavala, is dedicated to Neminātha. It is equally the object of a special description.

P. 272. The four principal styles of Indian architecture are the Buddhist, the Dravidian, the Northern Hindoo, and the Chālukyan or Jain.

277. The Jaina sect makes its appearance in India about the seventh or eighth century. They did not believe in the divine inspiration of the Vedas but as long as they observed caste and acknowledged the gods of the Hindū Pantheon, the Brahmans refrained from persecuting them.

The architecture of the Jains began when the Buddhist was dying out. One of the characteristics of Jaina architecture is the horizontal archway, and another is the bracket from of capital.

P. 2. All Jain figures are not nude—"The God of the Jains is figured naked, young, handsome, with a calm countenance, and arms reaching down to the knees; his breast is marked with the Śrīvatsa figure". (Varahamihira's Bṛihat-Saṃhitā Ch. 58, V. 45).

P. 3. Hallos or bhāmaṇḍalas are common to all classes of images, Hindu, Buddhist and Jain. All the Tīrthankaras have generally halos.

Pp. 4-6. The caves of Khaṇḍagiri, Udayagiri and Nilgiri. All the caves ascribed to the Jains and not to the Buddhists. Prevalence of Jainism in Khaṇḍagiri from a long time—Trisūlas open or pointed, Stūpas, Svastikas, barred railings, railed trees, wheels, the Goddess Śrī common to Jainism as to other religions—Symbols closely connected with Jainism observed in these caves—Jainism fairly well proved to be older than Buddhism, its last two Tīrthankaras, Mahāvīra and Pārśvanātha being historical personages. The last two Tīrthankaras are generally assigned respectively to the 6th and 8th century B.C. Proof of ample margin for the spread of Jainism. The inscriptions support the hypothesis of Jain occupation. King Khāravela of the Hāthigumphā inscription made the grant to the Jains. Caves having images meant as temples places of worship; while those without such images meant as residences for Jain monks.

P. 8. The Sātaghariā cave images of 24 Jain Tīrthankara of the three broken caves to the left of the Sātabakhriā two have images of Tīrthankaras and their attendants.

The Jain temple over the Sātabakhriā cave is of the same age as the cave. The other temple crowning the hill was built in the 18th century by a Jain merchant of Cuttack.

The Jain caves began to be made at about the time of Asoka's conquest of Kalinga (60 B. C.)

P. 9. The revival of Jainism with more elaborate image-worship is apparently due to the influence of the Jains in Western and Southern India.

To the influence of the Rāṣṭrakūṭas flourishing from A.D. 748 to A.D. 973, the of revival Jain worship in Orissa in the 9th to 11th century may be reasonably supposed to have been due. The subsequent disappearance of Jainism from Orissa is probably attributed to the increasing influence of Jainism from Orissa is probably attributed to the increasing influence of Vaiṣṇavism and specially of Jagannātha worship—Persecution of Jain and Bauddha Sādhus in the hills round Bhuvaneśvara by Madar Mahādeva, grandson of Chodaganga Deva in the close of the 12th century A.D. No Jain remains have been found which can be authentically dated later than this period.

P. 20. In the Jain temple in the terrace of the Khaṇḍagiri there is a masonry platform with small walls in which are embedded five images of Tīrthankaras.

P. 22. Dr. T. BLOCH's remark on the paper—Everything in the caves is of Jain origin.

P. 11. Many broken statues of Tirthankaras were obtained by Cunningham in the course of his excavations at the western end of Kankali Tilā.

Kankali Tilā was the site of some important Jain building which existed during the rule of the Indo-Scythians.

That the Jain establishment, which once occupied this site, existed down to the Muhammadan period, is proved by inscribed Jina images dated in the 12th century of the Vikrama era.

P. 17. Two Jain temples discovered in the Kankāli Tilā.

P. 27. The Jain community of ancient Mathura had its main sanctuary on the site of Kankāli Tilā.

There are inscriptions which prove that the great Jain establishment of the Kankāli Tilā existed till the time of the Muhammadan conquest, when all Buddhist monuments of Mathura had long since fallen into ruins.

Pp. 41-43. Some remarks regarding images of Jinas or Tirthankaras. The great Jain site of Mathura is the Kankāli Tilā. The Tirthankara image is in all probability a purely Indian creation. The most striking feature of the Tirthankara figure is its nudity in which case the image belongs to the Digambara sect. The Jina has symbols not only on the palms and soles, but also in the centre of the breast. The hair is usually arranged in short curls in the shape of spirals turned towards the right. The earlier specimens are somewhat different: The hair assumes the appearance of a periwig, or it hangs down on the shoulders in straight locks. The earlier Tirthankaras have neither uṣṇiṣa nor ūrṇa but those of the later part of the Middle Ages have a distinct excrescence on the top of the head. In artistic merit Jain figures are far inferior to those of the Buddhists—Devotional scenes are commonly found on the pedestals of Tirthankara figures of the Kuṣāṇa period—The standing Jain figures are more devoid of grace and expression than the seated ones—Mention is made of the four-fold Jain figures in the possession of the Mathura Museum.

In the earlier Jain sculptures of the Kuṣāṇa and Gupta periods there is nothing to distinguish the individual Tirthankaras, except the snake-hood in the case of Supārśva and Pārśvanātha. In mediaeval sculpture there is usually a symbol or cognizance carved on the pedestal to show which Tirthankaras the image represents.

- P. 4 XIII. Āmber Jain temple inscription now deposited in the Jaipur Museum. It is dated Vikram Saṃvat 1714 (1657 A. D.), Saka (1583)? (1579). It says that at Ambāvati (Amber), the Capital of the country called Dhuṇḍa (Dhūṇḍhāra) there ruled a king called Jayasimha whose chief minister Mohanadāsa belonging to the Khandelavāla family and to Balātākāragana of Mūlasangha, built a temple of Vimalanātha at Ambavati and adorned it with a golden kalasa (a rounded pinnacle on the top of a temple). It then mentions that in the Vikram Saṃvat 1716 when Mahārājādhirāja Mahārāja Jayasimha of Kachchhavāla family was ruling at Ambāvati some additions were made to the temple by his chief minister. These additions seem to have been recorded in the second slab which is missing. The inscription records the names of various members of the chief minister's family as well as those of the Bhaṭṭārakas of Mūla Sangha.

Annual Progress Report of the Archaeological Survey Circle, North Western Provinces and Oudh.

Pages. 13—18.

The work of excavation of Dr. Fuhrer at Mathura, from the 15th November, 1890 to the 5th March, 1891. Information about the principal monuments discovered. General notes on the value of the inscriptions for history and the doctrine of Jainism : Organisation of the Jaina Order : the Koṭṭiya gaṇa at Mathura, its 'Kulas' and 'Śakhas', the Jaina nuns; the laic adepts; the cult; the goddess Sarasvati; the Tirthakaras; the stupas; the period of the Jaina writings; the Śvetāmbaras and the Digambaras in the beginning of the Christian era.

Special examination of some fragments of sculpture and some inscriptions.

Year 1891-1892.

3. Excavations in the neighbourhood of Nasratganj. A temple dedicated to Pārśvanātha was brought to light, with fragments of statues and different inscriptions dated from Saṃvat 18 to 74. One of them, of the year 50, refers to the erection of a statue of Neminātha.

Year 1892—1893.

11-12. Short description of the Jain temple of Pali, in the province of Marwar.

12. Review on the temple of Mahāvira, at Nadole. It is one of the finest Jain temples. Three inscriptions, dated Saṃvat 1666, recalling its constructions. The temples of Pārśvanātha, at Jhalor, with inscription of Saṃvat 80.

12—14. The Jain temples of the mount Abū :

1. Properly speaking on the mount Abū some ancient temples profusely decorated, and two others—one dedicated to Rīṣabhanātha the other to Pārśvanātha.

2. In the village of Dailwādā : five temples, three of which are modern; of the two others, the most ancient was constructed in Saṃvat 1088 (1032 A. D.) by Vimalaśāh, in honour of Rīṣabha; the last, of marvellous architecture, is the work of the ministers Vastupāla and Tejpāla, who constructed it in Saṃvat 1287 (1231 A. D.) in honour of Neminātha.

14. At Ajārti, in the district of Sirohi, ruins of a temple richly carved dedicated to Mehāvira; inscription of Saṃvat 1185.

16. To the east of Udaypur, on the site of the ancient city of Tāmbāvati, there are two Jain temples, with several short inscription of the 16th century and a beautiful Digaṃbara statue; dated Saṃvat 1031.

17. Group of beautiful Jain temples, magnificently carved, at Katragarh, to the north-east of Nāthdwāra. To the north of the same town, at Kumalgarh, two other ancient temples.

17-18. Two temples of Rāmpur, constructed in 1440 A. D. and dedicated to Pārśvanātha. The greatest of them contains several ancient statues of Pārśvanātha and an important collection of old Jain manuscripts.

18. At Rakhabdeo, to the south of Udaypur, group of temples richly decorated and dedicated to Rīṣabhanātha; a very frequented place of pilgrimage.

18-20. Chitorgarh. A small temple nicely carved, and a group of other temples dating of the 12th century. A grotto, ancient Jain hermitage, with several inscriptions in Jaina Prākrit, of the 14th century. Monument erected in Śaṃvāt 952 in honour of Rīṣabhanātha, with fragmentary inscription. Old temple constructed in Śaṃvāt 811.

21. Near Bijoli, group of four temples. The greatest of them dedicated to Pārśvanātha includes an inscription of Śaṃvāt 1232 which gives a list of Jaina masters of the religious issue of Kundakunda and belonging to the Balātkāra gaṇa and to the Sarasvatī gaṇa. Two other inscriptions are equally interesting : one recalls the construction of the temple of Pārśvanātha in Śaṃvāt 1226; the other gives a long list of masters of the Kharatara sect.

At Dhar, several Musalman monuments have been constructed with materials coming from rich Jaina temples of the 12th century.

Year 1895-1896.

1-2. New excavations of Dr. Fuhrer at Mathura in February and March 1896. Fifteen pedestals of Jaina statues bearing some inscriptions have been brought to light. One of these inscriptions, carved on a statue of Mahāvīra, and dated of Śaṃvāt 299, is of considerable chronological importance.

Year 1896-1897.

6. Ruins of Jaina temples at Bilaspur. To the south of this town, there are relics of a great and magnificent temple, constructed in Śaṃvāt 1319.

Conservation :

Badoh, Dt. Bhilsa. The Jain temple is a group of some 20 different shrines enclosing an oblong court-yard constructed at different times ranging from the 9th to the 12 century.

The Gadarmal Temple, 9th Century; the image of a goddess on the dedicatory block of the shrine doorway; a mother goddess with a child the principal idol; the Gadarmal temple was dedicated to the Mothers; After the original temple had suffered mutilation at the hands of Muhammadan invaders, an attempt was made to repair it; upto the top of the walls of the shrine the original temple has survived, the structure above is a later repair some Jain sculptures are used in these repairs which indicate that the temple was repaired by the Jains.

About 1/4 mile to the N.-W. of the Gadarmal temple stands a Jain temple consisting of 19 cells the images of Tirthankaras in the cells are as follows : -

Pp. 9-10.

1. Unidentified, standing; 2. Mahāvīr seated and Matinātha standing; 3. Ajitanātha (Polished), unidentified height 7'-8" biggest of the standing three (polished). Sambhavanāth (polished); 4. Two images, bigger of the two is 9' tall standing; 5. Sambhavanāth; Rishabhanātha height 9', Ajitanāth all standing; 6. Unidentified, Śāntinātha, Pārśvanātha, unidentified—all standing, Rishabhanātha. unidentified, Two small images—all standing; 7. An empty cell for passage, 8. A large image height 9'; standing; 9. A big image height 11'-3" (this is the principal shrine) standing; 10. Five images, three images—all seated; 11. Rishabhanāth standing, Pārśvanātha seated. A third image seated, outside this cell are two standing images of Tirthankaras; 12. A big image standing; 13. Contains a standing image of Bhujabali with 19 small seated images of Tirthankaras on the back ground and a 20th figure of a goddess with child—all standing; 14. Unidentified—standing; 15. Pārśvanātha seated, two images of Śāntinātha - standing; 16. Unidentified seated; 17. A small image standing; 18. Unidentified—seated; 19. A Chaumukha standing. Two pilgrims record on the door jambs of cells of this temple—one dated v. s. 1134 and the other v. s. 13 (v. s. 1113).

Pp. 10-11.

Udayagiri Dt., Bhilsa—Jain cave No. 20, the inscription on the cave speaks of the installation of an image of Pārśvanātha at the mouth of the cave. The inscription flanks the mouth of the cave on one side and on the other are two rock-cut images of Tirthankaras one of which is that of Pārśva. In the inscription the image of Jina (Jinakritim) is qualified by the adjective spuṣṭa-Vikṣaṭa-kaṭam which Dr. Fleet (Gupta Inscriptions, page 259) rendered by (richly endowed with the expanded hoods of a snake) and an attendant female deity. Of course, the hoods of the snake are present in the rock sculpture referred to above, but the female attendant is not. This however can be very easily accounted for. Because the natural interpretation of the qualifying phrase quoted above is 'mighty and fierce on account of the hoods of a snake'. This description fits in very well with the rock-cut images in question—that the inscription refers to this image rather than (as held by Dr. Fleet to some other loose image which has disappeared now. The style of sculpture, the image is referable to the same period (5th century A. D.) to which the inscription belongs. The word achikarat occurring in the inscription would refer to the 'making or chiselling' of an image (in rock) rather than to the installation of a loose image.

SRINIVAS, T. The Antiquities of Kulpak (JHAS, 1916. Pp. 14-36).

Pp. 15-16. Description of a female deity placed on a pedestal with four miniature pillars, and explanation of certain symbols found therein. The Chakra is one of the sacred emblems of the Buddhists, the Jains and the Hindus. With the Buddhists and the Jains the Chakra is "the wheel of the Law", and with the Hindus, "the wheel of Life". The lion cognizance belongs to Mahāvira, the 24th Tirthankara, but from the diminutive antelopes in addition it can be inferred that the pedestal has reference to Śāntinātha.

Pp. 22-23. An old Jain temple: The *Śikhara*s and the cells of the three principal deities alone belong to the original structure. The chief presiding deity is Rikabdeva or Ādinātha occupying the middle shrine, the other two are Mahāvira and Neminātha. In course of renovation of the temple numerous sculptures were brought to light. Of these the most important are nine images of Tirthankaras. There is also a fine image of Mahāvira, with the little statuettes of the other 23 Tirthankaras arranged as a border.

Pp. 31-32. Discovery of an inscription of the time of Vikramāditya II, (came to the throne in 1076 A. D.) cut on a broken stone, carved at the top with the figures of a Jina and some devotees. It contains a Jain invocation and an imprecatory verse. The present Jain temple is also known as the Mānikya Sūāmi Guḍi among the villagers.

P. 33. The Jain Guḍi has three shrines but here all the three cells are placed in a row facing the east with the principal one in the middle.

The Jain tower has plaster-carved images and other ornaments all round.

YAZDANI, G. The Antiquities of Warangal. (JHAS, 1916, Pp. 37-47).

P. 47. Near the site of the old town of Anamkond there are several minor temples on the hill. One of them has numerous Jain figures carved in the rock and an inscription cut on a square pillar.

MARSHALL, John. Remarks on the monuments of the Dekhan. (JHAS, 1916, Pp. 125-135).

P. 129. Contribution in an almost equal degree of the three great religious sects the Buddhists, the Hindus and the Jains, in the temple and monasteries of Ellora.

Pp. 130-131. Remarks on Jain temples : They are very perfect, very elaborate, very sumptuous, but one and all destitute of creative genius. They are richly decorated, but we are struck with their narrow nerveless design and we gaze unmoved at their composed and icy images. It has always been so with the Jains. They followed the Buddhist at an early date in adopting iconism in their religion, but even at the beginning of the Christian era their sculptures displayed the same nerveless character that they do in mediaeval and later times. It is dangerous to utilize Buddhist works as a basis for determining as grounds of style the age of Jain works, or vice versa.

Pp. 21-22. Plate XIV—Interior of a Jain temple on Mount Abū. The structural style of the Jains was more after the Dravidian Aryans. Classified by FERGUSSON as the Western Hindu style of about the sixth century, a result of long experience and continuous artistic development. Temple of Ādināth on Mount Abū—built by Vimala in 11th century. Carvings of the Dravidian style. The existence of the Śikhara over the Garbhagriha.

P. 24. The structure with high basement, pillared Varendaha with horizontal beams look quite Dravidian and Jainic in the Jain temple of Ranpur in Godwar dist. in Jodhpur.

Vol. II

P. 347. History dawns with Vardhamāna Mahāvīr as the last 'Tirthankara' of the Jains.

P. 348. Jains with non-Brahmanical allegiance. Jains followed more nearly the doctrine of Śāṅkya Philosophy. Their influence over the whole of India. Mahāvīra a moderate religionist. "Jainism less diametrically opposed to the victorious creed of Brāhmanas". RHYS. Jain religion "a faith older than, and was an elder sister of Buddhism similar to it in ethics but different from it in its psychology". Virchand GANDHI.

P. 349. The Jain literature contains an admixture of faith taught in both the Brahmanical and Buddhist cults.

Twentyfour Tirthankara from Rshava to Vardhamāna styled as Jinas or conquerors.

Pārśvanātha the twentythird Tirthankara of Ikshawaku—Solar race born near Beneras—married Prabhāvatt—turned Tati—attains wisdom.

Mahāvira of Solar race of Ikshwaku—preached doctrines in Papapuri in Behar—conversion of several Brahmins to Janinism in Magadha—death in about 572 B. C. Two blessings of Mahāvira (1) the essential universality of the brotherhood of all living beings (2) spiritual independence of man—dependence of soul upon itself for progress.

Digambaras—reference in Buddhist 'Pitakas' as earlier sect to that of Śwetāmbaras.

P. 350. The forty-five 'Āgamas' of Jains were handed down to Tirthankara by word of mouth not by writing—'Jaina Prakrit' the earliest Jain language. Attainment of 'Nirvāṇa' by Mahāvira after twelve years of penance, becomes a teacher then (Jacobi's Jain sūtra). Rejection of 'Supreme soul' by Jains. 'Niravāṇa' a state of beatific rest without rebirth but not annihilation.—Rejection of the authority of Vedas, but having their Pūrvas and Āgamas. Nirgantha Niganthas meaning 'tie less' (Aśoka edicts).

P. 351. Chālukyās having many Jains—Influence of religious conceptions in the Jain architecture. The Jain style with close alliance with Buddhist style. The usual location of temples on the mountain tops.

The Dilwara temple on Mount Abū—a seventh wonder of India—For minute delicacy of carving and beauty of detail it stands almost unrivalled even in the land of patient and lavish labour—FEROUSSEAN.

A. V. T. AYER, Indian Architecture—3 Vols.—Madras, 1926.

Vol. I :

Pp. 20-21. All Indian religions viz. the Buddhist, the Jain, the Śaiva and the Vaiṣṇava—had temples of similar fundamentals in appearance. Jain temple on Mount Abū (Plate XLV)—of 11th century. The structural style of the Jains was more after the Dravidian Aryans, as was their religion, but only modified by sectarian requirements.

Vol. II :

P. 93. The Pāṇḍyas had Jain remains of natural cool caverns with rock-cut beds for them. Tamil works Periapurāṇam and Tirumlayadal Purāṇam mention conversion of Jain Pāṇḍyan kings by Sambandhar. Jain sculptures on the Yanamalaie (Elephant hill) on the north of the city of Madura.

P. 191. There were also Jains among the Pallavas.

P. 208. The Kailasnātha temple (Conjivaram) believed to be once a Jain temple, but absolutely no traces of Jain figures or emblems of any kind left there.

P. 212. Jain temple in Tiruparattikunram two miles from Conjivaram belongs to the period when the Chola power was at its Zenith—Buddha said to have got rid of sin of converting the Hindus to Buddhism at this spot.

P. 240. Hampi—on the bank of the Tungabhadra—of the religious building here the earliest are the groups of Jain temples to the south of Pampapati Swāmi temple—also near the village of Hampi and on the banks of the Tungabhadra all are examples of modified form of the Jain or Chālukyan style of architecture—Inscriptions show their date to be 1385 A. D. During 15th century temples here are of the Dravidian style. Ganigitti temple erected about 1385 A. D. by a Jain General Iruguppa.

P. 242. Two small ruined Jain temples near the Dewankhāna.

Pp. 252-257. The Chālukyan style—expresses forcibly their religious shiftings, combining in it the characteristic features of both the Jain and Hindu elements, originally being Jain. Most of the earlier and finer examples perished during the early Moslem invasion. The family religion of the Chālukyans first Jainism and then Vaishnavism, being tolerant endowed both the Śiva and Vaishṇava temples liberally—temples at Aihole, Paṭṭadkal and Ellora the earliest examples of the Chālukyans. In the planning of their temples the Chālukyas built one or three cells all attached to a central Maṇṭapa this style although adopted by the Hindus evidently indicates their origin in Jainism whose type of temple planning was starshaped or cruciform.

P. 276. The Dīpdāns or Dīpstambhas : typical and originally the Jain style of architecture—Jain mānstambha in Gūruvayankeri Dhuvaja stambha and Dīpstambha in front of Chandranātha Jain temple in Mudabidri.

P. 282. The kings of the Hoysala Dynasty were generally followers of Jainism but were persecuted by the Śaiva kings of the Chola country.

Bitti Deva a Hoysala ruler married Vaishṇava wife and embraced the Vaishṇava faith and became known as Vishnuvardhan (12th century A. D.).

P. 302. The fine chisel work or rather jewellery work found in the temples of Chālukyan style was favourite of the Jain Silpis.

Pp. 348-353. Jainism—non-Brahmanical but less diametrically opposed to the Brahmins—older than Buddhism. Its literature an admixture of Brahminical and Buddhist cult—Tīrthankaras Pārśvanātha (776 B.C.) Mahāvīra (572 B.C.) conversion of several Brahmins in Magadha, preached Universality of the brotherhood of all living beings and the spiritual independence of man and the soul depends upon itself for its progress—Digambaras and Śvetāmbaras. Posterity of Niganthas—their statue of Jina stark naked—Śvetāmbaras later—Śrāvakas Jain laity—Jaina Prākṛit, their language—the theory of 'Syād-Vāda'. Salvation through penance but according to Buddhists penance not—the path to Nirvāṇa. God not independent entity above the soul. Belief in existence of angels and demons. Jain moral code—avoiding injury to life, observing truth, honesty, chastity and abstinence from worldly desires, liberality, gentleness, pity, penance, restraining the strength of the mind, tongue and person. Nirvāṇa a state beautiful rest without rebirth, but not annihilation—deny authority of the Vedas—Asoka's edicts mention them as Nigantha. Jains copied the structures of the early Cholas and Dravidians—their architecture influenced by their religious conceptions.

Jain temples : consisted normally of a square cell with a curvilinear stepped spire over it and a colonnaded portico in front, usually cruciform in plan and surmounted at the top by a pointed dome resting on eight columns, with the pracket capitals and the raking struts. The cell containing the statue of one of the twenty-four Jinas—walls ornamented with symbolical sculptures—their temples usually located on mountain tops and valleys—their environment giving additional beauty.

Dilwara temple one of the seven wonders of India—fully described (Plate I and Plate III P. 362), built of white marble between 1197 A. D.—1247 A. D.

Difference of styles of southern and northern temples—Śrāvaka Belgoḷa temples being Dravidian and early Chola in plan and Chālukyan ornamentation; Sonagarh and Muktagiri temples Buddhist in style with traces of saracenic influence. Conversion of Jain temples to Moslem mosques. Jain Bastis—in Guzerat and Mysore

P. 361. Jainism based upon Patanjali's school of thought; Nikāya represents the Universe as emanating from nine primary substances.

P. 362. The Jains substituted Nirvāṇa for Brahmin Moksha but kept, 'tapas', transmigration and rejected the Vedic law and god, keeping only soul and body.

P. 364. Mysore and Kanchi centres of Jain influence—defeat of Buddhists by Akalāṅka in Kanchi in 788 A. D.

P. 399. Cave-digging patronized by Jains—the Girnar Mahātmyam gives great antiquity to Girnar (in Kathiawar) and its caves; a retailer of 'fables falsifying all dates'.

P. 413. Ellora caves reflect the varying character in development of the successive cave temples Buddhist, Jain and Brahmanical.

P. 429. Stambhas (Plate 35) (Mānastambha at Śravaṇa Belgōla)—Plate 36 (Jain tower at Chitor)—Lats common amongst the Jains as 'dip-dans' or lamp-bearing pillars and also to carry figures of Jinas.

Pp. 480-481. Kutub-Minār of Delhi (1196 to 1235 A. D.)

The series of Jain pillars—seen in the colonnades and the domical roofing round about the Kutub-minār were originally of Jain temples; the Jain figures on the pillars mutilated being offensive to the Moslem sentiment. Tughlak Shah buildings (14th century)—domes in these mosques follow Jains method of forming an octagonal basement over the pillar capitals—the rectangular pillars evolved from the square piers of the 'Jains'.

COUSENS, H. The Architectural Antiquities of Western India, London, 1926.

P. 12. Ter—30 miles east of Barsi (Nizam's Dominions)—a place of importance first with Buddhists and then with the Hindus and Jains—remains of heavy brick foundations.

P. 15. Mention of a colossal seated image of a Jina in the temple at Muguti—nothing to show which Tirthankara it is intended to represent—image of Ambādevī or Ambāji lying in the passage.

P. 16. Mention of a small seated Śwetāmbara Jina in the two storied temple on the hill on which stands Meguti temple.

P. 20 Jain temple of Meguti—representation of Kartirikeva in the proch ceiling. In front of the temple Kanarese inscription bearing records of the grant of oil to the priest by king Vijayāditya in 708 A. D.

P. 25. Jain temple at paṭṭadakal, or paṭṭanda—kisuvalal of old in Badami district—fine makaras and life-sized elephants flanking the shrine doorways.

Pp. 27-29. Jain temple at Lakkundi, Dharwar districts—structure discussed.

Frequency of the image of Gaja Lakshmi found in the outer doorways of Jain temples in the Chālukyan districts—Lakshmi a favourite of Jains and Brahmins in these districts—mention of the presidency of Jaina images on the dedicatory block over the shrine door of a Jain temple.

P. 33. Mention of the existence of Chaumukhas in Jain temples.

P. 40. Jain temple at Anhillavāḍa—Pāttan reputed image of Wanraj the founder of Pāttan within. Mention of fine marble works on Jain temples.

"The Bagh caves in the Gwalior State" with text by Sir John MARSHAL, M. B. GARDE, Dr. J. Pli-VOGEL, E. B. HARVEL, Dr. J. H. COUSINS—London, 1927.

P. 3. Of the whole vast galaxy of monuments that Antiquity has bequeathed to India, none are more remarkable or more interesting to the archaeologist than her rock-hewn shrines and monasteries. Starting in the 3rd century B. C. and extending down to the 15th century A. D., they unfold for us the story of Indian architecture and art during those sixteen hundred years with a wealth of deal with more perishable buildings could never have preserved. Some are the work of the Buddhists, others of the Brahmins and others of the Jains. Most are hollowed out, like caves, from the sides of cliffs and exhibit only the internal features of the structural prototypes from which they were copied, a few, however, like the Kailas at Ellora, are hewn entire from the rock and are thus complete replicas of free standing edifices finished in very particular both without and within.

ARAVAMUTHAN, T. G. Some Survivals of the Harappa Culture—Bombay, 1942.

Pl. fn. Among the bequests of the religion of the culture, are amongst others a prototype of Rṣabha the Jain Tirthankara (see Chahda, in Modern Review, Aug. 1932 : 159-60.)

Pp. 12 and 16. Sculpture of Geja-Lakshmi at Udayagiri (Fig. 10) of about the 2nd and the 1st century B. C.—a fine panel and an excellent illustration of cult object between adorants. The goddess Śrī or Lakshmi stands as the central figure in a composition in which lotus buds and blossoms, elephants raising well-filled vessels with their trunks and emptying them on the goddess, and birds picking at lotus buds, are presented in pairs but disposed symmetrically on either side of the goddess.

P. 30. In Jain art as in the Buddhist, the various cults were often represented in conformity with the formula cult object between adorants.

P. 51. Circle is a substitute for the lotus or the wheel and either of them may represent Brahman, the Buddha, the Jina—in a piece of Jain sculpture (Fig. 16 : 13) four nandipadas surrounded a circle in which is depicted the Jina.

P. 115. Sarengarh on the bank of a small river Kumari on the borders adjoining the Dists. of Midnapur and Manbhum. The Shrines and dieties discovered there show a curious mixture of Jaina and Hindu worship of 10th century A. D. Figure of Pārśvanātha standing with the figures of 24 Tirthankaras on the back ground.

Pp 121-127. Jaina remains at Rājgir—mention of Jaina sculptures preserved in modern Jain temple on the hills around old Rājagriha, Rājagriha sacred place to Jains, Buddhists and Brahmanists. Munisuvrata Jina born and attained perfect knowledge at Rājagriha 11 *Gaṇadhara*s meaning disciples of Mahāvira died at Rājagriha.

Guṇaśīla—Mahāvira's residence out side Rājagriha. Chaitya according to Jains means a park with a tree corroborated by Hemachandra in his Trishasṭīśalākāpurushacharita. Modern Gunava 11 miles to the S. of Rājgir is recognised as old Guṇaśīla Chaitya referred to in the Jain classical work viz. Bhagavati Sūtra and Sthaviravalicharita of Hemachandra.

Uttarapurāṇa—A Digambara work by Gunabhadra of 9th century A. D. mentions Vipula Hill at Rājgir as the permanent Residence of Mahāvira.

Contradictory statements regarding Guṇaśīla—fully discussed. Vaibhāra hill—mentioned as Mahāvira's residence at Rājagriha referred to in the Jaina texts (Trishasṭīśalākāpurushacharita of Hemachandra, X, 10, 145.)

Mention of Buddha coming across a number of Niganthas at Black rock on the slopes of Mt. Isiguli (Rishigiri) referred to in Cula-Dukka-Khandha-Sutta of Majjhima Nikāya (14).

Mention of Yuanchwang coming across many Digambara Jains on Vipula mountain in 7th century A. D.

Preservation of ancient monuments a distinctive feature of the Jains—mention of four Jina images found at Rājgir in the modern temple on Vaibhāra hill. Traditional belief of the Śvetāmbara Jains holding Samprati and his teacher Suhasin as the builder of the temples of the Jinas referred to by Hemachandra.

Cave dwellings of Khaṇḍagiri and Udayagiri Jaina remains of Sunga period 1st century B. C.—fully described. Former of later date. The friezes and basreliefs include scenes of worship conspicuous by the absence of Jina, sacred tree, svastika and Nandya-avarta take place of the image. Seated Jina on the back wall of the Gaṇeśa Gumphā Udayagiri and unfinished standing Jina on the back wall of the Ananta Gumphā are mediaeval works. Jainas like Buddhists did not worship Jinas upto 1st century B. C.

Mention of Jina images with a Brāhmi inscription. Collected from Mathura seated in dhyāna of pre-Kushān period i. e. Śaka Parthian (i. e. on the beginning of Christian era) now preserved in Indian Museum. All inscribed free Jina images of early Mathura group bear votive inscriptions dated in Kushāna era 2nd century A.D. Earliest in the group a standing Jina in Kāyotsarga or dedication of the body. 4 seated Jina images—(1) dated 12 and (2) dated 48 in the region of Huvishka. The 3rd in the year 80 in the reign of Vāsudeva and the 4th in 84 year of the same king.

Jaina Kushān images more or less stiff and lack animation.

Black Basalt image of Neminātha (31"×27") with an inscription below, on the wall of Vaibhāra temple—one of earliest images of Gupta period. Three standing images of Tirthankaras of Gupta period. The artistic side of these images does not lack in animation and grace like Kushān image.

Jina image in the proximity of the above shrine with an inscription in nailheaded characters current in N. India from 7th to 9th century—reading 'pious gift of Vasantanandin'—image of 8th century belonging to Rishabhā (Plate LVI).

Seated image of Pārśvanātha (26½" × 15") (Plate LVI) installed in modern Jain temple on Udayagiri hill with an inscription—9th century A. D. The seven headed Nāga the cognizance of Pārśva. Coiling round the Jina seated on the lotus throne conveys a splendid decorative effect. Image of Vardhamāna. (Plate LVII) in the modern Jain temple at Rājgir and of Rishabha (Plate LVII-b) in the Śvetāmbara temple of later mediaeval sculpture.

Image of Munisuvrta (Plate LVII Fig. c) in the Śvetāmbara temple.

Image of Rishabha in the Sonāgiri temple (Plate LVII fig. d). Inscription in Nagari of the former is mutilated and that of the latter dated v. s. 1504. 15th century Jain images of Rājgir and other Jain centres lifeless, soulless and crude.

P. 138. Kanarese inscription in Cave No. 4, Badami (one next to Varshgava cave) records the death of a Jain lady Akkiyakka, wife of Jinavarama and mother of Kāla deva. Probable date 12th century A. D.

P. 167. Discovery of a bronz. Jain image in the village of Chahardi Taluka Chopda, East Khandesh in 1924-25. Image belongs to Neminātha—standing in the centre with miniature figures of the other twenty-three Jinas arranged in horizontal rows above and on either side of the centre figure, attended by Yakshi or Śāsanadevi, Āmbikā or Kushmāṇḍinī and by a male figure corresponding to the Yakshi on the opposite or proper right side represents 'Gomedha'.

Pp. 176-182. Chap. The Śvetāmbara and the Digambara images of the Jinas. The rise of Digambara sect narrated in Avassakanijjuttī by Bhadrabāhu, Pravachana parikshā or Kupakshakanśikasahasrakṛtana by Dharmasāgara, in the commentary on Kālpasūtra by Samayasūndaropādhyāya. Agreement of these authorities in holding Gotika or Digambara order of Jains to have been started in 609 years after the Nirvāna of Mahāvīra, i.e. in 82 A. D. by Śivabhrūti at Rathavīrapura. Devasena a Digambara in his Darśana āra (A. D. 933) states the Śvetāmbaras order to have been started by Jinachandra at Valabhi in Saurashtra (Kathiawar) 136 years after the death of king Vikrama i.e. 79 A. D.

Codification of Jain canons in the council of Pātaliputra of the Jains to 12 Aṅgas in the year 170 after the death of Mahāvīra.

The list of Sthāviras who succeeded Mahāvira is given in Theravali section of the Kalpasūtra of Bhadrabāhu and that of earliest Digambara list in Guṇabhadra's Uttarapurāṇa B. K. 76 (516-525). The following is the list :

Kalpasūtra—

- | | |
|-------------------|----------------|
| 1. Mahāvira | 1. Mahāvira |
| 2. Sudharaman | 2. Sudharaman |
| 3. Jambu | 3. Jambu |
| 4. Prabhava | 4. Nandimuni |
| 5. Sayyambhava | 5. Namdimitra |
| 6. Yasōbhadra | 6. Aparajita |
| 7. Sambhutavijaya | 7. Bhadrabāhu. |
| 8. Bhadrabāhu | 8. Govardhana |
| | 9. Bhadrabāhu. |

Above classification proves the separation of Jainas after the death of Jambu—the last Kevalin. Bhadrabāhu in the above list not the same identical personage. The points of dissensions of the schools are :

1. Salvation of Women.
2. Taking of food by a Kevalin and his liability to fall ill.
3. Episode relating to the birth of Mahāvira.
4. Salvation of those who put on emblems on non-Jina sects.
5. Eating clean food wherever available.

Bhadrabāhu charita of Ratnanandin, a late Digambara work refers to the growth of schism—mention of famine at Malva in the above book and migration of Jain monks to the south. The story of Chandrelekā and her husband Prajapāla of Valabhi regarding the entertainment of the Śvetāmbara Jains fully narrated.

Discovery of Ardhaphālaka in the Kankāli Tila at Muttra by FUBER in 1890-91. Probable date 95 (?). Figure of a naked ascetic holding up a rajoḥaraṇa in the right hand—an inscription to the right of the head of the ascetic gives his name as Kaṇa samana, Kṛishna, the ascetic.

The Jain Mathura images of the Kushan emperors Kanishka, Huvishka and Vāsudeva roughly falling within 82-176 A. D. Standing images—all naked, seated images having hands touching abdomen do not show male organ. All the inscriptions on the images prove the Śvetāmbaras belonging to gaṇas, Sukhas and kulas.

Two Jain images from Kankālī Tilā at Mathura now in Lucknow Provincial museum No. J 143. J. 145. The former of Pārsvanātha with an inscription mentioning its erection by Śrīdeva in S. 1038 at the instance of Śvetāmbaras. Inscription in the latter mentions its erection by Śrīdeva at the instance of Śvetāmbaras of Mathura S. 1134.

Two other types of seated Jina images which do not show their male organs of the later mediaeval period (1) in one of the types space is left between the abdomen and the hands rendering the carving of male organ possible and in the other though the thighs or legs bear no mark of drapery. The anchalikā or the border of the loin cloth is engraved on the lotus throne.

The story of the differentiation of Śvetāmbara and Digambara Jain images narrated in Ratnamandiraganin's Upadeśataranginī.

The exhibition of the male organ a distinctive feature of Digambara images while the Śvetāmbaras engrave anchalikā or the border of the cloth.

Repetition of the disputes over Girnar hill re. the differentiation of the images is repeated in Kupakshakaushikasahasrakirāṇa or Pravachanaparīkṣā written by Dharmasāgara in 1629 Ś.

Engraving the pallava or the border of the loin cloth below the feet of the images by Srisaṅgha (the Śvetāmbaras) is mark of their images in order to avoid disputes with Digambaras. No difference of images before the dispute.

D. R. B. Archaeological Progress (Miscellanea) (Ind. Ant. Vol. LVIII—1929—Bombay)

P. 39. Excavations at Pahārpur in the Rājshahi District, Bengal; a copper-plate inscription, dated 159 G. E. (477-8 A. D.) ; Records grant of land by a Brahman Nātha and his wife Rāmi for the maintenance of the worship of the Arhats at the Vihāra presided over by the Nirgrantha ascetics, Guhanandan and his successors, at the village of Vaṭa-Gohali. Originally this temple belonged to the Jaina community; about the middle of the 6th century A. D. it seems to have been occupied by the Brahmanists (from c. 550 to 650 A. D.); about the beginning of the 8th century the temple came into the charge of Buddhist monks during the time of King Dharmapāla. The structure of the temple. This is the first example found in India of this type of structure and of the 5th century. The excavation of this temple leaves no doubt as to the Indocolonial art and architecture being derived from India.

C. R. KRISHNAMA CHARLU. The Kannada descriptions of Kopbal (Hyderabad Archaeological Series No. 12), Calcutta, 1935.

Pp. 1—13. The village of Kopbal (locally called Koppala) situated on the left bank of the stream Hirehall an important tributary of the river Tungabhadra. Earliest mention of this great Jaina sanctuary (Kopanapura) in the 7th century (Karn. Hist. Review, Vol. II, P. 48) record of the Western Chālukya king Vijayāditya (A. D. 696-733). An Epigraph of Śaka 1032 (A. D. 1110) of the time of Hoysala king Vishnuvardhana, states that through the benefactions of—the Jaina Gangana—Dandānatha, a general of the king, the province of Gangavadi became famous like Kopana. His elder brother Baṃṇa Chamupa, built many Jain temples at the Ādi-tīrtha Kopana. Hulla-Senapati, the chief Minister of the Hoysala king Narasiṃha, son of Vishnuvardhana granted gold for the benefit of the Chaturvimsati—Janamuni-savigha at Kopana-Mahātīrtha. (Ep. Carn. Vol. II—Revised Edi. Kan. Texts No. 127, 384, 345). In a record of about A. D. 1283 engraved on the pedestal of the Chaturvimsati-Tīrthankara image in the Chandranātha-basti of the village it is mentioned as Kapana-tīrtha. (My. Ar. Rep. 1916).

Kopana was not only a great nagara and place of literary celebrity in the 9th century but also it was reputed as a great Jaina-tīrtha, Ādi-tīrtha (original tīrtha).

Inscriptions : Texts and Translations : Fully given : 1. Engraved on the Chandrabandi Rock and refers to the tomb (nisidhi) of Gurugala Bhandappa, the disciple of Chamdrasadeva of Kopana. (13th century A. D.).

2. Engraved on the Chandrabandi Rock ; dated Śaka 803 (A. D. 881) ; states that Svanandi-Bhatara, the disciple of Edachattugada-Bhatara, belonging to the Kundakunda line, completed here the vow of renunciation (sanyāsa).

4. Do. Records erection of the Jaina tomb (nisidhi) of Paṭṭanasvāmi Pāyakaṇṇa lay disciple of ... of Bhaṭāra of the Senagana of the Mūla-sagha; 13th century.

5. Engraved below the canopy-shaped boulder to the west of the Palkigundu. Records that Vardhamānadeva disciple of Devendrakīrti—Bhaṭāraka had the image of Chhaya—Chandranāthasvāmin carved here (the image is there); 18th century A. D.

Engraved on the Palkigundu hill in close proximity to the Asokan Inscription. States that Chāvayya had the foot prints of Jaṭasinganandi Ācārya carved here (Foot print still there); 18th century.

6. Engraved on the roof-rock of a cave to the south of the Palkigundu boulder. Belongs to the reign of (the Western Chalukya King Vikrmāditya, V) A. D. 1009-1017). Records that saint Simhanandi tammadegal observed here the vow of sanyāsa (ṅgiṇimaraṇa); his disciples Simhanandi-anna, Matisāgara-Anṇa, Naralo Kamitra and Brahmachari-Anṇa attended upon him. He was succeeded by Kalyāṇ-Kṛiti; after him Ravichandra chārya; he was followed in order, by Gunasāgra—Munipati, Gunachandra—Munindra, Abhaynandi and Māghanandi. Kalyāṇakṛiti built the Jinendra-chaitya at Bichchukundi.

9. Engraved on the pedestal of a Jaina image found at Kopbal but now deposited in Salar Jang's palace at Surūr Nagar, Hyderabad (see frontispices). Records that Bopanna and his wife who was the lay disciple of rāya-rājaguru, Mandalachārya Māghanandi—Siddhānta—Chakravarti, had the image of the 24th Tīrthankaras made and presented it to the beṣadi constructed by Madana-Ḍaṇḍanāyaka of the Desiya-gana of the Mūla-sangha. (see Arch. Report of Mysore, 1916, P. 83 and Ind. Vol. XXXII. Pl. IV).

10. Engraved on the pedestal of another Jaina image (now in Salar Jang's Collection). Records that this image of the Pancha-Paramēṣṭhins made by Devanna, the son of Āchannaya who was the Kulagiri-senabone of Erambarge, the capital city, and who was the lay-disciple of Madhavachandra Bhaṭṭāraka of the Ingatēvara branch or school of the Pustaka-gachchha belonging to the Desiya-gana of the Mūla-sangha. Pancha-Paramēṣṭhins described.

P. 47. Rājgir—Jain shrines on Vaibhār Hill—contains several small stone Jain images of the Digambara sect (Plate XII-c)—one sculpture depicts a seated Tirthankara with attendants on one side, and a female figure with a Tirthankara on its top, seated on the back of a tiger, on the other.

Pp. 51-54. Excavations at Mahāsthān—Govinda Bhita at Mahāsthān in the Bogra Dist., Bengal—a Plaque represents a woman sleeping on a couch, her right hand extended and touching a bull descending from the skies (Plate XV-a)—the scene portraying the dream of Marudevi, the mother of the first Tirthankara, Rishabhadeva, who is said to have noticed a bull descending from the skies and entering her mouth.

Pp. 62-66. The Antiquity of Korkai—at Korkai was formed the first settlement of civilized men in Tinnevely and it was there that the name of Tāmraparṇi by which the river became known was first given to it; in the time of Alexander, the island was known as Taprobane; it was the capital of the Pāṇḍyas from about 600 B. C. The images of 'Buddha' that CALDWELL refers to (History of Tinevelly, 1881) as being seen here are really Jain figures.

Pp. 88, 89, 90. Sohagpur (Rewa state)—in the Kothi of the local Thakur was found a Jain image with a short votive inscription which reads: Vapiya putratasya Dhanadattasya Kritile, i. e. (this is) the work of Dhandatta, the son of Vapiyas. The numerous Jain images found built into the walls of the Kothi show that there must have been once a splendid Jain temple in the neighbourhood Lakhwaria, 2 miles from Arjhuḷā, a village situated at a distance of 20 miles from Shadol and 7 miles from the Burhar Railway station, here are rock-cut caves in front of the caves in the north is the ruins of a temple under a tree in the vicinity are placed a few Jain images and bas-reliefs, originally belonging to this temple; in one cave is a small standing figure of a Tirthankara; below the hill are a few more broken Jain images. The site seems to have been a fairly big Jain establishment and the cells were probably used by Jain monks as residence. Singpur, a village 8 miles to the south-east of Shadol. In one of the walls of Panch Maṭh temple here the figure of a Jain goddess with a badly damaged votive inscription in Nagari is found; there is a tank in the vicinity on the bank of which are placed four big images of Tirthankaras, partly immersed in water. At Mahoba on the Katesyvara hill situated on the southern side of the town near the temple of Chandika, there are several figure of Tirthankaras and other images carved on the rocks. On these rocks are five Jain votive inscriptions, three of which are dated. The earliest is dated Samvat 1235 and mentions Saiddhamita Gunabhadra. The other two bear one and the same date viz., Samvat 1240 Māghasudi 13 Śukrē (Friday, 27th January, A. D. 1184).

P. 92. Provincial Museum at Lucknow—a large number of Jaina statues with inscriptions on their pedestals—mention dates, names of donors and Jaina teachers and places, one of these on a marble frieze containing a sitting lion on each side records that the image of Śānti (Nātha) was caused to be made by the merchants Pahila and Jiju; mentions Paṇḍitācārya Vāsavachandra; to the image was set up by Kirtīdhara in Samvat 1132 in the reign of Vijayapāla. The Vijaya-dhirāya of the Bayānā Jaina inscription of V. 1100 has been identified with this Vijayapāla. The same Pandit Vāsavachandra is also mentioned in another inscription found on the pedestal of two standing Jaina images now preserved in the same Museum—another record found on the pedestal of an image of Sumatinātha, the 20th Tirthankara, is dated Samvat 1210, Jyeshtha-sudi 3, in the reign of Govinda Chandradeva (of the Gāhaḍavāla dynasty of Kanauj) records the establishment of the image by Durlabha-chandra, the son of Sādhu Śōna of the Vāstavya family and by Sādhu Jāhala.

P. 97. Idar State—At Vadali, 7 miles north of Idar, there in the Śāntinātha temple engraved on a pedestal is an inscription dated Samvat 1275 Varshe Vaiśākha-sudi 4, Sukti = 19th April, A.D. 1219, Friday, the year being Kārtikādi), mentions the following Jaina teachers: In the Chandra-kula Vardhamānasūri, in his line Devasūri, Hemasūri, Yasaschandra-sūri, Munichandra and Kamala Prabhasūri. It also records that the image of Śāntinātha was established Vāṭapalli (Vadali) by the Śrisangha and was consecrated by Sāmasūri.

Pp. 97-98. Bhiloda, about 23 miles from Himatanagar (Idar State), has a Jaina temple with a Kirtti-stambha attached to it. The temple contains a number of images of Jaina Tirthankaras with votive inscriptions engraved on the pedestals. On a stone built into the Kirtti-stambha there is an inscription of Samvat 1666 (A. D. 1609) which mentions the Jaina teacher Vādibhishana belonging to the Mūla-sangha, Sarvatigachchua, Balātkāra-gana and Kundakundā-chāryānava. The name Bhiloda is also found in the second line of the inscription.

P. 107. On a hillock called Anḍimalai at Salavandipuram in the South Arcot district are found groups of rocky beds called Paṇḍavar-ṇaḍukkai sheltered by overhanging rocks, some of which contain figures of Jaina Tirthankara cut in relief on their sides.

P. 122. The earliest record from the Sirohi State as found on the pedestal of one of the two standing Jaina images at Pandwara, dated Samvat 744 (A. D. 687)—mentions that Drōṇōvaka Yaśodeva had this beautiful pair of images made by the architect Śivanāga, it is the oldest Jaina inscription found in Rajputana till now. The second is also engraved on the pedestal of an image of Mahāvira at Varkānā. It is dated the 6th day of the bright half of Āshāḍha, Samvat 1024 (= 16th June A.D. 967) and records that during the reign of Krishnarāja this image was set up by one Vardhamāna of the Veshtika family, the architect being Narāditya.

Pp. 154-55. In the Jain Basti at Lakkundi in the Dharwar district are placed a standing image of Brahma in the round (Plate XXXVLL-a) and a seated image of Padmāvatī (Plate XXXVII-b). According to Hemachandra's Abhidhāna Chintāmaṇi I, 42 Brahma is the name of a yakṣa who acts as a guardian to the church of the tenth Tirthankara Śītaḷa. The Brahmeśvara and Brahmayaṣṭha figures illustrated by BURGESS in his article on Digambara Jaina Iconography (Ind. Ant. Vol. XXXII, 1903, Pp. 459-64 and Pls. II and IV) depict the former with four heads and eight arms—six holding symbols and with the lotus-bud for a cognizance and the latter. Though the special attendant of Śītaḷa the tenth Jina is also represented separately as mounted on horse back, with four heads, holding whip, sword and shield. But this sculpture has all the attributes of the Brahmanical God—many of the Brahminical deities are included in the Jaina pantheon may explain the presence of the above image in the Jaina temple. In the Jaina temple at Taundi near Nipani in the Belgaum district of the Bombay presidency the image of Brahma is being worshipped under the popular name of Bharamappā.

The image of Padmāvatī—Digambara Jaina Yakṣiṇī of the 23rd Jina Pārśva-nātha—seated in līlāsana is 3 ft. 8 in. high and 2 ft. 10 in. broad, has 4 hands : the upper right holds the aṅkuśa, the lower right is in the Varada pose; the upper left holds a pāṭa and the lower left a conical (citrus) fruit, her crown shows a dhyaṇi figure in front, the crown is shaded by a fine-hooded cobra. The cock is her vāhana. The following stotra copied from a manuscript in the Jaina Bhandar at Zira, Dist Ferozpur speaks of her fierce character, profuse ornamentation and great importance.

Taking into account the various references about Gomateśvara in inscriptions, etc., it is found that it is reasonable to believe that Gommatā was the name of Camuṇḍarāya. The term gommatā meaning handsome, fair, etc., is quite current in Marathi as well as in Kannada. In conclusion, the view that Gommatā is derived from Manmatha is refuted in details, DIKSHITAR, V. R. Ramchandra. Origin and early history of Caityas—(Ind. Hist. Qu. Vol. xiv. No. 3, Calcutta, 1938).

P. 448. From that of the shrine the application of Caitya was extended to a bimba or dūtī in the shrine. We hear of this more in the Buddhist and Jain books (Pampa, Ādi Purāṇam, x. St. 241). The Buddhists and Jain found that the masses of the land looked upon these as sacred alters and venerated them highly; they therefore, thought to venture a conjecture, better to give the old name to their sanctuaries instead of inventing a new one. Hence the Caitya was adopted as the name of their sacred shrines, whether they contained the images of the Buddha or Jina or their relics.

P. 83. Sirivaccha (Pāli) or Śrīvatsa (Sanskrit) symbol occurs in pre-Maurayan terracottas and can be traced even in seals from Mohenjo-daro and is thus one of the earliest of Indian symbols. P. 36. Jain temples at Śatruñjaya and Pālitana (Guzarat) The application of the Nagara type in the Jaina temple cities, is variegated by the use of domes, of which the pleasant semi-circular silhouettes offer very pleasing contrasts.

A peculiar feature of this type of Jain temples is colonnaded group of minor shrines spread over the four sides of the courtyard at the centre of which stands the main shrine. Chaumukha or the four-faced form of temples chiefly used for the four-faced Jaina images—each image being seen from each of the cardinal points.

P. 58. Rock-cut shrines and caves of southern India the earliest forms are furnished by a primitive type of Rock-hewn caves with simple stone beds, some of which carry Brahmi-inscription are supposed to have been excavated for Jain monks and are properly known as "the beds of the Pāṇḍavas".

V. Venkatasubha AYYAR. Rock-cut caves in the Pāṇḍya country. (Proc. Ind. Hist. Cong 9th Session), Allahabad, 1946.

Pp. 113-14. Distinction between a cavern and a cave—a cavern a natural hollow formed by the disposition of boulders of hills, while a cave is the creation of art. Sometimes caverns were also improved by art by introducing beds, driplines, sculptures etc. Sanskrit and Tamil literatures do not make any distinction between them. In Sanskrit they are known as darigriha, Śilāveśma, Kandara-griha, toyana (Leṇa in Prākṛit) and guhā, and in Tamil as pali and guhāi. Tamil inscriptions describe a cave as tali excavated in a hill, an excavated temple (Kudaivitta Srikoyil), or, merely, stone temple (Karrali).

P. 114. Three classes of caves according to the sects—Buddhists, Brahmanical and Jainā; earliest known examples dating from about the 3rd century B.C. are Buddhist; next come Brahmanic caves ranging from about the 4th century to about the 8th century A.D. and the Jainā caves which are later extending to about the middle of the 15th century A.D. (Buddhist cave temples)—BURGESS: Vol. VI, P. 2).

In India caves were used as residence for monks and as places of worship in which latter category they also sometimes served as art galleries; the so called Queen's cave and that of Ganeśa at Udayagiri were used as dramatic halls (Ind. Ant. Vol. 34, P. 199).

P. 115. Excavation of rock-cut caves first introduced into South India about the first quarter of the 7th century A.D. by Pallava king Mahendravarman I. No caves in South India before the 7th century A.D.*

Pp. 115-16. Rock-cut caves are sometimes found side by side with caverns known as Amanpali (i.e., Jainā caves resort, as at Tirupparankunram, Viraśikhāmaṇi, Kuṇṇakuḍi, Trichinopoly, Sittannāvai etc. Besides beds and inscriptions, these caverns have drip—lines, on their brows to prevent rain water from getting inside, thus indicating their occupation by recluses, evidently of the Jainā sect. The Pallava king Mahendravarman I, was first a Jainā and was converted to the cult of the Linga by the Śaiva teacher Tirunavukkarasar.

P. 116. The rise of Śaivism found an echo in the Pāṇḍya country which was the nucleus of Jainism prior to 7th century A.D. just like the Pallava monarch [Mahendravarman I], the Pāṇḍya king Niṇṇaśir Neḍumāraṇ (8th century A.D.) apostitised to Śaivism from Jainism at the instance of the saint Tirunānasabandar. Caverns in South India may be associated with Jainism and rock-cut caves with Hinduism.

*P. 115. n. 2. The rock-cut caves of Malabar are dated much earlier and supposed to represent the Vedic age.

 This saint is best known as the opponent of Jainism—In the court of the Pāṇḍyan ruler of Madura; he is given the title Paramanda Kolari i. e. lion to the enemy faiths and Aruhasani i. e., Thunder-bolt to the arhats).

P. 117. Anaimalai is referred to in the Tewram by saint Tirunanasambandar as a stronghold of the Jainas and unstiges of this faith are even now found on a rock overhanging a cavern closely. A number of Jain figures on sculptures on the rock; one of these can be identified with the Jain teacher Ajjanandi* from a table below it. This cavern must have been occupied by the Jains prior to A. D. 770.

P. 119. At Sittannāvāsai in the Pudukkottai State which was included in the Pāṇḍya country in the 9th century A. D. there is a rock-cut temple assigned to the time of the Pallava king Mahendravarman I, on account of its similarity and proximity to the rock-cut cave so far known in the Tamil country dedicated to the Jain faith and its patron might have been a Pāṇḍya king, not necessarily a Pallava king as has hitherto been supposed. The renovations and additions effected to this cave is noticed in an inscription (No. 368 of 1904) found in it of time of the Pāṇḍya king Śrīvallabha with the title "Avanipaśekharaṇ" who may be identified with the king of the name and the predecessor of Varagunavarman of accession 862 A. D.

P. 120. Not far away from the unfinished rock-cut temple at Kalugumalai in the Ramanad district, are sculptured on the rock, figures of Tirthankaras, over a hundred in number, with labels in old Vaṭṭeluttu Characters explaining their identity. Considering the existence of these images in the vicinity and the absence of any linga in the central shrine, a Jain origin is ascribed to the rock-cut temple. But the images of Dakṣiṇāmūrti, Umāmaheśvara, Viṣṇu, bulls, etc. found on the vimāna prove that the cave is Hindu and not Jain.

P. 121. The Śaiva Nayanmars and Vaishṇava Alvars were moving from place to place (in the Pallava and Pāṇḍya territories) preaching Hinduism among the masses and condemning Jainism.

The natural caverns in the hills, with drip-ledges, beds and inscriptions, are the earliest monuments extant. These religious resorts were mostly associated with the Jaina ascetics.

Pp. 11-12. The earliest stratum of Tamil literature shows the influence of the growing religions of the North, and the date of this active penetration of Brahmanical, Buddhist and Jaina religions into the South may be placed in the last three centuries before Christ. We have Jaina caverns of this date in the Tamil country.

S. PARANAVITANA. Stūpa in Ceylon (Memoirs of the Arch. Svi. of Ceylon, Vol. V.) Colombo, 1946.

P. 2. Jainism, a religion founded by an older contemporary of the Buddha, had, in early times, its own stūpas which, from an architectural point of view, did not differ much from the Buddhist stūpas of the same age. Actual remains of pre-Buddhists stūpas have been found at some places in North India; both the Buddhists and the Jainas adopted the stūpa from earlier cults.

P. 7. The reign of Vaṭṭagāmaṇi Abhaya (circa. 44—17 B. C.) is a memorable one for the development of stūpa building in Ceylon. Shortly after coming to the throne, this monarch lost his kingdom to some invaders from South India; and, while he was flying before his victorious enemies, he was insulted by a Jain ascetic who lived in a monastery near the north gate of the city. After about 15 years spent in exile, Vaṭṭagāmaṇi succeeded in regaining his throne and remembering the slight offered to him by the Jain ascetic, demolished the latter's hermitage and founded a Buddhist Bihāra to which was given the name of Abhayagiri. The centre of this foundation which, in later times, was inclined towards heterodox doctrines, was, as usual, a great stūpa. The stūpa of the Abhayagiri-bihāra, now erroneously called the Jetevana (Plate II, b, Abhayagiri Dagoba, Anuradhapur), The Abhayagiri, in the estimation of the modern Buddhists, has no sanctity. No mention is made of any particular relic enshrined in this stūpa.

A. V. NAIK—Structural Architecture of the Deccan. (N. I. A. Vol. IX,—1947, Bombay).

P. 302. The Jain temples Group (H).

Remains of the Jain structural temples widely scattered over the Deccan have an amazing simplicity which, though harmonious with their puritanic creed, offers a remarkable contrast to the rich ornamentation of the contemporary cognate temple in Gujarat.

P. 303. Jainism flourished during the medieaval period, more in the southern parts of the Deccan than in its other parts. The earliest date that could be obtained for a Jain Temple in the Deccan from the known Epigraphic evidence is Śaka 1030 (=1108 A. D.) and the stylistic evidence offered by the existing Jain Temples, suggest that none of them was probably erected before the 12th century. The Jains in the Deccan were the last to build structural temples as they were the last to excavate the cave temples. The topography of the Jain Temples (see map) in the Deccan indicates that geographically the sect was spread all over the Deccan. But numerically they are even less than the Vaiṣṇava temples—may be due to poor economic conditions of the sect or to insufficient following and royal patronage.

The group at Anjaneri is most important as it is in a better state of preservation and consists of temples, rest houses or Dharmasālās and maṭhas in a walled enclosure. The earliest of these is temple No. 2 which bears an inscription dated Śaka 1063; dedicated to Chandraprabha (List of Inscriptions of the Deccan). Fully described—temples Nos. 1 and 2 and 3. All Digambaras.

K. R. Venkatarama AYYAR. Forgotten Jain Monastery of Tiruppalī-Malai or Tirumanamalai (Ind. Hist. Cong. IIth Ses. Delhi, 1948)

Pp. 139-141. Within the Pudukkottai territory are more than fifty Jain vestiges ; the low hills were the natural abodes of monks ; one such was Narttamalai, 10 miles to the north of Pudukkottai town. A natural cavern on the Alurutimalai contains four polished beds ; nearby is a broken sculpture of a Tirthankara. On the rock overhanging the cave are two figures of Tirthankaras cut in relief. These are of the 7th to 9th centuries A.D. This monastery was called Tirumanamalai or Tirupallimalai.

On the Melmalai or western hill are two cave temples, the larger is known as Samanarakudagu. Two inscriptions record grant for the daily offering for the Alvar, or the Tirthankara of the monastery of Tirupallimalai. The beginning of the 13th century marks the decay of this Jain settlement when it was added to a Śiva temple ; Kanakacandra and Dharmadeva were the last Ācāryas who lived and taught in this monastery. The Samanarkudagu on the Melamalai was converted into a Viṣṇu Temple in 1228 A.D.

D. R. PAUL. The Monuments of the Udayagiri Hill, Gwalior, 1948.

Pp. 1-2. The Udayagiri hill stands $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of the Bhilsa Station. The caves of Udayagiri are one of the several groups of ancient monuments that are situated within a radius of dozen miles about the town of Bhilsa. The region was in ancient times known as Dasarna.

Pp. 4-5. The hill is about $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles in length. Its greatest height is about 350 feet at the north-east end near which the caves Nos. 19 and 20 are situated. The south-east end of the hill is also high and on its top is situated the cave No. 1.

Pp. 48-49. The Third inscription of the Gupta period found in the Cave No. 20. It refers to the year 106 of the Gupta era (i. e. 425-6 A. D.). It is one of the few Jain inscriptions of the Gupta period so far discovered—in this period Jainism was on the decline. This is the earliest Jain inscription so far discovered (Note : BANERJEE, Age of the Imperial Guptas P. 103) apparently missed this inscription and stated that the Mathura inscription of the G.I. 113 was the earliest known Jain inscription of the Gupta period.

It records how Śāṅkara, a devout ascetic, caused to be made "this image of Pārśvanātha." Śāṅkara, a disciple of Āchārya Gośarman, an ornament of the lineage of Āchārya Bhadra".

Conclusion

Pp. 50-51. The majority of the monuments belong to the time of Chandragupta II, the only exceptions being possibly the cave No. 1 and certainly the cave No. 20, the former indicating probably a slightly earlier date and the latter a later date of 426 A.D., thus belonging to the time of Chandragupta's successor Kumar Gupta I, Jainism had some adherents in the city, as there are some of them even now in the modern town of Bhilsa.

Kamta Prasad JAIN. Mohenjodaro antiquities and Jainism (Jain Ant., Vol. XIV, No. I) Arrah, 1948, Pp. 1 to 7.

Indus civilisation is a creation of Aryans whose home was nowhere else than India. Viewing the numerous seals, terracotta figures and icons of the Mohenjodaro and Harrapa antiquities, which form the concrete evidence to determine about the religious belief of the people it seems that there existed a more civilised and cultured society of people who were true followers of Ahimsā and Yoga, that they had a religion which was more akin to the religious observance of a Jaina Yogi and that they were followers of Rishabha cult of yore, which afterwards came to be known as Jainism. A copper-plate grant of the Babylonian king Nebuchadnezzar I (Circa 1140 B.C.) found in Kathiawar which records that the King paid homage to Tirthankara.

According to some of the Indus people were of Dravidian stock. The Jaina tradition claims that the progeny of Prince Dravida, who was the son of Rishabha, the first Tirthankara came to be known as Dravidas among whom Jainism played an important role. The antiquities of Mohenjodaro and Harrapa betray evidence of the Jaina influence in the following aspects :—(i) Nudity—people of Mohenjodaro also held nudity with esteem and as sacred. (ii) Yogadharmā—A number of statuettes characterised by half shut people worshipped the images of the Yogis. The bull is the emblem of Jaina Rishabha. The standing diety figured on seals three to five (Pl. II) with a bull may be the proto-type of Rishabha. (iii) Adorable dieties—Prof. PRAN NATH deciphered the inscription of the Indus seal No. 449 and he read on it the word 'Jineśvara'. (iv) Mode of worship—Indus people observed the Ārati worship like Jains. (v) Sacred symbols—Mohenjodaro seals and tablets contain representations of the bull, buffalo, rhinoceros, tiger, elephant, crocodile, goat, svastika and tree. These are the very representations which are found on the images of the Tirthankaras as their respective emblems. (vi) Traditional data—Seal No. 1, on plate cxvi. and 7 on pl. cxvii, represent six nude human figures. The nudity and Kāyotsarga posture of these Yogis are essential characteristics of Jaina Sramanas. (vii) Images—A terra-cotta figure represents a nude man standing full front which probably represents a naked Jaina Yogi. A statuette from Harappa (Pl. x) represents a Jaina Yogi in Kāyotsarga posture.

S. B. DEO, Jain temples, monks and nuns in Poona (city) (Jain, Ant., Vol. XVI, No. I) Arrah, 1950. Pp. 17 to 33.

There are seven Śvetāmbara and four Digambara temples in Poona. The Sthānakavāsīs, a non-idolatrous sect of the Jains, have one Sthānaka. The idolatrous Śvetambaras are in majority in Poona. Forbidden to wander in rainy season the Jain monks wander throughout India in the remaining eight months of the year. Different temples described. Śvetāmbara monasteries, Śvetāmbara monks, Sathānakavāsī, Sthānakavāsī monks, Digambara Jain temples described Digambara Jain monks. (i) The Svet. worship the whole idol while the Dig. worship only the fact. (ii) No ornaments on the Dig. idols while the Svet. have.

(iii) The Dig. idols are naked while the Svet. idols have loin-cloth. (iv) The Dig. idols have their eyes cast down as if in meditation while Svet. idols have staring glass eyes looking in front of them.

There is no monastery for Dig. monks in Poona while the Svet. have two.

Devala MITRA. Some Jaina antiquities from Bankura, West Bengal (of A. S. Batters, Vol. xxiv, No. 2, 1958), Calcutta, 1960, Pp. 131—134.

Bankura was a stronghold of the sect of the Jains. The mediaeval Jaina remains will be submerged when the Kangsabati dam Project is completed. The sculptural and architectural pieces should be removed to a place of safety so that they may be studied by future scholars.

Ambikānagar—The village (in Ranibandh and P. S.) is situated on the confluence of the Kangsabati and Kumari, 36 miles south-west of Bankura railway station. The village owes its name to its presiding deity, Ambikā, who is now worshipped in a modern brick temple, built over the ruined plinth of an image (ht. 4½'). Description given. Pl. I-A. The deity, though worshipped as a Brahmanical goddess, is Ambikā, the śāsana-devī of the 22nd Tīrthankara Neminātha.

At the back of the temple of Ambikā is a ruined sandstone temple standing to a height of 11'8" Pls. I-B and II), originally Jaina but now appropriated for the worship of the Brahmanical god Śiva. The temple resembling architectonically the Salleśvara and Sādeśvara temples of Dihar may belong to the 11th century A. D. Description given. The linga within the temple was most probably dedicated to Rishabhanātha, whose image (ht. 3'2", br. 1'6") now lies by the side of the linga. The image belongs to a period not later than the 11th century. Description of the image is given. The back-slab is relieved with miniature figures of twenty-four Tīrthankaras. Inside the temple has been found the head of a Jaina Tīrthankara. Near the temple was found, under a tree, another image of a Tīrthankara. That the village was a thriving Jaina centre is proved by the existence of a few more mutilated Jaina images. Two of them, one headless and the other fairly complete, are now in worship in the house of a local villager.

Chitgiri—Immediately opposite Ambikānagar is Chitgiri, situated on the north bank of the Kangsabati at its confluence with Kumari. A red sandstone temple, now denuded completely, contains an image of a Tīrthankara (Pl. III-B), now lying over the scanty remains. Description of the image is given. The back slab is relieved with four more Tīrthankaras. The image may be of the 16th Tīrthankara Śāntinātha. The date of the image seems to be earlier than that of Rishabhanātha at Ambikānagar.

Barkola—About 2½ miles east of Ambikānagar is the village of Barkola, where once stood a Jaina temple, made of bricks. Forces of nature, aided by the vandalism of a man, have brought about virtually a complete destruction of the temple. Its foundation has also been disturbed by brick hunters. From the ruins, a local person has collected : (1) a stone pedestal, (2) three stone complete images, (3) two monolithic miniature votive shrines, and (4) the pedestal portion of a stone Jaina image. Of the three Jaina images, the female one is Ambikā (Pl. III-C), above whose coiffure is a seated miniature figure of the Jina, Neminātha. The other two images are identical with each other in size (5' x 6"). Each depicts a Tirthankara. The cognizance of one is indistinct and that of the other is a makara or elephant, thus indicating either Suvīdhinātha or Ajitanātha. Of the two miniature shrine one is in a perfect state of preservation (Pls. IV-B, IV-C, V-A and V-B). Commonly known as Chaturmukha or Chaumukha, it depicts on each of its four faces the figure of a Tirthankara within a trefoil-arched niche. The cognizances of Rishabhānātha, Chandraprabha and Śāntinātha, namely, bull, moon and deer, are easily recognizable. Description of the temple stating that it was a specimen of the North Indian rekha type, given. The pedestal contains a foot of a Tirthankara a ghaṭa is shown below, from which issue two, nāgī figures. The image was thus of Pārśvanātha.

Pāreshnāth—Two miles north-west of Ambikānagar is Pāreshnāth on the north bank of the Kumari. The village is no doubt named after the shrine of the 23rd Tirthankara Pārśvanātha. The temple is made of red sandstone. On the plinth lies the image of Pārśvanātha now in three fragments (Pls. V-C, VI and VII-A), a deplorable prey to the wanton damage caused by the local people. The total height of the image, without tenon, is 6'-8½". The Tirthankara stands under a seven-headed canopy of a serpent. On the back slab there are images of twenty-four Tirthankaras. Over the serpent head is his Kevala—tree. Description given.

Chiada—Almost immediately opposite Pāreshnāth is Chiada on the South bank of the Kumari. At the western end of the village, there are three sculptures lying in the open. One of them represents a Tirthankara (Pl. VII-B).

Kandua—On the bank of the Kangsabati, half a mile from the village of Kendua and seven miles north of Ambikānagar, once flourished a Jaina establishment, the edifices of which are now reduced to the last stage of decay and disintegration. Description of the ruins given. The whole area is strewn with lithic architectural fragments. A large number of the stones have been recently utilised in the construction of an ablong roofless structure for the enshrinement of an linga. The stone temple was most probably dedicated to Pārśvanāth, as an image of that Tirthankara (Pl. X) lies near it. Description of the image is given.

P. 211. Jainism is known to have existed in Southern India since historical times. The natural caverns, which have been discovered, sometimes with a few inscriptions in Brahmi script, are connected with the Jains and from the earliest stone monuments of the Tamil land.

Till about the 7th century A. D., Jainism had a large following in Southern India; the Hindus, by absorbing the main features of the rival religions, drove the Jains to a comparatively insignificant place in the Tamil land. In spite of the persecution in the days of Jñāasambanda, Jainism survived in sufficient measure and strength so as to play distinguished role in the history of Southern India till almost the end of the 13th century.

P. 212. The Muhammadan invasion had a large share not only in the destruction of the Jain monuments, but also in the suppression of the individuality of the Jain religion. There are nearly 16 centres in the Pudukotah State where Jain vestiges can now be traced. The Plate of 24-Tirthankaras, found in the compound of the Raja's college. The religion of Jainas and Buddhist similar in several respects; so is the case with their style of the temples. The Jains had their stupas in the time of Asoka; different styles of temples samavasarana structure was the patent of the Vesara style; Chaturmukha or Chaumukh temples—the three celled temples—the Chalukyas, Kadambas and the Hoysalas were inspired from their original Jaina faith for planning their structure. The Kadamba structures suggest a Jain origin. The Hoysalas like the Chalukyas copied the existing Jaina models. Peculiar features in the Jain temples of the Indra Sabha and the Jagannātha Seva cave temples (Ellora) constructed under the patronage of the Chālukyan Kings.

Pp. 169—171. Lost specimens of early Jain Architecture inscriptions bear out the prevalence of Jinālayas or Chatyālayas and basti in Gangavadi and Banavasi made of wood and conforming to this style of architecture before the Pallavas came to dominate and transform its architectural motifs. Madhava the founder of the Ganga dynasty, established on the hill of Mandali a basadi of wood (E. C. VIII, Sh. 41). Avinita and Durvinita benefactors of temples (I. A. Vol. 1, P. 136). Marasimpha's general Śrīvijaya established Jinendra temple at Manne (E. C. IX, MD. 60). Grant by Śrīpurusha to a Jain temple of Kandachchi at Gudulur. Hindu temples, plan identical with the prevailing style of the Jainas (M.A.R. 1921, Pp. 38-39). Some essential features. Characterizing Jain structures in the country.

Pp. 171-72. Great upheaval in religious thought about the 7th century with the rise of Vaishṇava and Saiva saints who carried on propagandist activities to suppress the nihilistic tendencies of Jainism and Buddhism. This period witnessed also the beginning of temples in stone.

Pp. 174-75. Later Jain temples : Between the 7th and 10th centuries when the Jaina Acāryas were at their height, some of the more elegant specimens of architecture were raised in all important Jain centres as Javagal, Kuppattur, Algodu. Ankanāthapur, Chikkahana—soge, Heggadadevanakote, Kittur, Humcha and above all at Śravaṇabelgoḷa, where both the "historic and the picturesque clasp hands".

The Chandranātha basti at Hanagal (M.A.R. 1911) the Śāntinātha basti at Kuppattur (M.A.R. 1912, P. 42), the Ādināth at Hanasoge (M.A.R. 1912, p. 13), the Pārśvanātha basti at Kittur, the Guddada basti of Bāhubali, built by Vikramāditya Sentara in 898 A. D., the Pancha basti built by Chaṭṭāla Devi, the Pallava queen and the adopted daughter of Rākāsa Ganga, the Makara Jinālaya at Angadi with vestiges of old Jain bastis and the ruined figures of Tīrthankaras (E. C. VI, Mudigere 9), all bear testimony to their construction in the early Dravidian style. Description given.

P. 175. Chandragupta basti on the Chandragiri hill in Śravaṇa Belgoḷa considered to be one of the oldest temples on the hill. Chaundarayasa's son Jinadeva adorned his father's basti (982 A. D.) by adding an upper storey. Description given.

The Chitalar Rock shrine is situated five miles to the north of Kuzhithira, a village on the Trivandrum—Nagercoil Road, in south Travancore. The place was most sacred to the Jains. The temple at Chitalar which was originally a Jain shrine was later on, converted into a Hindu temple and an image of Goddess Shree Bhagavati was installed there. A number of old epigraphs in the Tinnevely District go to show that Jainism was once prevalent in South Travancore and the adjoining Districts and that some of the well known Jain teachers and devotees hailed from Chitalar, a place which was then famous as Tirucharaneam and the seat of a thriving Jain Monastery. The Chitalar shrine has been ascribed to the 9th century A. D. On the face of the rock are sculptured images, Jainistic in origin and some of them are inscribed.

vasahi temple at Dilwara (Ābū). The conception and imagery of the 16 Śruta Devīs, 24 Yakṣinīs, disclose points of identity with those of the Brāhmanical Nava-Durgās.

P. 219 The Digambaras do not admit women into the holy order as do the Śvetāmbaras.

The Jain religion places some of the Hindu deities in a subordinate category and makes them waiting upon the Tīrthankaras e. g. Balarāma, Vāsudeva, Ādinātha, Yakṣa Gomurha. Tīrthankaras are superior to God.

P. 220. When the Śāsana devatā appears in individual sculpture the keynote to recognise is the presence of a small Jīva figure either at the head or at the top of the statue. The association of the Yakṣas with Kubera, with the Tīrthankaras.

P. 221. Jain Goddesses divided into three classes according to the text of Āchāra-dinakara viz. (1) Prāsāda-devīs or installed images, (2) Kuladevīs or tāntrika Goddesses, (3) Samprōdāyadevīs or class—Goddesses. A great many Tāntric Goddesses found a room in the Jain pantheon—names given.

P. 222. According to the Rūpamaṇḍana (अध्याय ६, श्लोक २६) the images of Ādinātha, Neminātha, Pārśvanātha and Mahāvīra and their respective Śāsana Devīs Chakreśvari, Ambikā, Padmāvatī and Siddhayakā especially venerable and are endowed with great power.

Odette MONOD-BRUHL. Indian temple, 1952; preface by Sylvain LEVI.

Pp. vi-vii. Mahāvīra founded an ascetic brotherhood; his fundamental doctrine of the absolute sanctity of life and Ahimsā, the famous "non-violence" upon which Gandhi trying to build a new India. He taught a peculiar method of discussion, and a cosmology in which mathematics has a large place. Rejected the idea of a supreme God. The Jaina cult still pursues its dim destiny, it spread all over India, but its ancient centres of activity are still maintained in Gujrat, Bengal and the Deccan. Its adherants came chiefly from the merchant class who never ceased to erect, with unrivalled generosity, admirable monuments of their faith. Mathura revealed the splendour of their temples at the beginning of the Christian era and Girnar, Palitana, and Mount Ābu are some of the glories of the religious architecture of India. It is an architecture of immensely rich congregation : precious materials, delicate, and careful work with a fine sense of proportion, but lacking the lyrical impulse which animates and transforms stone ; plates and notes. P. 445. Religion—While numerous inscriptions of the pre-Gupta period, refer to non-Brahmanical religious sect like Buddhists and Jains, the great majority of the inscriptions of the Gupta period refer to Brahmanical religion.

P. 457. The Buddhist and Jaina doctrine of ahiṃsā of abstention from the slaughter of animals made such a profound impression, that even today the high class Hindus of the greater part of India are strict vegetarians.

P. 458. Jainism—The early Chālukyas and the Rāshtrakūṭas, as well as the Gangas and Kadambas, patronised the Jaina religion, and it made great progress in the south during their rule; Jainism began to decline in South India from the 7th century A. D. owing to the influence of Śaiva and Vaiṣṇava saints. The Hoysalas, too, were Jainas; the Cholas and Pandyas were bigoted Śaivas and persecuted the Jainas. Sandara Pāṇḍya impaled 8,000 Jainas—pictures on the walls of the great temple at Madura represent their torture. Jainas, unlike Buddhists, not extinct in the land of their birth.

P. 463. Vaiṣṇavism—At first the total number of the Avatāras was four or six, but later even Rishabha, the first Tīrthankara of the Jainas came to be looked upon as Avatāra of Viṣṇu.

P. 39. Bhūtala Śrī Vira Udayamārtanda, a Venad sovereign (of Nancinad); 1516 A. D., he bestowed liberal gifts of lands on the Jain temple at Nagercoil (T. A. S., VI, Pp. 157 ff.)

P. 103. Trimurti Hills in the Munar range of mounts in North Travancore—the figures popularly believed to represent the Trimurtis (Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva) are really three Jain figures, in relief, seen on the eastern face of the rock.

Pp. 201-2. Ānavāl a group of temple servants, their duty in the Śucīndram temple is staging of the execution of the Jaina disputants; Theological triumph of the Śaivites over the Jainas.

Pp. 223-4. The 6th Utsava represents the contest held between the Śaivites and the Jaina devotees—a commemoration of the contest between the Advaitins represented by Tirujrana Sambanda and the Jainas. The tradition is that, at the contest, the two parties were to divine by intuition the particular article kept sealed within pitcher. The members of the vanquished party were to be impaled on stakes. Here, the failure of the Jains and the consequent punishment (execution) are depicted.

P. 224. n 34. The impalement of the Jains is celebrated in Śucīndram on the 6th night of the Utsava. In Madura, the historical scene of its occurrence, and in several other temples, it falls on the 7th day. The Uttarakāraṇāgama demands it to be celebrated on the 7th.

P. 238. The execution of the Jain disputants, bear the imprint of the district Tamilian features, conspicuous by their absence in the Utsavas of the Malayali Temples.

P. 301. In the past the ordeal, as an avowed instrument of divine power was invoked for the detection of criminals and settlement of disputes. "Tiruttakka Devar", the celebrated author of "Jīvakacintamani" had to undergo the ordeal of handling a piece of red-hot iron in order to prove his purity. According to the Periya Purāṇa the respective holy books of the Jains and Tiruṇṇanasambanda, were subjected to the fire ordeal in order to prove their sanctity, and the Śaiva cause Triumphed.

Pp. 6-7. Jainism : Tiruparuttikunram, a suburb of Kanchi, has long been known as Jaina-Kanchi. Since the seventh century A.D., this place has been a stronghold of the Jains of the Digambara sect. They made significant contributions to literature and philosophy. An epigraph (fourteenth century) refers to Mallisena Vamanasuri in terms of great commendation; his disciple, Pushpasena and his association with Irugappa, the famous minister of Vijayanagara, led to the addition of certain new structures to the temple at Tiruparuttikunram (Plate : Vimānas of the Vardhamāna Jain temple).

Pp. 28-30. Jain Temples :

The smaller of the two Jain temples in Tiruparuttikunram belongs to the Pallava period and the other to the early Chola period. The mandapa in the latter was added to the temple by the Vijayanagara kings.

The smaller temple devoted to the worship of Chandraprabha, is built of sandstone; it incorporates Pallava features; it has an upper story surmounted by a Vimāna of brick and mortar. The image is covered with thick stucco. Enshrined in the same sanctum are two images, one of Kunthanātha in marble and the other of Vardhamāna, in granite. This temple was built between 700 and 730.

Vardhamāna Temple :

An apsidal monument enshrines a wooden image of Vardhamāna. The ardhamandapa, constructed during the reign of Kulottunga I, (1070—1120). Its sanghā mandapa has paintings on the ceiling; similar paintings in the mukhamandapa; these depict scenes from the lives of the Tirthankaras; particularly those of Vardhamāna, Rishabha and Neminātha. The shrine was built during 1387-1388 by Irugappa, a general and minister of Bukka Raya II, as desired by Pushpasena, his preceptor. On one of the pillars is sculptured the figure of the builder, the great general, who is depicted as a humble, devout and ascetic figure.

Of the two other temples standing on either side of the Vardhamāna's shrine, one is dedicated to Pushpadanta and the other to Dharmadevi.

P. 72. Mudubidre in charge of Jain Chiefs of the Chowthar dynasty who were originally Hindus.

P. 73. Jainism : Began to spread from the 11th century. Sources for the History of Jainism are the libraries at Mudubidre, the busties at Kārkāl, Venur and Mudubidre and local traditions. The earliest Ācāryas came into the Tulu country only about a thousand years ago. Over the Ghats in the Mysore state and other places, Jainism very popular from about 300 B. C. Strongholds of Jainism in this country have been limited almost to the three important places namely—Mudubidre, Venur and Kārkāl.

P. 79. The temples of the Tulu country are built in the multi-pole-roof style, best illustrated by the Guru—bastis of Mudubidre.

Square-Type :

The temple of Śāntisvara of Venur, an example of this type ; the entire building is of stone, sanctum over sanctum.

P. 79. Rectangular type : it is exemplified by all the busties of the Jain temple group met within such places as Kārkāl.

Pp. 79-80. Jain Busties : Basti Towns of the Tulu country—Kārkāl, Mudubidre and Venur; Guru basti and Tirthankara busti; a Mānastambha in front. At Kārkāl—Chaumukh temple most interesting for its architectural features. The mānastambha at Hiriyanagadi, a beautiful specimen; the Gommatesvara Figure here the second largest in India.

At Mudubidre—Chandranāth and Guru—basties are interesting; the former has along the basement of the Mukhamandapa friezes with sculptures.

At Venur : Śāntināth basti, noteworthy for its architectures. Tirthankar busti contains beautifully carved bas relief figures of all the Tirthankaras with their yakshas, yakshinis, trees, etc.

The Gomatasvara of this place is the third largest. It bears the date of 1604 A. D. In a choultry are assembled a number of Jain metal figures—some are fine specimens of Vijayanagar times.

P. 83. Icons : Jain ; Available in plenty in the aforesaid centres.

Pp. 90-91. Wood carving : In the palace buildings of the ancient Chowtar dynasty at Mudubidri; noteworthy specimens of art of closing years of the Vijayanagar Dynasty Navanāri Kunjara, made up of nine women and entwined to form an elephant: a clever combination and workmanship of high order. The saptanāri āva composed of seven women so juxtaposed as to finally give a figure of a horse.

Cave Temples of Western India. New Delhi, 1956.

P. 22. Ellora : 5 Jain caves : The most interesting are the Indra Sabhā and Jagannāth Sabhā. The upper storey of the Indra Sabhā is considered to be the finest in Ellora and it is the earliest of the Jain group. Some description given of both. On the top of the hill in which the Jain caves are excavated is a rock-hewn statue of Pārasnāth, 16ft. high and protected by a building over 200 years old.

P. 24. Aihole : The Jain temple of Meguti constructed about 634 A. D. The Meguti temple and No. 39 Jain temple, show influences of the Dravidian style.

Temples of North India. New Delhi, 1956.

P. 4. No structural difference between the Hindu and the Jain temples in the North except that the need for housing the various Tirthankaras dominates the disposition of space in the latter. The Jain temples achieve their effect from the grouping together of a number of shrines on such high spaces as the hills can provide, and are characterised by an air of seclusion and aloofness.

P. 14. Central India—the Khajurāho group : in Bundelkhand in Vindhya Pradesh.

P. 17. Basically similar to the Brahmanical temples, the Jain temples grouped together on the south-east of the site are remarkable—complete absence of window openings; parallel friezes of statuary.

P. 17. The Pārśvanātha is the largest and most beautiful Jain temple at Khajurāho. It is significant that this temple also houses images and sculptures of Brahmanical gods and goddesses. It speaks of a spirit of toleration.

A cluster of 12 pillars, standing a little apart from the main group, is all that remains of the Jain temple known as Ghantai, but these have attracted considerable attention on account of their Attic beauty, "evidently the handiwork of a group of the most accomplished craftsmen of the time".

P. 22. Rajasthan : the village of Osia is the site of some badly damaged temples. The temple dedicated to Mahāvīra, is the most complete example of a Jain shrine at Osia.

KRISHNA DEVA. The temples of Khajurāho in Central India. (Ancient India No. 15, 1959, New Delhi).

P. 43. Khajurāho, situated in Chhatrapur District of Madhya Pradesh. The tract round Khajurāho was known during ancient times as Vatsa, in mediaeval times as Jejābhukti or Jejākabhukti, and since the 14th century as Bundelkhand.

P. 44. Under the patronage of the Chandella princes, Jejākabhukti was blessed with prosperity and was swept between the 10th and 12th centuries by a cultural upheaval. Khajurāho (ancient Kharjjuravāhaka) the capital town was adorned by the Chandellas with lofty temples.

P. 45. During the reign of Dhanrga (c. 950-1002), the Pārśvanātha temple was built by one Pahila, who was 'honoured by King Dhanga.'

P. 46. All temples of Khajurāho pertain to a cognate style and are manifestations of a distinctive and concerted architectural movement; inspite of divergent sectarian affiliations, the dominant architectural and sculptural schemes are uniformly homogeneous, so much so that, save for a few distinctive cult-images there is nothing to distinguish a Vaishṇava temple from a Śaiva one and Śaiva temple from a Jain one.

Distinctive peculiarities of Plans and elevation—described—Jagati, Ardha-maṇḍapa, Maṇḍapa, antarāla and garbha-griha. The elevation; the interior plan.

Pp. 54-55. Pārśvanātha (pls. XXVII and XXVIII)—probably built during the reign of Dhanga : the two inscriptions bear the same date viz., Vikrama year 1011 (A. D. 953-54). The inscription on the Pārśvanātha temple a re-engraved copy of a lost original record [epi. Ind. I (1892) Pp. 135-36]; re-engraved after the lapse of more than a century. The same temple has numerous earlier pilgrim-records, assignable to Circa A. D. 950-1000. Numerous affinities of architectural and sculptural styles of the Pārśvanātha enumerated. Despite its Jain dedication, the Pārśvanātha bears a Kinship to the Lakṣmana in displaying its sculptures a predominance of Vaishṇava themes, such as śankha-purusha Paraśurāma, Balarāma with Revati and a group of Rāma, Sītā and Hanumāna, in addition to diverse forms of Viṣṇu. Besides the Lakṣmana, this is the only temple at Kharjurāho which depicts scenes from the Krishna-līlā. Its Architectural peculiarities; its individual features of design and composition; Date in circa 950-70. It is a sāṇdhāra-prāsāda.

P. 58. Ādinātha temple : is a nirandhāra-prāsāda of which only the garbha-griha and antarāla have survived with their roofs. In the elegance of sculptural style and in general plan and design, it bears Kinship to the Vāmana. Its Śikhara shows better proportions.

P. 60. Ghaṇṭai Temple (pl. XXVII). The temple, locally called Gaṇṭai on account of the chain and bell (ghanta) motifs carved on its tall pillars; same design as the Pārśvanātha temple. As in the Ādinātha, the architrave surmounting the doorway of this temple is carved with the 16 auspicious symbols seen in the dream by Jain Mahāvīra's mother at the time of conception. Datable to the end of the 10th century.

Pp. 62-63. Iconography : The Jain temples of Khajurāho enshrine images of Jinas and depict Jain deities on the niches and doorways. For the rest they agree with the other local temples. The doorways of the Jain temple invariably represent Chakreśvari Takṣhī on the lalāṭa-bimba, while the door-jambes and niches show mostly other Jain deities including the Vidyā devīs and Śāsana-devatās, besides figures of Jinas. The sixteen auspicious symbols seen in the dream by Vardhamāna's mother, according to the Digambara tradition, are represented on the architrave above the doorway of almost all the Jain temples and shrines, except the Pārśvanātha. N. I. The symbols enumerated in the Jain texts and represented on the Ghaṇṭai and Ādinātha temple given.

Dārāsura situated 3 miles to the south of Kumbakonam, Airāvateśvara Temple built by Virajendra (1063-69) or Rājārāja II (1050-73), in the main shrine the carving below the niche depicts scenes illustrating stories of Śaivite saints. The story of the boy-saint Tirujñānasambhanda, who overcame the Jainas, all shown impaled, by performing the miracle of floating a manuscript against the current of the stream. The saint is depicted as a very small boy with symbols in his hands. Three nude Jainas, with flowers and other objects in their hands, are shown standing probably to throw them into the stream and perform a miracle. The king is in the centre of the panel and beyond him are impaled the defeated Jainas.

representing Tirthankaras—each under his respective tree. Other panels elaborately worked : Yakshas and Yakshis Dharanendra Yaksha and Padmāvati. The flexions in the case of these figures are indeed so charming that they add to the rhythmic poise to the whole composition. The panel of Pārśvanātha with the snakehood over his head is a gem of early Pāṇḍya art (Pl. 16).

There are long rows of seated Tirthankara figures repeating the complete hierarchy of Tirthankaras three times over.

V. S. AGRAWALA—Pre-Kushāṇa Art. of Mathura (I. U. P. H. S. Vol. VI, 1933).

P. 110. The Vedikā or railing was the most important product of the early art and was cherished as the main object for display of the sculptor's decorative skill. Instances of Jaina railings have been unearthed at one of its most ancient sites, the Kankālī Tīlā (Mathura). The Jainas were settled in Mathura in the second century B.C.

An ancient Jain stūpa existed in Mathura, which in A. D. 167 was considered to have been built by the Gods, i. e. was so ancient that its real origin had been completely forgotten (E.I. Vol. II, P. 198). There were two temples (Prāsāda) on the site of the Kankālī mound, one of these existed in the middle of the 2nd century B. C.

Pp. 111-112. For an example of the ancient Jaina stūpa (Smith's Jaina stūpa, Pl. 72 Fig. 1.)—Dr. BHANDARKAR has described this as an example, of a square stūpa (Excavations at Nagari, Arch. Memoir No. 4, P. 136). The structure is surmounted by a Dharma-chakra. The stūpa was a monument raised by the followers of Jainism and Buddhism for enshrining the relics of their saints. As example of the Jain Dharma-Chakra and stūpa we have reference to the Wheel and the Relic Memorial in line 14 of the Hāthīgumphā cave inscription (E. I. Vol. XX, P. 80). Kāya Nisīdi—an equivalent of stūpa. Nisādyā (Nisīdi, Nisidhi, etc.) was the common name for a stūpa. Dr. BUHLER remarks "that the ancient art of the Jainas did not differ materially from that of the Buddhists (Ref. Ind. Vol. 11, P. 322)—Fig. 22. Pre-historic cave art and rock carvings—The Raigarh cave paintings known as Singanpur paintings on the walls of a cavern, on a hill of that name, situated near Raigarh, in the Central Provinces. The subjects of the paintings :—(1) In plate XLV (S. 23), there are represented three human figures, standing with upraised hands and looking upwards towards a Trident (Trīśūl), placed erect, in the left hand corner above. (2) In Plate XLI (S. 19), there is a standing human figure with two unproportionately long legs. From the foot of the left leg up goes a zigzag ladder likething, made up of eight straight lines, and touching the left leg in five points while the right leg in four points. It ends near the joint of the left thigh with the lady. On the outward side of this left leg there are fourteen triangular spots, at regular intervals, from one end of the leg to the other. Both the hands are raised above the head, in a semicircular form. The left hand is again made up of three triangular blocks, separated from one another. Various points discussed.

Vol. XI; No. I; 1943; Arrah; Pp. 11—13.

Discussion continued. The eight pieces of the ladder between the two legs represent the eight karmic forces, described in Jainism. On the outer side of the left leg are fourteen triangular spots which suggest the fourteen principal stages in the process of spiritual evolution of a mundane soul towards perfection known as Gunasthāns. The Upper portion of the figure, formed by the two hands, above the head, in crescent like form, signifies the crescent shaped abode of the Siddhas that is the Siddhasīlā. The featureless head of the figure is suggestive of the featureless, bodiless nature of the liberated souls. The three triangular blocks represent the three virtues, the three gems of Jainia philosophy viz. Right faith, Right knowledge and Right conduct. In the Jain cosmology shape of the universe has been described to be similar in form to that of a human being, standing with both legs apart. It very significantly represents the fundamental Jainia conceptions. So, the pre-historic singanpur caves with their thosands of years old mystic paintings are strong additional evidences of the antiquity of Jainism.

Two torso of naked Jainia images in the Patna Museum: The large torso, a free and round sculpture carved out of Chunar sand-stone, has the high Maurya polish on it, while the smaller one, identical in appearance and style and of the same has no polish. They have both been found on the same level under-ground along with a silver punch marked coin which Jayaswal says, 'precedes Maurya, coinage'. He ascribes the larger torso to the Maurya period and the unpolished smaller one to the 'Sungan or later', on unstated grounds. If one is to go by style and appearance both the torso must belong to the same period which may not be far out of date from the Patna Yakshas on the one hand and the Parkham Yakshas on the other. In their tight and stiff modelling, in their fully rounded arms and thighs and in their general earthly heaviness of form they have a kinship with the Patna statues; both pairs are characterised by a smooth and lifeless inertia, and by a comparatively flat surface treatment of their backs. These Lohampur statues, moreover, are more primitive and archaic in outlook and appearance, heavy and a little bit unbalanced in proportion, which seem to link them with Baroda and Parkham Yakshas.

P. 8. The nude figure in Indian art is used to suggest the sensuality of fertility spirits or the supreme yogic control of a Jain ascetic, by means at once appropriately abstract and specific.

P. 9. Apollo and Ascetic.

If a typical Jain statue of a nude ascetic (Fig. 2) and any one of the Apollos or Kouroi (Fig. 1) of the archaic period of Greek sculpture were placed side by side, one might reach the superficial conclusion that both are the products of the same environment or at least derived from a common prototype. Neither of these suppositions is valid, and yet something certainly can be said in explanation of this resemblance and also about the essential differences that separate the two conceptions.

The numerous examples of nude statues of Kouroi that have been found all over the Greek World and may be dated from the seventh to the fifth centuries B.C. have certain traits in common, in spite of regional differences in technique and material. All are standing in a rigidly frontal position with arms pressed close to the sides and one foot advanced to ensure a firmer stance.

P. 10. The main points of resemblance between the Greek Kouros and a Jain figure of a Tirthankara or saint lie in the suggestion of heroic, super-human stature in the completely nude body by the enormous exaggeration of the width of shoulder and narrowness of waist and in the general similarity of the frontal pose with the arms extended down the sides. In the case of the Jain figures there is no need even to speculate on the possibility of an Egyptian influence producing this parallel form in India; the earliest Jain statues, probably not made until the fashion for the anthropomorphic representation of Gautama had been established by Buddhism in the second century A.D. date from a period centuries after the sculptural tradition of ancient Egypt had vanished in the dust. It will become apparent that, just like the Kouroi, the Jain images were made to fulfil a specific religious need. In the process of their making, certain devices rather similar to those used by the Greek sculpture were independently evolved to express the fundamental nature of the conception, and it is this that accounts for the seemingly close but actually superficial resemblance.

P. 11. Plate — 1. Statue of Apollo or Kouros. 7th century B.C. Greece — New York Museum. 2. Jain Tirthankara — 2nd century A.D. London — India Museum.

P. 12. The naked figures of Jain saints represent the act of Kayotsarga or dismissing the body, the attainment of a depth of yogic trance in which the practitioner is completely withdrawn from all earthly distractions, so that some Jain patriarchs are said to have been entirely impervious to vines twining around their limbs and ant-hills growing round their feet; it is a state of suspended animation amounting to a suspension of all bodily function, a slate in which, by the power of concentration, the fleshly body is cleansed to a point of alabastrine purity and assumes a perfection free of the dross of tangible matter.

In the figuration of such a concept the Indian sculptor employed certain techniques that were the common property of all craftsmen employed in making religious images in India. In order to convey the impression that we are looking at a superman, spiritually as well as anatomically above ordinary mortals, the body is composed on the metaphorical basis used for the making of Buddha images; We can easily recognise the leonine body, the arms tapering like an elephant's trunk, the thighs like plantains, as well as the lotiform eyes and other ideal abstraction for the features. The canon of proportion is an abstract one, too, composed of nine thalāmā, the distance from brow to chin, for the total height of the statue.

In the use of a mathematical system of measurement to ensure an appropriately ideal abstraction, the parallel to the Greek figure is a legitimate one. But in the Indian statue these means are dedicated to quite different ends. The Jain figure represents a spiritual, not an athletic ideal. Its nudity is conditioned by asceticism, not pride in physical beauty. Whereas in the Apollo the emphasis is on muscular structure, in the body of the Jain ascetic there is a complete suppression of muscular or skeletal structure even in an abstract way. The body and limbs are composed of a number of smooth, uninterrupted convex surfaces or planes, the swelling roundness of which not only connotes the perfection attained by breath control, but, in the reduction of the anatomical structure itself to the simplest possible surfaces, indicates that the form is composed of "some supraterestral unearthly substance". (H. Zimmer, Philosophies of India, P. 212).

The stance of the Jain figure is intended to suggest the supernally motionless state of a being withdrawn in the timeless serenity of yoga, not the athletic vigour implied in the tension of the Greek statue. Even the hands extended down the legs suggest the infinite relaxation of trance in contrast to the surging vitality of the clenched fists of the Kouros.

P. 13. Surprisingly similar abstract means are used, on the one hand to suggest youthful beauty throbbing with physical life, and on the other hand a body as a symbol of spirit and an expression of complete withdrawal from all material being and the round of birth and death.

P. 13. The Male Nude :

Almost from the moment that it was unearthed at the ancient site of Harappa, the little limestone torso has been compared to the finest accomplishments of Greek sculpture. Some critics have even suggested that it must be assigned to a period when the influence of Hellenic art on India could be invoked to account for the carver's mastery of and atomical form. The fact remains that this figurine, excavated under scientific conditions, belongs to the pre-historic or Indus Valley period and is to be dated in the later third millenium B. C. It will become apparent, too, on comparison with a typical Greek representation of the nude, that the figure is completely Indian in character and execution and, in a sense, diametrically opposed to the Hellenic ideal.

Pp. 15-16. Although it is impossible to tell the exact iconographic significance of the nude image from Harappa, it seems almost certain that it must have been intended as a deity of some sort, ... this statuette is completely Indian in the sculptor's realisation of the essential image, a symbolic rather than descriptive representation of anatomy, in which the articulation of the body is realized in broad convex planes of modeling. The one quality which may be discerned here that is peculiar to many later Indian examples of plastic art is the suggestion of an inner tension that seems to threaten to push out and burst the taut outer layer of skin. Actually this is a technical device by which the sculptor revealed the existence of the breath or prāṇa filling and expanding the vessel of the body. The fact that the figure appears pot-bellied is, therefore, iconographically completely right and truthful. It is not intended as a caricature in any sense, since this distension resulting from yogic breath control was regarded as an outward sign of both material and spiritual well-being. We have in this statuette, too, what is certainly the earliest exhibition of the Indian sculptor's skill in producing not only a sense of plastic volume but also in representing the soft quality of the flesh. This is not a literal imitation, such as one finds in Western sculpture, but a suggestion of fleshiness by such properly sculptural and abstract devices as the interlocking of the smooth and softly modeled convex planes of the torso and the exaggeration of the depth of the navel. It anticipates the technique of countless images of Indian Gods made centuries after its fashioning in the third millenium B. C.

Pp. 92—95. Pudukkottai State—area 1,179 square miles. Right across the territory flows the Southern Vellar, the traditional boundary between the ancient Pāṇḍya and Chola Kingdoms.

Numerous natural caverns and rock shelters at Sittannavasāl, Narthamalai, Tenimalai, Kudumiyamalai and Sevalimalai—were occupied by Jain monks slightly anterior to the beginning of the Christian Era.

P. 93. Jainism played a very important role in the evolution of Tamil literature and culture; flourished in this area till about the 11th or 12th century. Very near these caverns were important and populous settlements of the Jains. Nearly 40 Jain monuments have so far been conserved within this small area, and they include sculptures and ruins of Jain pallis or monasteries. Pp. 334-335. According to Sri K. R. Srinivasan (South Indian Paintings : A Note on the date of the Sittannavasāl paintings—Indian Hist. Cong. 1944), though the excavation of the cave was done in the 7th century A.D. it was not due to Mahendravarman I, but may have been done under the ageis of the Pāṇḍyan kings of the period. Of the paintings on the ceiling of the sanctum, his opinion is that the inner or first layer is coeval with the excavation and belongs to the 7th century while the second layer is attributed by him to the 9th century A.D.

The very style in which the pillars, corbels, niches and sanctum of the Sittannavasāl cave have been executed has hardly any exact parallel in the Pāṇḍyan country while there are several similar caves of the time of Mahendravarman. The rock-cut caves at Sittannavasāl, if not produced directly under the orders of Mahendravarman I, was probably excavated by the artists of his country and not Pāṇḍyan.

The cave temple was dedicated to Pannakar or Pannavar (Pārśvanatha). The cave was embellished with paintings since its excavation. The figures and designs of the paintings of the verandah such as the lotus and the geese and the human figures, their features correspond exactly to those found in the sculptures of the early Pallava period and not with the features of the sculptures of the 9th century A. MOTI CHANDRA. An illustrated Ms. of Mahāpurāṇa in the Collection of Sri Digambar Jain Nayā Mandir, Delhi (Lalit Kalā No. 5. 1959—New Delhi).

Pp. 68-81. Pushpadanta, author of the Mahāpurāṇa (965 A. D.) enjoyed the patronage of Bharat, the minister of the Rashtrakūṭa King Krishna III (939-968 A. D.). Author's life ; Mahāpurāṇa describes the life of 63 prominent figures of the Jaina faith ; stories—some narrated ; life of Rishabha ; Bharata (son of Rishabha) his universal campaign ; his brother Bāhubali's refusal to accept his sovereignty ; stories of other mythological persons ; The Digambara Jain wall paintings in the Indrasabha cave temples of Ellora (8th-13th centuries), the appearance of a naked Jain monk on a palanquin accompanied by woman and soldiers in the Brahmanical Kailās temple at Ellorā (12th century) and the Tirumalai frescos (11th-12th century) in South India bespeak to the artistic activity of the Digambaras. The only illustrated Digambara Jain palm-leaf Ms. of Shaṭkhaṇḍāgam with Dhavalā Tīkā is datable to 1112-1120 A. D. ; The miniatures—earliest known of the Digambara Jain sect. The illustrated Mss. of the Mahāpurāṇa, datable to the 16th century. Description of the illustrated Ms. of the Mahāpurāṇa in the collection of the Sri Digambarā Nayā Mandir, Delhi ; its technique discussed. Jaipur Mahāpurāṇa dated 1540 and painted at Pālam, a village near Delhi, bear close stylistic affinities with the illustrations of the Nayā Mandir Mahāpurāṇa.

K. D. SWAMINATHAN. Tamil Art and Culture in Pudukkottai (Q. J. M. S. Vol. 50, No. 1. 1959) Bangalore.

Pp. 63-64. Comments and certain errors in the article on Evolution of Tamil Art and Culture in Pudukkottai—by C. R. SUBRAMANIAN—published in Vol. XLIX, Pp. 92-95 of this journal).

No evidence to show that the natural caverns and dwellings of the primitive tribes such as Karumbar and Vedas prior to the arrival of the Jains. The drip lines do not indicate that were shelters for the monks. The cave temples in Pudukkottai are mostly of Muthurāiyer or Pāṇḍyan origin.

Pp. 9-10. Miniature paintings of the Jains; they were purely illustrative of the blessed ones, the Tirthankaras; In Gujarat, paper began to supplant the palm-leaf medium in the latter half of the 14th century A. D. and not after 1400 A. D. as is commonly supposed. Lay Jains used to present illustrated Mss. to Jaina monks. The Jaina characters and deities never varied, always being depicted with a sharp projecting nose, the farther projecting eye and painted double chin.

P. 15. The Jaina Sangha of Agra commissioned the artist Sālivāhana in the year 1610 A. D. at Agra to paint the Vijñaptipatra (letter of invitation) which this Sangha sent to its religious preceptor Vijayasen Sūri.

P. 13. The Saints of the Jaina faith, carry out an ideal of "ahimsa" to the utter most limit. Ultimately, their death by sheer inanition brings them to the condition of pure non-injury. Jaina art often represents these saints with creepers growing up round their legs and hands, to indicate how rigorously they have kept themselves from moving. But the art made figures show externally no trace of their privations. They do not appear emaciated or worn. They were the ideal, heroically rounded forms of perfect manhood, which reveal their spiritual, not their physical nature.

P. 18. Vivid description in a Jain text of the Guild of painters; the colours, the designs.

P. 63. The sculpture which survives on the hundreds of great Hindu and Jain temples, was once painted—deep relief painted in vivid colours is the ideal Indian artistic method. Practically nothing of all this colour remains.

P. 64. The Jain faith—Jain temples do not differ in general pattern from Hindu temples. The hallow in the main shrine is an image of a Jain "Tirthankara". But the rest of the fabric, with its tracery of heavenly beings and transcendental symbolism, can easily be mistaken for Hindu.

Like the Buddhists, the Jain shared a common background of Indian religious and daily life with the Hindu masses. Like them they believe in continuous reincarnation. The basic principle of Jainism is "ahimsā" non-injury. The Jain believes that to the utmost of his powers, he must avoid doing an injury to any living being. The ordinary man, without a very profound religious sense, takes little care. The Jain "Tirthankaras" are the heroes of the faith canonically seven in number, who set the highest example to the whole Jain community by carrying ahimsā to its logical end, voluntary suicide by desiccation in a state of total immobility. The images of the Jain Tirthankara is always rigidly frontal, absolutely symmetrical, and naked. Sometimes as a witness to the hero's saintly immobility, creepers have grown up his legs and twined themselves round his arms. Typically of Indian art, the Jain image does not represent the saint as he must have looked, ravaged by his asceticism, but in his spiritual guise of heroic beauty.

Total sanctity can only be achieved after many, many life times of steady progress. But through out history, and still at the present day, Jain saints attain their voluntary suicides. (Incidentally the element of Jainism in Gandhi's political thinking was very important). Pillars or "Towers of fame", were erected to commemorate these events. The saint who achieves this goal is regarded as having gained final release from the endless cycle of birth, suffering and death. Beyond that Jain doctrine does not go. But it shares with the Sāṃkhya tradition of Brahmanical philosophy the belief that the released spiritual entities remain distinct entities and are many. It rejects the Vedantic doctrine that released beings are absorbed in the monadic Brahman. Jain life and Jain thought have accepted much of the same fundamental vision of the Cosmic order and mythology as popular Hinduisim. Whereas Buddhism derogates belief in the heavens and hells, dismissing them as illusory, Jainism accepts them simply as part of the endless cycle of material existence from which the serious man will disentangle himself as speedily as possible by absolute ahimsā. Thus imagery of the Hindu cosmic order could find in the structure of a Jain temple with scarcely any modification.

Pp. 66-67. Pallava (VIIIth C.). In the Jain cave at Sittannavāsai the Pallava painting that survives illustrates fields of lotus flowers, heavenly resting places provided by the Gods for ascetic sains on their lifelong pilgrimage. The figures are in much faded earth colours, greens and browns with little modelling. The fields have no geography, no real up nor down. The space is underfined and limitless. Among the decorative motives is the sinuous lotus setern which symbolises the creative sap of life (plate P. 66).

P. 70. Ellora (VIIIth—IXth C.). There are several surviving fragments of painting on plaster, on the ceilings of the Jain caves. The Jain cave 33 Indrasabha, the well known processional brieze above a series of panels represents a ferocious deity riding a bufallow with attendants. They are very few and simple ornaments here; the joints of the body are flat angles; the hair of the attendants is still simply dressed. All the personages stand on the base line of the picture, and the grounds are filled with cloud patterns.

Pp. 78-79. At Tiruparuttikundram, in 14th century Jain temple, survives a portion of an extensive decorative scheme, painted on walls, pillars, brackets and especially the ceiling; pictures belong to the late 14th century; much repainted in the later Vijayanagar epoch. These paintings are perhaps the most important documents bearing on the growth of medieval painting in India. Although it was a Jain establishment not all the paintings are subjects. Life of Krishna and other Gods familiar in Hinduism with the exception of frontal icons of the Tirthankaras, the heads of the figures are all shown in profile, with spanning the cheek, a long, painted conceptional eye whose upper eyelid is drawn in. Description of methods etc.

Plate P. 79. (An incident in the life of a Jain saint).

Mediaeval Manuscript painting. The Western India Mss. mainly of the Jain faith; preserved since the 11th century. The illuminations are of three Chief types; first, narrative; second, schematic representations of the transcendant regions with their population of deities; third, pure ornament. The earliest illuminations (in a Ms. dated 1100 A. D.) are decorative panels, elephant riders, and Apsarās. In later Mss, the figure drawings represent laymen listening to sermons, Goddesses, monks and stories of the lines of saints; style and methods described. Figure drawing of these early miniatures is reminiscent of that in the Jain caves at Ellora.

Paper introduced by Ca. 1400 for these Mss. by 1600 the style almost completely eclipsed by Moghul and Rajput forms of album—painting. During the 19th century painted cotton temple hangings continued to be made in a style visibly described from the Mss. tradition such hanging had been made sine the 17th century.

Almost all the inscriptions studied in this article are Jainas. Here is the enumeration of them :

Nos.	Locality.	Date A. D.	Object.
1.	Mulgund	Śaka 825	Construction of a temple by a merchant.
2.	Saundatti	Śaka 798 and 1019	Construction of a temple by the Rāṣṭrakūṭa Kṛṣṇarājadeva, and donations by the Raṭṭas Prthvirama on the one hand and Kannakaira II on the other hand.
3.	Saundatti	Śaka 903	Construction and endowment of a temple by the Raṭṭa Śāntivarman.
4.	Saundatti	Śaka 903	Mutilated inscription of the time of Kārtavīrya 2k.
5.	Kalholi	Śaka 1127	Donations by Kārtavīrya IV.
6.	Saundatti	Śaka 1151	Sivaite inscription, but containing a clause relating to the Jains.
7.	Kopūr	Śaka 1009 and 1043	Donations by the Raṭṭa Kannakaira II and by Jayakarna, son of Vikramāditya VI.

The text of these inscriptions is reproduced and an integral translation of them is given.

Four other inscriptions are the object of a short review. Three of them belong to the time of Kārtavīrya IV.

K. T. TELANG. Three Kādamba Copper plates : with Remarks (Journal of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Vol. XII, Pp. 300-324). Bombay, 1877.

Historical study of M. TELANG on the Kādambas leading to the following conclusions :

1. The Kādamba dynasty was divided into two branches : that of Goa and that of Vanavāsi.
2. The Princes of the branch of Vanavāsi reigned, in all probability, before the 5th century of the Christian era.
3. They professed the Jaina faith.

Text and translation, with facsimiles, of three inscriptions recalling some grants to the Jaina temples. The donors were the Kādamba princes Mrigeśavarman, son of Śāntisarman, and Devavaraman, son of Kṛṣṇavarman. Both of them belonged to the branch of Vanavāsi.

Researches on the religion to which Aśoka belonged. This religion was the Buddhism. The Jains already existed in the 3rd century before the Christian era, and they were mentioned in the inscriptions of Aśoka under their ancient name of Nirgrantha. But one possesses now not any proof of the fact except that they would have been patronised by one of the kings of the Mauryas dynasty. On the contrary, it has been established by evidence that Aśoka, Daśaratha and the other later Maurya princes were Buddhists or patrons of the Buddhism.

LEWIS RICE. Mysore inscriptions translated. Bangalore, 1879.

Pp. XVII—XXIV. Schematic description of the Jaina inscription in the province of Mysore. They include, in general, the following elements :

1. Engraved figure : the image of a Tirthankara.
2. Prefatory verses : they are very often the following : “Śrīmat-parama-gambhīra-syādvādāmoḡha-añchanam. “Jyoti Trailokya-nāthasya śāsanam Jīna śāsanam””.
3. Name of the reigning sovereign, and sometimes his genealogy ; this part is drawn up in Sanskrit mixed with Canara.
4. Information concerning the office governing the district in the same way as the donor.
5. Date.
6. Description of the complete gift ; here the Canara is generally used.
7. Quotation of good morals in Sanskrit or in Canara,

Pp. XXVII-LXXXIV. Historical ideas relating to Mysore. Information furnished by an ancient Jaina Rāmāyana, composed in Canara in about 12th century. A Jain of the name of Nāganandin was the guru of three princes of the Gaṅga dynasty: Kṣṣa Vallabhārāya, Govindārāya and Caturbhūja Kanaradeva. The successor of the last, Tiruvikramadeva (178—188 A.D.) abandoned the Jaina faith and was made sevait. In 788 A.D., Akalaṅka, a Jain of Śrāvāṇa Belgōla, disputes with the Buddhists in presence of Hemasthala, king of Kāncī.

Destruction of the Jaina temples of Lakṣmeśvar by the Colas under the rule of Someśvara I, of the dynasty of the Cālukyas (1040—1069 A.D.).

The most ancient princes of the Hoysāḷa dynasty, who reigned at Mysore from the 10th to the 14th century, were Jains. Bittideva, prince of the Hoysāḷa dynasty, was converted from the Jainism to the Visnuism, probably in 1117. He had for ministers two brothers—Mariyānc and Bharateśvara, professed the Jaina faith.

Pp. LXXXVI—LXXXVIII. The Jainism at Mysore. Bhadrabāhu, in anticipation of a famine, emigrate from Ujjain towards the south of India. He dies at Śrāvāṇa Belgōla. He must have lived 170 years after the death of Mahāvīra, that is to say towards 357 A.D. His disciple is the Emperor Candragupta. Viśākhmunī, whom Bhadrabāhu, while dying, had charged with conducting the Jaina emigrants, regains the North when the famine is terminated. On his way, he meets Candragupta who makes to him the recital of the last moments of Bhadrabāhu. Notes on the first Jaina establishments at Mysore and on the colossal statue of Gomateśvara at Śrāvāṇa Belgōla.

J. BURGESS and Bhagwānlāl INDRAJĪ. Inscriptions from the Cave—temple of Western India (Archaeological Survey of Western India, Miscellaneous Publications, No. 10). Bombay, 1881.

Pp. 98—100. Inscriptions of the Jaina grottos of Elūra.

1. Chota Kailāsa. A statue mutilated from the head bears an inscription dates Śaka 1169 (1247 A. D.) and recalling that the statue has been offered by a person native of Vardhanapura.

2. Indra Sabbā—(a) on a pillar, an image of Tīrthankara with inscription in old Nāgari of the 9th or 10th century, according to which the image is the work of Nāgavarman; (b) on a colossal statue would be that of Śāntinātha and the work of Sohila,

3. Colossal statue of Pārśvanātha on the top of a hill. Reproduction, and translation by BÜHLER, of the inscription engraved on this statue and dated 1234-1235 A. D.

H. DHURVA. The Dohad inscription of the Chaulukya King Jayasimha-Dava. (Indian Antiquary, Vol. X, Pp. 158—161). Bombay, 1881.

Mention of a mutilated inscription, dated Samvat 1231, and engraved on the pedestal of small Jaina statues.

Bhagwānlāl INDRAJĪ and J. BURGESS. The Kahaun Inscription of Skandagupta. (Indian Antiquary, Vol. X, Pp. 125-126). Bombay, 1881.

Facsimile, text and translation, accompanied by remarks, of an inscription recalling that in the year 141 after the death of Skandagupta, a certain Madra raised the statue of five Tīrthankaras, in the same way as the pillar bearing the said inscription.

663 (1)

E. HULTZSCH. Two Inscriptions from General Cunningham's Archaeological Reports. (Indian Antiquary, Vol. XI, Pp. 309—313). Bombay, 1882.

One of these two inscriptions reviewed by M. HULTZSCH is a Jaina inscription, dated the year 106 of the Gupta era, and recalling the erection of a statue in honour of Pārśvanātha.

In his second article, P. 143 and especially note 5, BÜHLER established that Mahāvira was the contemporary of Buddha and that he was called Nirgrantha Jñātraputra.

H. DHURVA. A Copper plate Grant of King Trilochanapāla Chaulukya of Lāṭadeśa, (Indian Antiquary, Vol. XII, Pp. 196—205). Bombay, 1883.

Review on the origin of the Caulukyas, mainly according to the Kumarapala-carita, of Jayasimhadevasūri who lived towards the 14th century.

K. B. PATHAK. A note on the early Kādamba Inscriptions. (Indian Antiquary, Vol. XIV, Pp. 12—14). Bombay, 1885.

Note on the controversy that took place between the Jains and the Brahmins with respect to the question of the sacrifices after the nirvāṇa of the Tirthankara Munisuvrata.

The Jains are formally opposed to all sacrifices. Quotation of a passage from the Uttarapurāṇa on this subject.

Rajendralāla MITRA. Note on a Sanskrit Inscription from the Lalitpur District. (Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Vol. LII, Pp. 67—80). Calcutta, 1883.

Study of an inscription in Sanskrit found around the fort of Deogadh, It is dated Samvat 1481 and Śaka 1346-1424 A.D. (13th April), and was composed by a Jain of the name of Vardhamāna. It recalls the dedication on the order of the pontiff Śubhachandra, and under the care of a master named Holī, of a statue in honour of the pontiff Padamanandin predecessor of Śubhachandra.

Bhagwānlāl INDRAJĪ. A new Yādava Dynasty (Indian Antiquary, Vol. XII, Pp. 119—129). Bombay, 1884.

Study of two inscriptions where there is a talk of Yādava dynasty till then unknown. The second of these inscriptions has been discovered in a Jain temple in ruin at Anjaneri, to the south-west of Nasik. It is in Sanskrit, in prose mixed with verse, and dated Śaka 1063. It recalls that the king Seṇacandra III, of this Yādava dynasty, made together with two rich merchants, a grant in favour of the temple of Candraprabha. A plate out of text reproduces this inscription.

Lewis RICE. A Rāṣṭrakūṭa Grant from Mysore. (Indian Antiquary, Vol. XII, Pp. 11—19). Bombay, 1883.

Study, text accompanied by a facsimile and translation of an inscription in Sanskrit, dated Śaka 735 found at Kaḍaba in Mysore. This inscription recalls the gift of the village of Jālamāṅgala to a muni named Arkakīrti in favour of the Jaina temple of Śilāgrāma, where the Jains were formerly very numerous.

Lewis RICE. A Jaina-Vaiṣṇava Compact (Indian Antiquary, Vol. XIV, Pp. 233—235). Bombay, 1885.

Text and translation of a Canara inscription of Śravaṇa Belgoḷa dated Śaka 1290, and known under the name of 'Śārasa' of Rāmānujācāri.

In this inscription, it is said that there is no difference between the Viṣṇuite 'darśana' and the Jaina 'darśana'. The author shows that in this case, the word 'darśana' does not signify "doctrine", but it relates to the processions made in honour of a god.

Lewis RICE. The Gaṅga Inscriptions in Coorg (Indian Antiquary, Vol. XIV, Pp. 76-77). Bombay, 1885.

Text and translation of an inscription of Śaka 899, recalling a gift to Anantaviryaya, disciple of Guṇasena, himself disciple of Virasena. This inscription is no other than the first of the three "Koṅḡ Inscriptions" published by F. KITTEL.

K. B. PĀTHAK. An Old Kanarese Inscription at Terdal. (Indian Antiquary, Vol. XIV, Pp. 14—26). Bombay, 1885.

Text, translation and study of an inscription discovered in a Jaina temple at Terdal, in the southern Canara. This inscription comprises three parts :

I. Grant to the Tirthankara Neminātha, in Śaka 1045. This first part enables to establish the approximate date to which was composed the "Raghavapāṇḍavya". This work is due to Śrutakīrti Traividya, a contemporary of Abhinava

Pampa. But the latter lived towards Śaka 1076, according to the information furnished by Meghacandra in his commentary on the "Samādhisataka", and by Viranandin, son of Meghacandra, in his "Acāraśāra".

II. Grant to the same Neminātha, in Śaka 1104, by the masters of the sect Virabhaṇḍju. This sect is known by several inscriptions, and its members were generally the worshippers of the goddess Padmāvatī.

III. Grant to the same Tīrthankara, in Śaka 1109. Mention of the Kuṇḍakunḍa anvaya. Kuṇḍakunḍa or Koṇḍakunḍa is one of the most celebrated Jaina authors. One attributes to him the "Prābhritasāra", the "Pravacanasāra," the "Samayasāra", the "Rayaṇasāra" and the "Dvādaśānuprekṣā". According to the commentary of Bālacandra on the "Prābhritasāra", Kuṇḍakunḍa was called still Padmanandin. He was probably contemporary of the king Mṛigeśavarman, of the dynasty of the ancient Kādambas. At this period, the Jains were divided in Nirgranthas and Svetapūṣas, and Kuṇḍakunḍa was an adversary of the latter.

Bhagwānāl INDRAJĪ. The Hāthigumphā and three other Inscriptions in the Udayagiri Caves near Cuttack (Actes du VI Congress international des Orientalistes III Partie, Section II, Pp. 135—179). Leide, 1885.

Introduction :

1. The Swastika.—The Jains call this symbol 'Sāthio'. It constitutes the distinctive mark of Supārśva, the seventh Tīrthankara. It is a symbol of happy omen for it is the emblematical figure of a Siddha.
2. The Tīrthankaras, like the Buddhas, have each their tree of the Bodhi. That of Mahāvīra is a banyan tree, that of Rīṣabha a rāyana (Mimusops Kauki), and that of Neminātha a mango tree.
3. The Jains, like the Buddhists, have a cult for the stūpas. Description, with plate out of text, of the Jaina stūpa of Mathura ; it contains six lines of inscription which have been transcribed and translated.

Inscriptions :

Facsimiles, text, Sanskrit transcription and translation of 4 inscriptions proceeding from the grottoes of Khaṇḍagiri, in Orissa. The most important of these inscriptions is that called Hāthigumphā. It is most probably Jaina, for it begins by the celebrated formula of homage used by the Jains. It recalls the works accomplished by the king Khāravela. It is dated of the year 165 of the Maurya era, that Bhagwānāl INDRAJĪ identifies with the year 90 B.C., in taking for the point of departure of the era in question the eight year of Aśoka.

G. BÜHLER. On the authenticity of the Jaina tradition (Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes, Vol. I, Pp. 165—180). Wien, 1887.

The Jainism is not a detached branch of the Buddhism. Analytical study of 6 inscriptions of Mathura published by A. CUNNINGHAM, "Archaeological Survey of India", Reports, Vol. III, Pl. XIII—XV. Comparison of the contents of these inscriptions with the chronological datum of the Kalpasūtra. This investigation shows the antiquity of the Jainism and proves that the Jaina monks formed already an organised order at Mathura between the years 5 and 98 of the Indo-scythian era, that is to say between the years 83—176 A. D., if the Indo-scythian era is identical with the Śaka era.

J. F. FLEET. Corpus inscriptionum indicarum. Vol. III. Inscriptions of the early Gupta kings and their successors. Calcutta, 1888.

Introduction.

P. 16. The existence of the Jains in the 4th century of the Christian era is proved by two inscriptions Nos. 61 and 15.

P. 32. No. 2. Śīlāṅka, in his commentary on the "Ācārāṅgasūtra" (Ācāraṅga), has confused twice the Gupta and the Śaka eras. Study of these two passages.

Inscription No. 15.

(Pp. 65—68 and plate IX, A.)

Inscription on a column of stone at Kahāun. This pillar is decorated with five statues representing naked and standing, five Tirthankaras, namely: Ādinātha, Śāntinātha, Neminātha, Pārśvanātha and Mahāvīra. The inscription recalls that these five statues have been created by a certain Madra. Date: 460-461 A.D.; Language: Sanskrit.

Inscription No. 61.

(Pp. 258—260 and plate XXXIII-A).

Inscription in a grotto at Udayagiri. It recalls the installation of a statue of Pārśvanātha. Date: 425-426 A.D.; Language: Sanskrit.

Lewis RICE. (Epigraphia Carnatica. Vol. II.) Inscriptions at Śravaṇa Belgōla. Bangalore, 1889.

This work is of a capital importance for the history of the Jainism. It comprises four principal sections.

Introduction :

Text of the inscriptions in Latin characters ;

Translation of the inscriptions ;

Text of the inscriptions in Canara characters.

To these four parts, it is proper to add a list of inscriptions with summary of each of them.

Introduction.

Pages.

1. Description of Śravaṇa Belgōla.
- 1-2. Episode of Bhadrabāhu coming from the north to be settled in this locality and died there towards 290 B. C.
- 3-15. Tradition relating to Bhadrabāhu and to his establishment at Śravaṇa Belgōla, according to a compendium of Jain history, entitled "Rajavālikathe", and drawn up in Canara, in the last century, by Devacandra. Tradition relating to the emperor Candragupta, disciple of Bhadrabāhu—critical study of the chronological harmony between Bhadrabāhu and Candragupta.
- 15-17. Notes on the Jain suicide by deprivation of food (Sallekhana).
- 17-18. Description of the temple of Candragupta.
- 22-23. Historical ideas on Camuṇḍarāya, minister of the king Rājamalla, of the Gaṅga dynasty. It is this minister who caused to raise the colossal statue of Gomateśvara (towards Śaka 905—983 A.D.).
- 24-25. Historical ideas and legends on Gomata.
- 29-33. Description of the colossal statue of Gomateśvara, and reviews on the two analogous statues of Kārkaḷa and of yēnūr.
36. Reviews on the philosophical doctrine of the "Syādvāda",

Besides these informations of general order, the introduction has for object the historical study of the principal inscriptions. It contains in this title some very precious ideas on a great number of Jaina masters.

G. BÜHLER. New Jaina inscriptions from Mathura. (Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes, Vol. IV, Pp. 169—173). Wien, 1890.

Review on the inscriptions discovered at Mathura, in 1890, by Dr. FUHRER. These are short inscriptions recalling some grants. They concern the period between the years 5 and 86 of the Indo-scythian (Śaka ?) era, may be 83—164 A.D. They mark out the following schools :

Vāraṇa gaṇa' with two of his kulas, the Aryyacetiya and the Puṣyamitriya; Koṭṭiya gaṇa, and his subdivisions, the Thāṇiya kula and the Vairā śakha, of one part, and the Brahmādāsika Kula and the Ucenāgari śakha, of other part. These inscriptions prove, besides, the existence of nuns in the Jaina community.

G. BÜHLER. Further proofs of the Authenticity of the Jaina Tradition (Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes. Vol. II, Pp. 141—147; Vol. III, Pp. 233—240; Vol. IV, Pp. 313—331). Wien, 1888-1890.

1. A new Jaina inscription, dated in the year 7 of Kaniṣka. Facsimile out of text, transcription and translation of an inscription of Mathura.

Date: 7th year of the reign of Kaniṣka, that is to say (if the question is of the Śaka era) end of the year 85 A.D. It is a Jaina inscription which proves the existence in this period at Mathura, of the Uddeha gaṇa and of the first branch of this school, the Nāgabdhūta Kula.

II. Four new Jaina inscriptions from the Kaṅkālī Tīlā. Text, transcription and historical study of 4 inscriptions coming from Mathura.

2. Śaka 84 (A.D. 162). Mention of the Koṭṭiya gaṇa sthāniya Kula, Vairā Śakha and Sriguha sambhoga.

3. Saka 95 (A.D. 173). Same statements as in the preceding inscriptions, except the sambhoga.

4. Without date. Mention of the Vāraṇa gaṇa, Kaniyasika Kula. These informations on the Jaina schools have been reconciled with the information furnished by the Kalpasūtra. Besides, the inscription in No. 2 shows that the cult of Sarasvatī was considered as orthodox by the Śvetāmbaras in the 2nd century. At last the identification of the era of the Indo-Scythian kings with the Śaka era is regarded by BÜHLER as "perfectly possible".

III. Statistic of the Jaina inscriptions brought to light at Mathura upto 1890.

Information furnished by these inscriptions on the organisation of the Jaina order. General comparison with the ideas of the "Kalpasūtra". Systematic list of the schools, monks and nuns, whose names have been quoted in the inscriptions. General deductions.

1. Importance of the Koṭṭiya gaṇa often mentioned.

2. The inscriptions recall always a series of successive Jaina masters, that proves how much the tradition was respected in the community.

3. The names quoted in the inscriptions offer the most perfect resemblance with those of the "Kalpāsūtra".

4. At last it is confirmed that the Jains admitted the nuns in their order.

5. Considerations on the laic adepts of the Jainism; the names that they bear and the casts to which they belong.

6. Cult of Sarasvatī among the Jains.

7. Cult of the Tirthankaras.

8. Adoration of the stūpas.

9. Remarks on the language of the inscriptions.

10. At the commencement of the Christian era, the Jains were already divided into Śvetāmbaras and Digambaras.

1. Śaka 22 (A.D. 100). Mention of Vṛana gana, Petivāmika Kula.

J. F. FLEET. Sanskrit and old Canarese Inscriptions. (Indian Antiquary, Vol. IV-a—XX). Bombay, 1875—1891.

Introduction.

Importance of the inscriptions collected in the Canara districts for the history of the country since the middle of the 5th century A.D. upto about 14th century.

As regards the language, these inscriptions form three groups:

1. Inscriptions in Sanskrit; 5th—9th centuries ;

2. Inscriptions mixed with Sanskrit and old Canara, with predominance of the latter; 9th—11th centuries.

3. Inscriptions in old Canara ; 11th century and following :

G. BÜHLER. New Excavations in Mathura. (Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes. Vol. V, Pp. 59—63). Wien, 1891.

Study of some inscriptions of Mathura.

I. Inscription of Śaka 78 (156 A. D.) recalling the gift of a statue of the Arhat Nandīavarta which was erected at Mathura, to the stūpa "Built by the Gods" "thuṣe devanirmite", by order of Vṛiddhahastin, of the Koliya (Kotṭiya) gaṇa, Vairā (Vajra) śākhā.

The Arhat Nandīavarta must be the Tirthankara Aranātha, thus designated by its particular symbol, the diagram "nandīavarta". This inscription is important because it bears witness to the cult of the stūpas to the Jains from a period so remote that already, at Mathura, it was lost into the legend.

II. Another inscription mentions a king of the name of Hukṣa (perhaps Huvikṣa or Huvikṣa).

III. In a third inscription, probably of 430 A.D., the name of the monk Datilācārya, and that of the Vidyādhāri śākhā of the kotṭiya gaṇa have been raised again.

Remarks on some other epigraphical fragments.

G. BÜHLER. Dr. Fuhrer's Excavations at Mathura. Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes, Vol. V, Pp. 176—180). Wien, 1891.

Study of several Jaina inscriptions discovered at Mathura in January and February, 1891.

I. Inscription in ancient Prākṛit and dating about 150 years before the Christian era. It recalls the gift of a monumental arch to a temple.

II. Inscription from the commencement of the Christian era, commemorating the construction of a temple.

The first of these documents show that a Jaina temple constructed at Mathura 150 years before the Christian era ; but it would be unjust to conclude that this temple was one of the two discovered under the Kankālī Tīlā.

III. A third inscription furnished the proof that it was worked at Mathura from one era previous to the Śaka era. It quotes, besides, the name of a royal lady, Āyavattī or Āryavattī, which is to be met with again in the Jaina legends.

IV. Mention of the Vacchaliya Kula, branch of the Koḍiya gaṇa (?).

V. Mention of the Vāraṇa gaṇa and of the Nāḍika or Nāḍik Kula corresponding undoubtedly to the Mālija Kula of the "Kalpasūtra".

VI. Mention of an 'Ayyabhyista Kula' of the Vāraṇa gaṇa.

VII & VIII. Inscriptions relating to some statues of Tīrathankaras. Concise description of some sculptures. One of these represents some Kinnaras and some Suparṇas adoring a stūpa..

XVII. The Jaina inscription in the temple of Baijnāth at Kīrgrāma.—
G. BÜHLER.

Two lines of inscription, in Jaina-nāgarī characters on the pedestal of a statue of Mahāvīra, given by two merchants, Dolhana and Ālhaṇa, and consecrated by Devabhadra, disciple of Abhayadeva,, of the spiritual issue of Jinavallabha, Saṃvat 1296.

XVIII. On the pedestal of an image of Pārśvanātha, in the Kangra Bazar.
G. BÜHLER.

Mutilated inscription of eight lines, recalling the descentance of a sūri of the name of Abhayacandra. 854 A.D. (?)

XIX. Inscriptions from Khajurāho. F. KIELHORN.

3. Inscriptions from a Jaina temple of the year 1011. Eleven lines in Sanskrit and in Nāgarī characters. The inscription, mixed with verse and with prose, is found in the temple of Jinanātha at Khajurāho. It recalls the gifts made by a certain Pāhila.

6—8. Three inscriptions from images in the Jaina temples—(a) A single line recalling a name, Sanskrit in Nāgarī characters (b) A line, recalling diverse names, Sanskrit in Nāgarī characters, samvat 1205. (c) Same characters. Samvat 1215. Recall the erection of a statue.

XXXVII. Prasasti of the temple of Vāḍḍipura—Pārivanātha at Pattana. G. BÜHLER.

Inscription of 52 lines in ordinary Jaina-Nāgarī characters. The language is of the incorrect Sanskrit mixed with Guzerati and with some Arabic and Persian words. In prose, except the commencement. Samvat 1651.

The lines 4—40 constitute paṭṭavali of the Kharatara sect. Twenty-four religious chiefs of this school have been enumerated, from Uddyotanasūri to Jina chandrasūri, sixth of the name.

XLIII. New Jaina inscriptions from Mathura. G. BÜHLER.

Text and translation of 57 inscriptions discovered at Mathura.

These inscriptions belong to the Indo-Scythian period that is to say to the first two centuries of the Christian era. Remarks on the characters with which they are written.

Language : mixed dialect, consisting of Prākṛit and Sanskrit ; grammatical and historical remarks relating to this dialect.

Reviews on the contents of the inscriptions, very important for the history of the sects, sub-sects, of Jaina schools.

XLIV. Further Jaina inscriptions from Mathura. G. BÜHLER.

Text and translation of seven other inscriptions analogous to the precedents.

These two series of inscriptions studied by BÜHLER have been reproduced in facsimiles out of the text due to Dr. FÜHRER.

Volume II (1894).

V. Inscriptions from Northern Gujarat. J. KIRSTE. Several of these inscriptions mention some pontiffs of the Tapā gaccha. One finds among others the following series :

Hiravijaya (Samvat 1642).

Vijayasena.

Vijayadeva.

Vijayasimha.

VI. The Jaina inscriptions from Śatrunjaya. G. BÜHLER.

Text and analysis of 118 inscriptions of the Jaina temples of the Śatrunjaya. These inscriptions are divided in two series, extending respectively.

From Samvat 1587 to Samvat 1710, and from Samvat 1783 to Samvat 1943. They are of high interest in this that they contain some information on several schools of Jaina monks and on certain subdivisions of laic adepts.

A. Jaina schools.

1. Paṭṭāvalī of the Kharatara gaccha (Inscr. No. 17).
2. Paṭṭāvalī of the Tauā gaccha (Inscr. No. 12).
3. Paṭṭāvalī of the Aṅcala or Vidhipakṣa gaccha (Inscr. Nos. 21 and 27).
4. Paṭṭāvalī of the Sagara gaccha (Inscr. No. 91).
5. Paṭṭāvalī Digambara (Inscr. No. 30). Religious issue of Kuṇḍakuṇḍa, of the Sarasvatī gaccha.

B. Laic sects.

1. Oswāls, with three principal subdivisions : Vṛddhaśākhā, Laghuśākhā, and Addaiśākhā.
2. Śrīmalis, comprising the two branches Vṛddhaśākhā and Laghuśākhā.

XIV. Further Jaina inscriptions from Mathura. G. BÜHLER. Facsimiles, text and translation of 41 inscriptions proceeding from the excavations of Dr. FÜHRER, at Mathura. The results furnished by the study of these inscriptions, concerning the history of the Jainism, are the following :

1. The Jains were established at Mathura before the 2nd century of the Christian era.
2. There existed at Mathura, in 167 A.D., an ancient Jaina stūpa the real origin of which was forgotten.
3. The inscriptions mention of one part, the Vachaliya Kula and the Vidyādhāri Śākhā of the Kottīya (Kotika) gāṇa; of another part, the Nāṭika Kula and the Samakāsiyā Śākhā of the Vāraṇa gāṇa.

XVIII. Dubkund stone Inscription of the Kachchapaghata Vikramasimhar. F. KIELHORN.

Text and study of an inscription in Sanskrit, of Samvat 1145, discovered at Dubkund. It recalls the foundation and the endowment of a Jaina temple, by the prince Vikramasimha, of the Kachchapaghāṭa family.

XIX. Pabhasā Inscriptions. A. FÜHRER. Pabhasā is a village at the south-east of Allahabad. It possesses a modern Jaina temple and three statues carved in the rock, of naked Jinas. A grotto, equally hollowed in the rock, contains two inscriptions probably Jainas, which commemorates the origin of them.

Another inscription, in the same village, recalls the consecration of a statue of Pārivanātha in Saṃvat 1881.

Text, translation and facsimiles out of text of the three inscriptions.

XXIV. Specimens of Jaina sculptures from Mathura. G BÜHLER. Reproduction and description of four sculptural designs coming from Mathura.

I. Āyagapaṭa, "tablet of homage", the central figure of which represents really Pārivanātha.

II. (a) The conception of Mahāvīra; episode of Naigameṣa. Study of the myth of Naigameṣa to the Jains.

(b) Ornamental frieze: On one side of the Suparṇas and of the Kinnaras adorning a stūpa. On the reverse, a pilgrimage to a Jaina sanctuary.

III. Fragment of a torāṇa with varied figures.

IV. A dharma-chakra supported by a trident resting on a lotus, with feminine figures worshipping the sacred symbol.

Volume III (1894-95)

25. Spurious Sudi copper-plate. Grant purporting to have been issued by Butuga in Śaka—Saṃvat 860. Inscription in Sanskrit written in old Canara characters. Gift of territory, by the prince Butuga, of the Gaṅga dynasty, to a Jaina temple, which his wife had caused it to be constructed at Sūṇḍi (Sūḍi) Śaka 860. Facsimile out of text.

26. Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa Epitaph of Malliṣeṇa, after, Śaka—Saṃvat 1050. E. HULTZSCH. This inscription bears the No. 54 in the collection of the "Inscriptions at Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa" of M. Lewis RICE.

The characters are Canaras. The language is Sanskrit except the last two lines which are in Canara. It recalls the death, as a result of prolonged fasting, of the Jaina master Malliṣeṇa or Malladhāri, in Śaka (1050=(1129 A.D.). It contains the list of 40 Digambara masters, from Mahāvīra upto Malliṣeṇa himself. Facsimile out of text.

27. Kolhapur inscription of the Silahara Vijayāditya. Śaka—Saṃvat 1065. F. KIELHORN.

Inscription in Sanskrit and old Canara. Old Canara characters. Gift in favour of the Jaina sanctuary of Hāvina Heritage, district of Ājiragekholla,

This temple had been founded by a certain Vāsudeva, disciple of the chief • priest of the temple of Kolhāpur, Naghanandin, of the Deśigaṇa. Pustaka gaccha.

28. Bamani inscription of the Silahara Vijayaditya, Śaka-samvat 1073. F. KILHORN.

Inscription in Sanskrit and old Canara. Old Canara characters. Gift in favour of the Jaina sanctuary of Maḍalūr.

Volume IV (1896-97)

2. Śravaṇa Belgoḷa Epitaph of Prabhāchandra. J. F. FLEET. Grand inscription in Sanskrit (L. RICE, Inscriptions at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa No. 1) commemorating the death of a Jaina master of the name of Prabhācandra, the date has not been indicated, but it could not be more remote than the year 750 A.D. Facsimile, transcription and translation.

14. Jaina rock inscriptions at Pañcapāṇḍavamalai. V. VENKAYA. Two inscriptions engraved in a grotto of the hill called Pañcapāṇḍavamalai at the south-west of Arcot. They are both in Tamoul. The one recalls that the image of divinity was carved in the rock, and the second mentions a gift. A plate out of text reproduces the sculptures of the grotto.

15. Jaina rock inscriptions at Vallimalai. E. HULTSCH. Four inscriptions in a grotto with Jaina sculptures, at Vallimalai in the northern district of Arcot.

1. Inscription in Canara and in grantha characters. Recalls the foundation of a Jaina sanctuary by a king of the name of Rājamalla, of an unknown dynasty. Without date.

2. Inscription in Canara characters and in Canara language mentions the sculptures of an image.

3. Inscription in grantha characters and in Canara language. Identifies and engraved image.

4. Like the previous one, this inscription identifies an image. It is in Canara language and characters. A plate out of text reproduces the sculptures of the grotto.

Some facsimiles of an inscription of Pañcapāṇḍavamalai and of two of Vallimalai have been given in another plate.

44. Three inscriptions for Northern India. F. KILHORN. The first only of these three inscriptions is Jaina. It came from a temple of Deogarh, in the central India. It is in Sanskrit and recalls that the pillar on which it is engraved was created near a temple of Śāntinātha by Deva, disciple of Kamaladeva, in Śaṃvat 919.

4th. Kadaba plates of Prabhutavarsha. H. LUDERS. Inscription in Sanskrit discovered at Kadaba in the district of Tumkur.

Gift to the Jain master Arkakīrti, by the King Prabhutavarṣa (Govinda III), of the village of Jalamāṅgala in favour of the temple of Jinendra at Śilāgrāma. Śaka 735.

Volume V (1898-99).

18. Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa Epitaph of Mārasimha II. J.F. FLEET. N. 38 of the Inscriptions at Śravaṇa Belgoḷa of M. Lewis Rice. Inscription in Sanskrit and in Canara characters. Panegyric of the prince Mārasimha, of the Ganga dynasty, who abdicated the throne, made himself religious Jain and let himself die of starvation at Bankāpur, in the district of Dhārwaḍ. The date, not mentioned, perhaps placed in 975 A.D. Facsimile out of text, transcription and translation.

25. Inscriptions at Ablur. J.F. FLEET. Two inscriptions in Canara of the year about 1200 A.D. and coming from Ablur, district of Dhārwaḍ, are particularly interesting.

They are the inscriptions indicated by the letters E and F. They contain some information on the origin of the Lingāyats and on the controversy of the Jains with the promoter of this sect, Ekāntada Rāmāyā.

A facsimile of E has been given out of text.

Volume VI (1900-01).

1. Aihole inscription of Pulikeśin II. F. KIELHORN. Inscription of Śaka 556, in the temple called Meguti at Aihole. Sanskrit in characters of the south. This inscription is a poem in which Ravikīrti recalls that he founded the temple in honour of Jinendra, and makes panegyric of the Cālukya dynasty, and in particular of the king Pulikeśin II, under whom he was living.

Facsimile, transcription and translation.

2. Konnur spurious inscription of Amoghavarsha I. F. KIELHORN. Text and translation of an inscription in Sanskrit and in old Canara characters, coming from Konnur, in the district of Dhārwaḍ. Śaka 782. This inscription comprises two parts. The one recalls a gift from the king Amoghavarsha I in the year 860 A.D. The second part glorifies the Jain religion in the persons of Meghacandra Traividya and of his son Vīraṇandin.

Volume VII (1902-03).

14. Inscriptions on the three Jaina Colossi of Southern India. E. HULTZSCH.

Study of the inscriptions engraved on the three colossal statues of Gomateśvara, at Śravaṇa Belgōla, Kārkāla and Yēṇūr.

I. Statue of Śravaṇa Belgōla.

I. Three lines, the first and the third of which are in Canara and in Canara characters. The third line is the Tamoul translation of the first. The inscription recalls that the minister Cāmuṇḍarāya had the statue created and that Gaṅgarāja had the neighbouring sanctuaries constructed.

II. Two lines in Marāṭhi written in Nāgarī characters. The contents are the same as those of the previous inscription.

II. Statue of Karkāla.

I. Inscription of 15 lines in Sanskrit. Canara characters. Recalls the erection of the statue, in Śaka 1353-1432 A. D. by Vira Pāṇḍya or Pāṇḍyarāya, son of Bhairavendra.

II. Inscription analogous to the precedent, but in Canara in Canara characters, and in Sanskrit in Nāgarī characters.

III. Canara language and alphabet. The inscription recalls the erection of pillar, by Vira Pāṇḍya, in Śaka 1338-1436 A. D.

III. Statue of Yēṇūr

I. Sanskrit verse in Canara characters. Erection of the statue in Śaka 1525-1604 A.D. by Timmarāja, of the family of Cāmuṇḍa.

II. Two Canara verse in Canara characters. Inscriptions analogous to the precedent. All these inscriptions have been translated and the text of them is given. Besides, three plates out of text represent the colossal statues and give the facsimile of the two inscriptions, of Śravaṇa Belgōla.

15. Two Jaina inscriptions of Irugappa. F. HULTZSCH.

A. Inscription in Tamoul and in grantha characters, engraved in the temple of Vardhamāna at Tirupparuttikkunru near Conjeeveram. It recalls that the minister Irugappa made gift of a village to this temple. The dates corresponds to 1382 A. D.

B. Inscription of the same origin as the precedent. In Sanskrit verses and grantha characters. Recalls that some constructions were added to the temple by the same Irugappa. The date corresponds to 1387-88 A.D. Text in transcription and translation.

25. Kalucumbarru grant of Vijayāditya Amma II. J.F. FLEET. Inscription in Sanskrit and the characters of the South, without date. Recalls the gift of the village of Kalucumbarru, in the province of Attilinandu, by the King Chālukya Amma II, to a Jaina master named Arhanandin and belonging to the Valahari gṇa, Addakali gaccha. Transcription and translation

Volume VIII.—Parts I-III (1905).

4. Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa inscription of Irugappa. H. LUDERS. Inscription in Sanskrit and in Canara characters. Date : 1422 A. D.

It recalls that the minister Irugappa, whose genealogy has been related, made a gift of the village of Belgoḷa in honour of Gomateśvara, and in presence of the ascetic Śrutamuni.

Text and translation.

10. Kārkaḷa inscription of Bhairava II. H. KRISHNA ŚASTRI. Inscription in Sanskrit and in Canara. Canara characters. Śaka 1508.

On the advice of Lalitakīrti, of the Deśigaṇa, the king Bhairava II (Santara) constructed and endowed the temple called Caturmukha-bastī at Kārkaḷa. A plate out of the text represents this temple.

J.F. FLEET. Bhadrabāhu, Chandragupta, and Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa. (Indian Antiquary, Vol. XXI, Pp. 156-160). Bombay, 1892.

The traditions of Śravaṇa Belgoḷa show a relation evident between the name of this locality and the names of Bhadrabāhu and of Candragupta.

Analysis of the inscriptions of Śravaṇa Belgoḷa where there is a talk of Bhadrabāhu and Candragupta. Critical study of the identifications of M. Lewis Rice, relatively to Bhadrabāhu and Candragupta. Examination of the historical information contained in the inscription No. I of Śravaṇa Belgoḷa.

Conclusions : 1. Bhadrabāhu of the inscriptions of Śravaṇa Belgoḷa is not the Śrutakevalin of this name, but Bhadrabāhu II (53 B.C.) ; 2. Candragupta is not the Emperor, but Guptigupta, still called Arhadbalin or Viśākhācārya, disciple of Bhadrabāhu II, and who became pontiff in 31. B.C. ; 3. The emigration of Ujjain towards the south is undoubtedly a historical fact ; but this emigration had not taken place under the direction of Bhadrabāhu II.

F. KIELHORN. A note on one of the Inscriptions at Śravaṇa Belgōla (Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes, Vol. VII, Pp. 248-251). Wien, 1893.

Comparison of the inscription No. 54 of Śravaṇa Belgōla (Lewis RICE) with an analogous manuscript text.

The manuscript reaction is much more correct than the epigraphical text. It is, also, permitted to believe that both of them are the copies of a previous original manuscript.

E. LEUMANN. Prabhācandra's Epitaph, the oldest Digambara inscription. (Wiener Zeitschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes, Vol. VII, Pp. 382-384). Wien, 1893.

Critical article on the inscription No. 1 of Śravaṇa Belgōla, published by M. Lewis RICE.

I. Corrections to the text.

II. Analysis of the inscription.

The latter recalls two events which belong to some absolutely different periods :

1. *The Jains emigration towards the south, on the advice of Bhadrabāhu. It has made only reference to this first event. It is a matter of historical introduction which is found in other inscriptions.
2. The suicide of Prabhācandra. Properly speaking this second part constitutes the subject of the inscription. Prabhācandra was without any doubt an ascetic of high authority. Perhaps the question is of the Digambara author who lived towards 780 A. D. and whose merits were praised by Jināsena.

J. F. FLEET. Epigraphic Researches in Mysore. (Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland for 1905, Pp. 289—312). London, 1905.

P. 299. The Jaina master Simhanandin can be considered as a historical personage. He should have been contemporary of the prince Gaṅga Śivamara I, that is to say he should have lived towards 755 A.D.

P. 306. The Jaina master of the name of Prabhācandra, whose death is recalled in the grand inscription of Śravaṇa Belgola would be the well known Digambara writer.

P. 307. Another inscription of Śravaṇa Belgola dated 1803 A.D. would make the death of Mahāvira date back to the year 663 B.C.

J. F. FLEET. Note on a Jain inscription at Mathura. (Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland for 1905, Pp. 635—655). London, 1905.

Historical study of a Jaina inscription, without date, in Prākṛit mixed with Sanskrit, found at Mathura and published by BUHLER in the "Epigraphia indica Vol. I". The probable date of this inscription would be 14-13 B.C. It recalls a homage to Vardhamāna from the part of Simitra, wife of Gotiputra, who should have been a Śvetāmbara to the polemic redoubtable against the Digambaras and the Buddhists.

H. LUDERS. 'Jaina Inscriptions at the Temple of Neminātha on Mount Abū'. (Epigraphia Indica, Vol. VIII, No. 21). Calcutta, 1906.

Edition of 32 inscriptions in Sanskrit, springing from the temple of Neminātha, more known under the name of temple of Vastupāla and Tejahapāla, in mount Abū.

The most important of them are the first two, dated Samvat 1287-1330 A.D. They commemorated the construction of the temple by the minister Tejahapāla, whose genealogy has been traced back. They are reproduced in facsimile and the first is translated.

The others recall the embellishment that Tejahapāla brought without cessation to the same temple. They are dated Samvat 1288, 1290 and 1297.

B. GEIGER. 'Chirwā-Inscript aus der zeit des Guhila Fürsten Samarasimha'. 'Wiener ztschrift für die Kunde des Morgenlandes, Vol. XXI, Pp. 143-162). Wien. 1907.

Text and study of an inscription of about 51 in Sanskrit, dated Samvat 1330-1373 A.D. and arising from Chirwā, in the north of Udaipur.

This inscription recalls the reconstruction of two temples dedicated to Śiva. It is not there Jainā but the prajapti of it was composed by Ratnaprabhasuri, of the Chaitra gaṇḍhā (sect of Chitor). The genealogy of this master is recelled in the following manner : Bhadreśvara, Devabhadra, Siddhasena, Jñesvara, Vijayasimha, Bhuvanachandra and Ratnaprabha who had himself for disciple Fārisvachandra.

F. HULTZSCH. 'Maliyapundi grant of Ammaraja II'. (Epigraphia Indica, Vol. IX, No. 6). Calcutta, 1907.

Study of an inscription in Sanskrit, discovered at Madanur in the district of Nellore, and dated Śaka 867 (945 A. D.).

Ammaraja II (Vijayāditya VI), of the Chālukyas of the East, at the request of Durgarāja, superintendent of the royal camp (Kāṭakarāja), made gift of the village of Maliyapundi to a Jainā situated in the south of Dharamapuri. This temple had been founded by Durgarāja, and the management of it belonged to Śrīmandiradeva, disciple of Divākra, himself disciple of Jinanandin, on the Nandi gaṇḍhā and chief of the Kotimaṇḍu (?) gaṇḍhā in the Vāpaniya sangha.

F. KIELHORN. 'The Chahamanas of Naddula'. (Epigraphia Indica, Vol. IX, No. 9). Calcutta, 1907.

Study, according to four inscriptions, on the genealogy of the Chahamanas of Nadula or Nadol, in the State of Jodhpur (Rajputana). This branch of the Cahamanas was founded by the prince Lakṣmaṇa, belonging to the family of Śakambhari.

Inscription A : Inscription in Sanskrit, discovered at Nadol, and dated Saṃvat 1218 (1161 A.D.). It recalls the gift, by the prince Ālhanadeva, of a sum of money, to the temple of Mahāvīra, founded at Nadol and belonging to the Saṇḍeraka gaccha. Text and analysis.

Inscription B : Arising from Nadol. In Sanskrit. Date : Saṃvat 1218. Gift, by Kirtipāla, son of Ālhanadeva, of a sum of money to the temple of Mahāvīra built in the village of Naddulāi. Text and analysis.

Inscription C : Inscription in Sanskrit found on the mount Sundhā, to the north of Jaswantapur, in Rajputana. Date : Saṃvat 1319 (1262 A.D.). This inscription was composed by Jayamaṅgala, belonging to the Brihad gaccha, and disciple of Rāmachandra, himself disciple of Devāchārya. It commemorates diverse pious works of the prince Cacigadeva, whose genealogy has been traced back since the founder of the dynasty Lakṣmaṇa. Text and analysis.

Inscription D : Sivaite inscription in the temple of Achaleśvara on the mount Abū.

F. KIELHORN. Mount Abū Vimla temple inscription of (Vikrama) Samvat 1378. (Epigraphia Indica, Vol. IX, No. 18). Calcutta, 1907.

Facsimile, text and analysis of an inscription in Sanskrit, engraved on stone in the said temple of Vimla, on the mount Abū.

This inscription recalls that the temple in question was constructed in honour of Rīṣabha (Ādinātha), in Saṃvat 1088 by Vimla, minister of the King Chālukya Bhimadeva Ist.

In Saṃvat 1378, the 9th day of the dark fortnight of Jaistha (10 mai 1322 A.D.), this temple was restored by Lālā (Lālīga) and Vījaḍa, who belonged to an ancient family of pious laic adepts. The dedication was accomplished by Jinachandrasūri, successor of Amaraprabhasūri, in the line of masters founded by Dharmasūri, who bore still the name of Dharmaghoṣa and was victorious of Vādichandra and of Guṇachandra.

P. 203. Jainism prevailed in Mysore before the third cent. B.C. and it continued a popular faith during more than a thousand years of the Christian era. It was the State creed in the time of Gangas, of some of the Rāshtrakūṭas and Kalachuryas and of the early Hoysaḷas. Also of the minor states of Punnata, of the Santaras, the early Changalvas and the Kongalvas. But the Chola conquests in 1004, the conversion of the Hoysaḷa King in 1117 and the assassination of the Kalachurya King in 1167 were severe blows to its influence. In an endeavour to accommodate itself to the age, Jina is described in 1151 as Śiva, Brahma, Buddha and Viṣṇu; and for a generation following we find chieftains who were supporters of all the four creeds.

List of Jain hierarchy and the succession of Jain Gurus according to the inscriptions (mentioned) arranged according to date of the first, fifth, eleventh, twelfth, fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

Mallishēṇa Maladhāri, a disciple of Ajitasena.

There were no Brahmanas in the South in the time of Mukkanna Kadamba, the third cent.

P. 206. Śankarāchārya opposed the Jains and revived Śiva worship but in the middle of the twelfth century was established the Lingāyit faith and into this great number of Jains were merged, while Jain images and temples were converted to Linga use.

P. 207. Conversion of King Bīṭṭi Deva (Hoysaḷa) from Jainism to Vaiṣṇavism by Rāmānuja. Bitter animosity continued to exist against the Jains and in 1368 they complained in a body to King Bukka-Rāya of the persecution by the Vaiṣṇavas.

P. 208. From the Vira-Saivas, who had largely superseded the Jains in the west, the latter were exposed to violent opposition. In 1638 an over zealous Lingāyat official stamped a Linga on the pillars of the principal Jain temple at Halebid.

P. 209. The Jain disputant Vidyānanda and his success in various royal courts and his destruction of the Christian faith at Seringapatam.

167. Penukoṇḍa : (Kanarese). Slab placed by the side of the well in the Pārśvanātha temple. Records that it is the tomb stone of Nāgaya, the lay disciple of Jinabhūṣaṇabhāṭṭāraka-Deva.

P. 29. Anantapur dist. Tādpatri taluk.

203. Tādpatri (Kanarese)—On the north-west corner of the prākara of the Rameivasa temple, first stone. A Jain record of Udayāditya, son of Somideva and Kāncelādevi, in Ś. 1120 expired, Kālayukta. The donor resided at Tādpatri. Dr. HULTZSCH suggests that the stone was probably transferred from some Jain building, of which no traces remain.

P. 56. Arcot North dist. Arni taluk.

210. Pūṇḍi (Tamil) : On the west wall of the Jain temple of Ponninātha. A record of Sambūvarāya. Records the building of a Jain temple called Viravira-Jinālaya and the gift of a village to it.

P. 57. Arcot North dist., Arni taluk.

216. Vilappakkam (Tamil) : On a slab lying in front of the Nāganāthesvara temple. A record in the 38th year of the Chola king Mandiraikoṇḍa Parakesarivarman (Parāntaka I). Records the sinking of a well by the female disciple of Ariṣṭanemipīḍarar of Tiruppanmalai i.e., Pañchapāṇḍavamalai), the preceptor of the local Jains.

P. 69. Arcot North dist., Cheyyar taluk.

308. Ukkal (Tamil) : A record of the Chōla king Kō-Rājarājakesarivarman alias Rājarājadeva I, dated in this twenty-fourth year. It deals with defaulters of land revenue in village held by the Brāhmins, the Vaikhānaras and Jains in the Chōla, Pāṇḍya and Toṇḍamandalam countries and authorizes the villagers to confiscate and sell the lands if taxes were unpaid for two full years.

P. 79. Arcot N. Dist., Polur taluk.

383. Tirumalai : (Grantha and Tamil). On the top of the Tirumalai rock. A record in the 12th year of the Chōla king Ko-Parakesarivarman, alias Udaiyar-Rājendra-Chōladeva I (conqueror of Jayasimha). The first part of the inscription describes his conquests. The second part records gift of money for lamp and offerings to a Jain temple on the hill by the wife of a merchant of Malliyūr in karai-vali, a subdivision of Perumbāṇappādi. The Jain temple was evidently founded by Kuṇḍavi, the king's aunt, and was in the pallichchanḍam of Vaigāvūr, in Mugainādu, in Pangalanādu, Jayangonḍa chōlamandalam.

384. On a buried rock between the Gopura and the painted cave. A record in the 12th year of the same Chōla princess and Pallava Queen.

P. 80,385. Do. Do. On a buried rock in front of the Gopura. A record in the 21st year of the Chōla king Korāja-Rājakesarivarman, alias Rājarājadeva I. Records that a certain Guṇavīramunivar built a sluice called after a Jain teacher Gaṇīśekhara maru porchūriyan, the pure master who is said to have been skilled in the elegant arts.

[It is difficult to say who this Guṇavīra Munivar was. Tamil literary tradition speak of (1) Guṇasāgar who composed Yapparungalagārigai whom the Abhidan attributes to Ś.300 ; (2) Guṇabhadra, the teacher of Maṇḍalapuruṣa, the author of the Chūdamani Nigaṇṭu who was the contemporary of the Rāṣṭrakūṭa Kṛṣṇa III ; and (3) Guṇavīra Paṇḍita, the author of Neminātha and Vachchanandimalai. The last of these was the contemporary of Tribhuvanavira or Kulottunga III]

388. On the walls of a maṇṭapa at the base of Tirumalai rock. A record in the 12th year of Rājanārāyaṇa Sambuva-rāja, regarding the setting up a Jain image (Arhan) by a lady of Ponnūr.

391. In a small shrine below the painted cave. Records that one Arisṭh-anemi ācārya of Kaḍaikottūr, a pupil of Paravāḍimalla or Tirumalai, caused the image of a Yakṣa to be made.

393-94. Doorway of the painted cave. A record of the king Viḍukāḍalagiya Perumāl (Vyāmuktaśravaṇōjvala), the Adigamān of the Chera race and Lord of of Takata (Tagadur). He was the son of Rājarāja and descendant of Yavanika, king of Keraḷa or Ealini, king of Vanji. Records the repair of a Yakṣa and Takṣi, the presentation of a gong and the construction of a channel.

P. 108. Arcot North Dist., Walajapet taluk.

452. Śrīsailam (Sanskrit). Record of Ś.1433. Linga, the son of Santa, who was evidently a Vītraśaiva, one of his pious acts being the beheading of the Jains.

P. 987. Madras Dist.

324. (Kanarese). On the base of Śāntināthadeva image of the temple Yeraga Jinalaya, founded by the Mahāpradhana Brahadevaṇa.

325 (Kanarese and Sanskrit). On the base of a Jain image. Records that King Salvadeva got an image of Śānti Jina made according to rule and set it up.

P. 993. Madura Dist., Madura taluk.

13-20. Anaimalai : Vatteluttu and Tamil. On a rock with sculptures overhanging a natural cave in the same village. Mentions Narasingammangalam, Ajjānandi, Ten-Kaṭavalinādu Porkodu, Tinaikalattar, Venbaikuḍi-nāḍu. (For Ajjānandin, see N.A. 710 D.).

Pp. 995-96. Madura Dist., Madura taluk.

39. Kijakkuḍi. In the natural cave called Settippodavu near this village are Jain images and beds described in Ep. Rep. 1910. On the pedestal of one of the Jain images in cave Settippodavu. The image was cut at the instance of Guṇasenapperiyadigal, the pupil of Varttamānava Panditar who was the pupil of Guṇasadeva.

40. On the pedestal of another Jain image on the hill. The image was cut at the instance of a pupil of Guṇasadeva who was incharge of this palli (Kurandi Tirikkāṭṭambalji Venbunāḍu).

41. Do. do, in the same place. A damaged record. Mentions Guṇasadeva who presided over this palli.

42. Below the Jain image cut on the boulder outside the cavern. Abinandan Bhatāra caused this image to be cut. It also refers to Kurandi Tirukkāṭṭambalji.

Pp. 1003-4. Madura Dist., Madura taluk.

96-98. Mulluppatti (hamlet of Vadapalangy) : (Brahmi). On the pillow side of a stone-bed on the hill and on a boulder of the same hill. Unread. For the description of the Jain images and beds, see Madr. Ep. Rep. 1910.

99. (Vaṭṭeluttu). On the same boulder below a Jain figure. Kanakavir Periadigal, a disciple of Guṇasenadeva who was a disciple of Kuraṇḍi-Attaupavāsi-Bhaṭṭara of Venbu-nādu, caused this image to be cut in the name of the inhabitants of Kuyirkudi (Modern Kilakkudi).

100. (do.) In the same place. Records that Māganandi, a disciple of Kuraṇḍi Aṣṭa-upavāsi, caused this image to be cut in the name of the inhabitants of the district.

Pechchi-pallam : The findings in this place are akin to those at Kongar-Puliangulam, Kilakkudi etc. Foundation of ruined buildings and Jain relics are still to be seen here. There is a large courtyard in front of a rock which bears a row of Jain sculptures all facing east. Five of these are standing naked figures. The following inscriptions have been copied.

101. (Vaṭṭeluttu)—Below a Jain figure. Records that Gunamatiyar, mother of Ajjanandi, caused this image to be cut.

102. Do. In the same place. Records that the image was caused to be cut on behalf of a certain Āchchān Śrīpālan, nephew of Anattavan. Maṣenan, a disciple of Guṇasenadeva who was in charge of this palli.

103. Do. Do., by Kandan Porpaṭṭan of Śirukaḍaippuram, a pupil of Guṇasenadeva.

104. Do. Do., on behalf of Velan ṣadaiyan a Shepherd of Parur in Milalai-Kurram by his wife.

105. Do. Do., by Kanakanandi, a servant of Tirukkurandi of Venbunādu.

106. Do., on behalf of his younger brother by Araiyaṅgavidi, pupil of Guṇasenadeva, who was in charge of this palli.

Pp. 1006-7. Madura Dist., Melur taluk.

120-129. Alagarkovil : (Brahmi). On the roof of the cavern called Pancha-pāṇḍavar-paḍukkai. The inscriptions are neither Pāli nor Dravidian and are difficult of interpretation. The numerous Jain figures and beds and the Brahmi records in the caverns once occupied by the Buddhists, were in a subsequent period appropriated by the Jain ascetics.

130. Karungālakkuḍi: (Brahmi). Not read.

131. (Vaṭṭeluttu). Below the pedestal of a Jain image. Records that this image was caused to be made by the glorious Ajjanandi.

134. Kāḷaḷaḷavu: (Vatteluttu). On a boulder of the Panchapāṇḍavamalai near Melūr. Records that a certain Sangaran Sirivallavam caused an image to be cut on the rock and gave thirty sheep for a lamp and endowment for daily offering. They are remnants of a Jain temple or hermitage as at Settippōḍavu and Pechchipallam.

Pp. 1019-20. Madura Dist., Palni taluk.

228-235. Aivarmalai. (Vaṭṭeluttu and Tamil). Below the image cut out near Aiyambalaiyam. Mention Ajjanandi (No. 692), Indrasena (No. 694) and Mallisenappiriyar (No. 697).

236-239. Vaṭṭeluttu. Above the natural cove in the same place. Mention Pārsvapaḍāra (No. 700), Puṇṇanandukkuratti, the female pupil of Pattinikurattiyār of Perumbattiyūr (No. 701) and Ayiraimalai (No. 702).

242. Do. do. Records in Ś. 792 and eighth year of the Pāṇḍya king Varaguṇa that Śāntiviraguravarar, pupil of Kuṇavirakkuravadigal, renewed the images of Pārsvapaḍārar at Tiruvayirai and the Yakshis.

17. Kōvilanguḷam : (Tamil). On the west and south bases of the Ambalapasvāmi temple. A record in the forty-eighth year of the Chōla king Tribhuvānāchakravartin Kulottunga-Ci.ōladeva (I ?). A golden vimāna with a maṇḍapa to Mukkudaiyar was constructed by 25 Jains at Kmbanur in Sengattirukkai a subdivision of Venbu-valanāḍu. Two copper images of "the god of the three umbrellas" and Yakshi were also presented. It is also stated that land for a temple site and a watershed for the use of Jain devotees were given Unique literary style.

P. 1163. Paḷḷimaḍam : This place, called in inscription Tiruchchuliyal Paḷḷimaḍai, was a devadāna village in Paruttikkudināḍu.

30. (Tamil, Vaṭṭeluttu). On the north base of the Kalānāthasvāmin temple. Records gift of 50 sheep by Sattangari for a lamp to the temple of Tirukkāttambalḷideva at Kuraṇḍi in Venbunāḍu Kuraṇḍi was evidently a very important Jain centre in the south of the peninsula. See Md. 99, 100 and 105.

P. 1196. Rāmnāḍ Dist., Tiruvadanai taluk.

279. Hanumantagudi : (Tamil). On stones lying in front of the Malavanātha (Jaina) temple. A fragment of record in Ś. 1455, expired, of the Vijayanagara king whose name is lost. One of them mentions Jinendramangalam alias Kuruvadimidi... in Muttooru-kurram and Aṇjukoṭṭai in the same Kurram.

Pp. 1211-12. Salem Dist., Dharmapuri taluk.

Dharmapuri : Known in the 9th cent. as Tagaḍūr. It was a famous city with rich temples, pleasure-gardens and high enclosure walls, a centre of Jainism and Śaivism. The still attractive temple of Mallikārjuna, the Jain sculptures in the Rāmakka tank and Adhamankoṭṭai and the archaic epigraphs show its importance in antiquity in the age of the Chera kings. Till about 931 A. D. it was the capital of the Nolambas.

74. (Kanarese). On the four faces of a pillar built into the floor of the maṇḍapa in front of the Mallikārjuna temple. A record of king Mahendrā-dhirāja-Nolamba in Ś. 815, Paridhavin. Records a grant to a Jain basadi by a certain Nidhiyaṇṇa and Chaṇḍiyaṇṇa. The former received from the king the village of Mūlapaḷḷi which he made over to Kanakasena Siddhānta Bhaṭṭāra, pupil of Vinayasena Siddhānta Bhaṭṭāra of the Pogartiyagaṇa with the Senānvaya, Mūlasaṅgha etc. for the repairs of the basati.

75-76. Do. A record of the Pallava king to the same basadi.

81. Do. On four sides of a broken pillar lying in the Mariyamman temple in the fort. A record of the Pallava Mahendra Nolamba, dated in Ś. 800, Vilambin, apparently making grant to a Jain temple. It was the Mahendra who conquered Mahābali Bāṇa Rāya about A.D. 890 and gave his name Mahendramangalam to Adhamankōṭṭai).

Pp. 1254-55. Tanjore Dist., Kumbakonam taluk.

142. Tirunāgeśvaram (Anakkudi) : Tamil. On a pillar lying in a maṇḍapa at the end of the street in front of the Naganāthasvāmi temple. A record in the second year of the Chōḷa king Rājakesarivarman. Records gift of vāravaikal (?) collected by the perunagarattar of Kumāramarttaṇḍapuram (homlet of Tirunāgeśvaram) for the renovation of the Gopura and the tiruchchurrailai called Kumāramarttaṇḍam in the Milādudaiyār paḷḷi (temple) of that village, which is stated to have been situated in Tinkarai-Tiraimur-nāḍu. (The Chōḷa king was evidently Āditya I. The name Milādudaiyār paḷḷi, again, suggests a Jain shrine. This, together with the Jain images round the shrine of the goddess in the Naganāthasvāmi temple, shows that this place must have been an early Jain centre. Again Milādudaiyār is another name for saint Meyapporulnāyanār and if we suppose that the paḷḷi was a school or maṭha built in his honour, the present epigraph can be said to give a clue to his date, i.e., that he was prior to Āditya I. He was connected with the Chedi chief of Kīḷiyūr (S. Arcot Dist., also S. 1. 1. Vol. II, P. 166, for a reference to the saint).

P. 1263. Tanjore Dist., Kumbakonam taluk.

Tiruvalanjuli. The local temple is well-known for its delicately chiselled stone work. Some of the figures are Jain. See Tanj. Gazr. Vol. I, P. 223 for details. The place was so called because the Kāvēri was prevented from submerging into the nether world by the self sacrifice of Varaganda muni.

P. 1361. Tanjore Dist., Papanasam taluk.

1003. Marutturakkudi : (Tamil). Airavatesvar temple. A record in the sixteenth year of the Chōḷa king Tribhuvanachakravartin Śrī-Kulottunga-Chōḷadeva (III). Records gift of land. Mentions Śivapādaśekharanallūr, which was a neivēṭṭapperu and refers to two Jain temples (paḷḷi) at Jananāthapuram called Chēdikulamāṇikkapperumballi and Gangarulasundarapperumballi.

P. 1399. Tanjore Dist., Tanjore taluk.

Sendalai (or Mannarsamudram) : The ancient name of this place was Chandralekhai-chaturvēdimangalam. It was in the district of Ārkaṭṭu-Kurraṇam.

1293. (Tamil). On a stone built into the wall of the outer gopura of the Sundarēśvara temple, left of entrance. A fragmentary record twelfth year of the Chōla king Parakesarivarman. Mentions Kanakasēnabhaṭṭāra, probably a Jain. See Md. 42.

Vol. 2. P. 1431. Tanjore District, Tirutturaippuṇḍi taluk.

Tirutturaippuṇḍi : (Tamil). Marundiśvara temple. Registers grant of land and a tank by the residents of the devadāna village of Śāttamangalam and those living in the Paḷlichchandam (i.e., property of Jain temple) portion of the same village.

Paḷaiyasangaḍam : A hamlet of Mahādānapuram containing some Jain remains.

P. 1623. Pudukkoṭṭai State.

Ammāsatram : At the entrance of the natural cave east of the rock known as Aḷuruttimalai. A Tamil record of Tribhuvanachakravartin Sundara Paṇḍya, mentioning one Dharmadeva Āchārya, the pupil of Kanakachandra Paṇḍita (who was evidently a Jain teacher).

P. 1665. Vizagapatam District, Bimlipatam taluk.

2. Bhogapuram : (Telugu and Sanskrit). On a slab in the village. Records in Ś. 1109, 11th year of the eastern Ganga king Anantavarmadeva that the merchant Kannamanayaka constructed the Jain temple called Rājārāja Jinālaya at Bhogapura and gave two puttis of land to that temple with the consent of the Deśi-Raṭṭaḍḍu (i.e., the villagers who belonged to the mercantile class).

4. Lakkavarapukōṭa : (Hindi, Nāgari). On the pedestal of a mutilated Jain image preserved in the Virabhadra temple. Dated Sam. 1548. Refers to the image of Bhaṭṭāraka Jinachandra of Mūla-Sangha.

P. 1696. Travancore State.

2. Chitalar : In the Tiruchchāṇattumalai (i.e., the mountain of the Chāraṇas, Śramanas or Jains), later on the centre of a Bhagavati temple. A record in Timil language and Vaṭṭeluttu character belonging to the 28th year of the reign of Vikramāditya Varaguṇa, saying that Guṇandāngi Kurattigal, the disciple of Ariṭṭanēmi Bhaṭṭāra of Pērayakkuḍi, gave some gilded ornaments to the Goddess,

P. 1705. Travancore State.

102. Nāgercoil (Ancient Kōṭṭāru) : Tamil. On a pillar. Records in K.A. 692 gift of land at the request of two Jain priests Guru Vira Paṇḍita and Kamalayāhana Paṇḍita.

Pp. 1-6. Muriyakāla in the Khāravela inscription. This Maurya epoch to be distinguished from dynastic or regnal years, Mauriyakāla an epitome of the Indian sense of history ;

P. 10. Hinduism a synthesis of the inner spirit of Brahmanism, Buddhism and Jainism.

P. 12. Hindu age a problem of culture—assimilation—Buddhist and Jain in its youth, received Brahmanical in its prime, Hindu (i. e., Brahmana—Buddhist—Jain) in its fulfilment ; inscriptions of Khāravela preach Jainism.

P. 30. Chandragupta Maurya a Jain ; Vriṣala means—one foreign-born or professing a non-Brahmanic religion.

P. 34. Buddhist and Jains regarded as one common non-Brahmanical faith, Asoka a Jain according to Kalhana (Rājatarangīnī, I, 102 ; viii, 13391) and Aini-Akbari.

Pp. 35-36. The term Jina in Rājatarangīnī, (I, 102) might mean Buddha. In the time of Lakṣmaṇasena of Bengal the Buddhist and Jaina cultures were merged into each other ; Bhuvaneśwara inscriptions show the final stage of amalgamations of Buddhism, Jainism and Brahmanism in one comprehensive and all embracing outlook.

Pp. 124-131. In the 6th century B.C. India was passing through a period of religious enthusiasms. The Upaniṣadic Brahmanas were laying down rules of life in the Dharmasūtras Vardhamāna and Gautama were preaching their respective view points of salvation in Jainism and Buddhism. It was at this epoch, Gośāla founded his sect of Ājivikas, noted for their dislike of austerities bordering on fanaticism ; Vardhamāna, Gautama and Gośāla all against the Brahmanas ; they used the language of and drew disciples mostly from the mass ; the Brahmana looked on and ignored them ; in the Maurya days (4th-3rd century B.C.) he lacked political prestige ; origin of the Ājīvika sect ; Gośāla and the Jains ; Mahāvira exhorted all his followers never to hold any inter course with the heretical Gośāla and the Ājīvikas ; this Jain Ājīvika hostility divided counsel crippled Jainism at the start.

Pp. 131-39. Present Barābar Hill (Old Goradhagiri, 2nd century B.C. ; Kharatika Hill, 3rd and 2nd century A.C. ; and Pravara hill, 6th-7th century A.D.) is situated 15 miles north of Gaya. The inscriptions in the caves mention grant of those caves to the Ājīvikas ; in three cases the word Ājīvikehi has been deliberately chiselled off according to the views of Mr. A. BANERJI-SASTRI, Khāravēla as a pious Jain, attempted to wipe out old scores by obliterating the hated name of the imposter Gośāla's Ājīvika followers ; the crocodile and elephant motif (in the facade of the Lomasa Ṛṣi cave)—the crocodile design is hardly even found in the North, it was an importation from the South) and the Goradhagiri facade end inscriptions are intimately connected with the Udayagiri (Khāravēla) inscriptions and facades both done by a Jain who signed his creed in the mutilation of the letters Ājīvikehi ; Makara (crocodile), Svastika, trisula and fish are Jain symbols.

P. 167. Khāravēla's invasion of Magadha in the 2nd century B.C. was associated with sectarian of religious ascendancy of Jainism ; (note-JAYASWAL's explanation of Pīṭhūḍa-pīṭhūḍa, 'large' is unconvincing in the line 11 of the Khāravēla inscriptions. Pīṭhūḍa Pīṭhūḍa i. e. Ptolemy's Pitundra at the mouth of the Godavari and the Kistna).

P. 171-note. The inscriptional records of Bihar and Orissa are such necessary symbols of Buddhist, Jain and Hindu ways through which the Indian mind was gradually approximating to its cherished ideal of synthetic unity.

K.G. Sankara Aiyar.—The Hāthigumpha cave Inscription of Khāravela (Ind. Ant. vol. XLIX, 1920, Bombay).

Pp. 43-52ff. The inscription opens with a salutation to the Arkats and the Siddhas, thereby indicating its Jain origin. Khāravela a lunar King (Aira-Aila), Mahāmegha-vāhana (—Mahendra). Meghas in Kosala were the post-Andhra Kings. These Meghas must be the Meghavāhanas of Kalinga who were emigrants from Kosala. Aśoka gave 3 cave dwellings in the Barābar hills to the Ājivikas a sect of naked ascetics.

Khāravela's doings from year to year described. The Sātākarni identified with Śrī Sātākarni (170-160 B.C.), the third Andhra King. Mushikanagara, situated in the Central Provinces ; Mushika Kingdom placed in south Travancore and its capital was, Kolam, the modern Quilon (Travancore Archaeological Series 2. 106-7). "In the 5th Year Khāravela extended into the capital city, from its former terminus in the Tanasuliya Road, a canal excavated by King Nanda (of Kalinga) in the Mouryan Year 103".

Khāravela a liberal Hindu who patronized Jain Śramaṇas.

Vajra identified with the Vajra Country, i.e. South-West Bihar and East Bundelkhand. Bhāratavarsha restricted to the Gangetic Valley. Khāravela's 12th year should read as "And he serves the Jain image of Kalinga brought by king Nanda (of Kalinga) with doors set with family gems and rings the wealth of Anga and Magadha".

Śrī Jivadeva, Khāravela's father.

To fix the chronology of this inscriptions—date of Chandragupta's accession determined—after Alexander's death, i.e. in 321 B.C. Chronological Table to illustrate this inscription given from 400 B.C. to 157 A.C. (Muriya Year 164).

BARNETT, L.D.—Two Jain Inscriptions of Mulgund and Lakshmeshwar—Ep. Ind. vol. XVI (1921-22), Calcutta.

Pp. 52-56. The two inscriptions are now in the British Museum. Though they relate to different foundations, they refer to the same lineage of Jain Gurus.

Pp. 53-57. A Mulgund Inscription of the reign of Someśvara I, Śaka 975 (A.D. 1053).

This inscription was found in the Jain basti or temple at Mulgund (Ep. Ind. vol. XIII, P. 190). In the centre of the stone is a squatting Jina in a niche or Koṣṭha-paṇjara; on the right a worshipper; over it the sun; to the left of the Jina, a cow with sucking calf; and above it the moon. Below this is the inscription in Kanarese. The record, after invoking the blessing of the Jina Chandraprabha introduces a pious and eminent Jain sandhi-vigrahadhikari, or officer of peace and war, named Beldeva, a soldier of Keśirāja, and a disciple of Nayasena Sūri; it gives the pedigree of Nayasena, in the Sena or Chandrakavata amvaya of the Mūla Sangha-Ajitasenakanakasena-Narendrasena (grammarian)-Nayasena (grammarian), prior of the Bankāpur monastery and who was the spiritual guide of the western Ganga king Mārasimha II (who piously starved himself to death at Ajitasena's feet) and of the minister Chāmūṇḍarāya (E.I. vol. V, Pp. 152, 171, 180 etc.). He was a teacher of a Kanakasena, entitled Vādi-rāja, a disciple of Akalanka & teacher of the Ganga king Rāchamalla (Ep. Carn. vol. VIII, ii). This Ajitasena is different from Ajitasena (Vādi-bhasimha, Śabda-chaturmukha and Tārikā-chakravartin, a later scion) and who flourished in the first half of the twelfth century A.D. (Ep. Ind. vol. III, P. 188; Śravaṇa Belgoḷa No. 54 etc.). It is not clear which of these two Ajitasenas was the author of the Alaṅkāra-chintāmaṇi and Maṇi-prakāśika. Narendrasena was the author of Pramāṇa-pramēya-kārikā; text and translation of the inscription given.

On the site of Lakshmeshwar (the ancient, Puligere, Purigere or Purikara. Ep. Ind. vol. XIV, P. 188). Sculptures on the slab are just like in A above. Kanarese: a grant for the Jain Cult in Purikara (the modern Lakshmeshwar) to the trusteeship of Narendrasena (II) of the Sena Gana in the Mūla Sangha, the senior disciple of Nayasena Sūri, who in his turn was the senior disciple of Narendrasena (I). BANERJI, R. D. and SUKTHANKAR, V. S.—Three Kshatrapa Inscriptions. Ep. Ind. vol. XVI, (1921-22), Calcutta.

Pp. 239-241—III—Junagadh Inscription of the the time of the grandson of the Kshatrapa Jayadaman.

The inscription was discovered in front of one of the cells of an extensive complex of caves situated to the east of Junagadh, close to a modern monastery known as Bāvā Pyāra's Math. Engraved on a stone about 2 feet each way and 8 inches thick ; contains four lines ; it is fragmentary ; it belongs to the reign of a Kshatrapa—either Damayasada I or Rudrasimha I. The purport of the inscription cannot be determined as the portion containing the object of the record is lost. From the occurrence of the expression Kevali-Jñānasam (prāpta) "who had arrived at the knowledge of the Kevalines" in line 4. It may be surmised that the inscription had something to do with the Jainas. The only locality mentioned in it is Girinagara, ancient Junagadh which survives in the name of the adjacent hill of Gīrnār. Text, remarks on the transcript and translation.

T. T. SHARMAN. Kannada Poets mentioned in inscriptions (Mems. Ar. Su. Ind. No. 13). Madras, 1924.

P. VII—Preface When Jainism took the place of Buddhism in the Karnataka, Kannada was highly cultivated under the patronage of the ruling families and even became a vehicle of their religious literature. In the course of a few centuries Jaina produced poets like Adi-Pampa, Ranna, Janna, and Honna, rhetoricians like Nripatunga, Nāgavarma and Udayāditya, and scientists like Rājāditya, Chandrarāja and Kirtivarma. With the beginning of the rise of Basava in the 12th century Jain authors in Kannada began to disappear, their place being taken by the Vīraśaivas and the Vaiṣṇavas. The classic Champu style of the Jains fell into disuse and the popular Shatpadi, Regala Sangatya and Vachana took its place. The advent of the British and the introduction of the European system of education had their own effect on Kannada literature.

Systematic enquiry and scientific research in regard to Kannada language and literature largely owe their origin to western scholars like Rev. KITTEL and Mr. RICE. Mr. RICE published an account of Kannada poets in his introduction to Bhaṭṭakalanka's Śabdānuśāsana.

In 1907 appeared the first volume of the "Lives of Kannada Poets" (upto the 14th century). We have today the Lives of Kannada poets brought upto the end of the 17th century. R. NARASIMHACHARJJA's 3rd volume (Lives of Kannada Poets).

C. NARAYANA RAO. The Brāhmi Inscriptions of South India. (N. I. A. Vol I, 1938-39), Pp. 362-376.

Certain Brāhmi inscriptions brought to light in 1912 in the Pāṇḍya country (Epi. Rep. S. Circle for 1912) and attention to them drawn in the Reports for 1915 and 1918. A paper read on them by H. Krishna SASTRI at the first 'All India Oriental Conference' in 1919. Mr. K. V. Subrahmanya Aiyar again read a paper on the same subject at the third session of the conference in 1924. Both of them assumed that there were some Tamil words occurring in them. The records appear to be Prākṛitic. There is no warrant for assigning the third century B. C. for any Tamil inscription.

Interpretation of the Records :

- Pp. 364-66 (I) Marugāltalai Inscription.
P. 366 (II) Ānaimalai Inscription.

P. 367 (III) Tirupparankumram Inscriptions.

Pp. 367-70 (IV) Ariṭṭāpatti Inscriptions.

P. 370 (V) Between Kilūr and Kilavalavu.

P. 370 (VI) Karungalakuḍi Inscription.

Pp. 370-71 (VII) Muttupatti Inscription.

Pp. 371-72 (VIII) Siddharamalai Inscriptions.

Pp. 372-73 (IX) Koṅgar Puliyangulam Inscriptions.

Pp. 373-74 (X) Aḷagarmalai Inscriptions.

P. 375 (XI) Sittanavāsala Inscription.

P. 375 (XII) The Uṇḍānkala Inscription.

P. 376. Conclusion :

(1) Mr. Krishna SASTRI gave a wrong lead by identifying certain of the groups of letters as Tamil words. He failed to reconcile how Prākṛit grammatical forms could be found side by side with those in Tamil.

(2) Mr. Subrahmanya AIYAR made a mess of the whole lot of the inscriptions acting on the wrong lead given by Mr. SASTRI concerning the existence of Tamil words. He took undue and unwarranted liberty with them; he cut off vowels as well as consonants, added others, twisted some more, made wrong grouping of the letters, tried to force meanings into the words he had created, and when he failed to draw any sense out of them, he was satisfied with saying that they are all proper names, names of persons or places.

These Brāhmi epigraphs contain a form of Prākṛit described by the Prākṛit Grammarians as Paisāci. The Pāṇḍya country, according to these grammarians, is a tract where the prevailing language is Paisāci. These inscriptions conform to their statement in a remarkable manner.

Interpretation of the above mentioned records by C. N. RAO.

(I) Veṇa Kūṭipāna Kutupitā Kālakāṇcanam. The Kālakāṇcanam or building caused to be cut for (or by or belonging to) the people, the Kasyapas.

OR

Veṇaki Sipāna Kūṭupitā Kālakāṇcanam. The Kālakāṇcanam or building caused to be cut or built by a woman—follower of the Buddhist Vinaya doctrine, (or a woman whose personal name was Veṇāki or Vaināyaki. The second meaning seems to me more probable.

II. Ivaku-nāṭṭu-tu Uṭṭuyula-pōtana-tānā Eri'aritānā, Atāntuwōyi 'a—raṭṭha Kōyi-pānā. The gift(s) of the sons (grandsons?) of Uṭṭuyula belonging to the Airāvata subsect of the Kāśyapas of the Atāntunayika-rāṣṭra and (who had come) from Ivaku-nāḍu.

III. (A) Ērukotūra Ila-Kutumpikānā potālaiyānā.

The establishment of Caityas and groups of Caityas of (to, by) the citizens of Pōtāl, the dwellers of Ceylon, of Erukōṭūra.

VI. Kāṇiyānā natā siri-yaku'anā dhamāma ; itanaṭiṇa caṭṭhiyaṇū sa'iaḥānā lāna Cāṭikānā tānatāya ; cāṭikānā ce'ya pāṭiya.

The gift of the prosperous yaksas, the accountants? the gift of the Śreṣṭhins or Chiefs of the wandering traders of Ceylon who have camped here; the 'Cāṭiya-pālika' or relic monastery of (built by) the merchant-chiefs.

(B) Karaṇicira n(o)ta siri-yaka-(ra)

(C) Cāna tāritāna Kotupitōnā

The daughter-in-law of the king (honorific plural used) who had got this cave excavated and cut the daughter of Yakṣastri (proper name) a 'piṇāka' or 'yakṣiṇi' had this done for all the congregations of wandering merchants as an afternoon (resting place).

V. Upācā'a pōta natṭalā voccōkotu pālī'i. The monastery that the instructor of pancers, the son of the teacher, got cut.

VI. My reading is the same as that of Mr. Krishna SASTRI.

(E.) ṭhu ya rū ra a ri ti nā pālī Skt. "Ethuyarura Haritanam Pali (ki?)

Ethuyarura may be the name of a village.

VII. Vinatā'ūra caiya'a lēna Kōṭiya.

The small hollow cave-monastery of vinatā'ūra.

VIII. My reading is the same as that of Mr. Krishna SASTRI, except that I would read the Dhim G as ti with Mr. ARYAR.

(A). Potinaūra'a tānā

The gifts of the village Pōtina'ūra.

(B) Kuvira'ana tai. The gift of the sect called The Kuberas. Vēya'a tānā.—The gifts of the merchant or cultivator.

(C) Same as B.

(D) and (E). toṭoṭa'a—

The gifts made to the congregation of Buddhist monks and nuns

(E) and (F) 'ariyati'ana tai—the Gift of the husband-women.

(G) & (H) Visuvānā Cānatānā tai.—The votive gift of the people of all the villages.

(H) & (J) Cānatāna ana tai “another gift of the villagers”.

(J) Venatāi tānā—The gifts of Vinata (or of a devotee).

IX. My reading is the same as that of Mr. Krishna SASTRI, except that I think it is possible that his reading ‘tu’ may be ‘tta’.

(A) Kuṭṭu kotupitavānā āpāca' ana (ū pāṭuva ūpāṭna'a) had this excavation cut for the treasure.

(B) Pakānā'ūra pot(a) tānā piṭṭānā itatave pōnā.—The gift of the elders of Pākānāūra for the good (welfare, upkeep) of the ‘baskets of books’ (the collections of the sacred Buddhist scriptures) of the boys or pupils (the collection of sacred books or scriptures which have been displaced, or got confused in arrangement).

(C) Kṇṭu Koṭalaku italani nā-cetta'a tānā enā—The apartment for the benefit of the library; the cave, the gift of Jnanaśresila.

X. My interpretation follows Mr. Krishna SASTRI's readings—

(A) Mātharakī-putrāṇam (Pautranām (?), potānām (?)) Kulapānām adānāya/asthānāya (?) asthānāya (?) dānām. The gift of the sons (grandsons ?) of Mathariki, the heads of the guild (Kula), for good (for the guilds ?)

(B) Matatirai-ko pāpu vāṇikānā—

The gift for the guild of Mathariki, given by the chiefs of the villages of the merchants.

(C) Yakṣā Kṣatṛikānā.—The gift of the merchants (Yakṣa's) who trade in bulls (who belong to the Gonarda guild ; who come from the Gonarda hill).

(D) (i) Kāṇa'a tānā—

The gifts of the accountant.

(ii) Mōkanā atanā'a tānā—

Gifts for the institution of states of relief (from pain).

(E) and (F) "śama misinā mitati rūpa ṇiti vānikānā ṇaṭṭa malānā—The vow in the form of friendship mixed with faith in the 'samaya' or 'Buddhist Dharma', of the merchants who have their mala's or impurities of the soul destroyed.

(G) & (H) Vāṇikānā yuṣaṇālānā Cikatṭha-mātana tānā—The gift of the merchants, the chiefs of the guild (of the Yula guild ?) of the Srikanthamatr-gana (Cikatṭhamatr-gana).

(H) & (J) tāra'aniya Koṭṭi potā avanū'a nākanānā—The beloved of the excavator (had this) cut for the protection of the Naginis.

XI. E'umi-nāṭṭ Kumutṭhura-piṭṭāna tā-kā vutṭi intenāku. Cūṭṭapochila Ilaya-rācheyatā aṭṭanāma.

An institution of Kumutṭhura in Eumināṭṭa from the Kingdom of Ceylon for the protection and with the wish of the increase of the Piṭaka's (the three baskets or collections of Buddhist scriptures).

H.C. SETH.—Chandragupta Maurya and the Meharauli Iron Pillar Inscription (N.I.A., Vol. 2, 1939-40), Pp. 625-633.

In the new Indian Antiquary (No. 3 June 1938 Pp. 188 ff.), Dr. O. STEIN has discussed my views (Inscriptional Evidence of Candragupta Maurya's Achievements J.I.R. XVI, 1937, 117 ff.) that Candra of the Meharauli Iron Pillar Inscription is identical with Chandra Gupta Maurya. Difficulties raised by Dr. O. STEIN regarding the identification of Candra with Candragupta Maurya is met. The inscription is an eulogy of some great pre-Gupta King, who himself had erected the iron column, but the inscription was incised on it in the early Gupta period, perhaps in the reign of Samudra Gupta. This pre-Gupta Candra of Meharauli inscription is the first great Maurya—Candragupta.

B. S. L. Hanumantha RAU. Importance of Sannigandla inscription dated A.D. 1318, (Ind. Hist. Cong. 17th Sess., Ahmedabad), 1954.

P. 246. The inscription and the place from which it is obtained (on a hill near Sannigandla in Palned Taluq.—the temple of Narasimha known as Singarutla devalam) describe three stages in the religious history of Medieval Andhra. The mutilated Jain sculptures indicate that the place had once been a resort of the Jains. The early Kakatiyas were Jains. (The Kakateyas of Warangal, P. 3 & n 5) then Jainism flourished; Kakateyas coming under the influence of Śaivite teachers; Jains could not resist the onslaught of militant Śaivism; Telugu works like Basava-purāṇam (6th Canto lines 170-200) of this period, vividly described the destructions of their settlements. The Kakatiyas guilty of connivance at the barbaric cruelties perpetrated by the Śaivites. (Andhrulacharitra by C. VEERBHADRARAU, Vol. 2).

G. H. KHARE.—A Note on Three Copper-plate Grants; (Ind. Hist. Cong. 17th Sess., Ahmedabad). 1954.

P. 134. The first issued by Vijayāditya Chālukya of Badami in Śaka 627; donee a Jaina Āchārya of a temple at Kundilli (Kundal S. Satara, Bombay) belonging to the Kāṣṭhāchārya tradition to which belonged Vimalakīrti also.

The second issued by Rāshṭrakūṭa Govinda III in Śaka 717 ; the donee an āchārya belonging to the Kāshṭhachārya tradition.

The third issued by Mayuravarman of the Kadamba dynasty of Vanavāsi, in the Vijaya samvatsara falling after Śaka 1200 ; homage to Jain goddess Ambikā and grant of a village Udumbaraja (Umbraj, north Satara) to Guṇadeva, the pupil of Śrīpala.

These grants throw light on the Jain establishments of the two Satara districts.

D. C. SIRCAR.—Two Śailodbhava Grants from Banpur. (Epi. Ind. Vol. XXIX, 1951-52 Delhi, 1954).

P. 38 Grant of Dharmarāja Maṇabhita of the Śailodbhava family of Kongoda in modern Orissa ; he seems to have flourished about the close of the 7th century and the beginning of the 8th (circa 695-730 A. C.). The donee was a Jaina (?).

P. 40. Monk called eka-śāṭa (possibly one who has taken a vow to wear only one piece of cloth ; Cf. Eka-Chivara) Prabuddhachandra who was the disciple of the arhadāchārya (the most venerable teacher) Nāsichandra. The grant seems to have been actually made in favour of a deity or religious establishment in the residence of Prabuddhachandra. This is suggested by the expression bali-sattra Charu-pravarthanaya.

B. Ch. CHHABRA.—Epigraphical Notes, Chandrabandi Rock Inscription, Śaka 803. (E. I. Vol. XXIX, Part V, for 1952, Pp. 134-35). Delhi, 1955.

The inscription edited by C. R. Krishnamacharlu. (The Kannada Inscription of Kopbal, Hyderabad Ar. Series, No. 12, Cal., 1935).

It is a Kannada record and pertains to the Jain faith. Chhabra corrects a few mistakes in the translation of the last two lines in Sanskrit ; Indra in Sarvvanandindra is not to be equated with Bhaṭṭār in Sarvvanandi-Bhaṭṭār that occurs in the Kannada portion. The word 'indra' refers to Indra, the god of rains.

P. B. DESAI.—Two Jaina inscriptions in Tamil. (Epi. Ind. Vol. XXIX, 1952. Delhi, 1955, Pp. 199-203).

Inscription I : It is engraved on a boulder of the hillock Andimalai near Cholvandipuram (Tirukkovitun Talug, S. Arcot Dist.). The boulder forms a cavity—a natural shrine ; carved figures of Gommata and Pārivanātha ; archaic sculpture of goddess Padmāvatt (An. Rep. on S. I. Epi. for 1936-37, P. 61). Inscription—characters Tamil of about the 10th century A.C. Language Tamil ; it states that the teṇṇāram was caused to be made by Śrīveli Kongaraiyar Puttaḍigal. Text, note : Putta is the Tamil version of the Sanskrit name Buddha—Buddha is a term denoting higher status attained by an enlightened soul according to the Jaina philosophical concept (Pravacamasūtra—Intro. P. XXXIV. Bombay 1935). Jaina inscription carved on rocks in the Tamil district (above Vol. IV. Pp. 136 ff, ibid. Pp. 140 ff ; Mad. Ep. Coll. Nos. 67-74 of 1905). The word teṇṇāram means worship i. e. a group of sculptures for worship as indicated by the context ; Teṇṇāram also means deity worshipped privately in a house.

n. 5. Caves with Jaina relics—a peculiar aspect of Jainism in the Tamil Country. The hill tracts with natural caverns and rocky shelters had a great attraction for the Jain teacher and the devotee who transformed them into sacred resorts and centres of religious practices ; a large number of hill spots invested with Jaina relics has come to light (see—An. Rep. on S. I. Epi. for 1923 p. 3 ; above, Vol. IV. P. 136 ; Mad. Epi. Rep. for 1887, P. 3. etc.). From the association of the 'triple umbrella', which is a characteristic emblem of the Jina, with the rocky beds at Sedaramputtu in the N. Arcot Distt (An. Rep. on S.I. Epi. for 1939-40 to 1942-43 p. 11) it can now be safely asserted at least some of similar couches, popularly known as the 'Pañchapāṇḍava beds' found in a large number in many parts, were the creations of Jaina monks for a detailed description of these relics, see—Proc. and Tans. of Third Oriental Conf., Pp. 275 ff.

Pp. 201-203. Inscription II. This epigraph (No. 416 of 1929. Mad. Epi. Rep. for 1929. p. 88) is incised on a beam in the temple of Ādinātha at Ponnur (Wandimarh Talug N. Arcot Dist.). Script—Grantha and Tamil ; Language Tamil ; Śaka 1655 (1733 A.C.). It lays down a rule for the guidance of the Jainas of Svarnapura (Ponnur)—they should take in procession the images of Pārivanātha and Jvālāmālīni every Sunday for being worshipped on the occasion of services to Helāchārya on the Nilagiri hill. (Ref. An. Rep. on S. I. Epi. for 1928-29 p. 88 ; ibid for 1928-29 ; Nos. 415 and 417 of App. B ; above Vol IV, Pp. 136-37 and the plate).

Text. Note—one more Epi. an archaic inscription from Pāñchapāṇḍavamalai, dated in the 50th year of the Pallava King Nandipottarasar, which speaks of the creation of an image of a Golden Takṣhī on the hill. Evolution of the Takṣhī worships. Images of Takṣhī, like those of the Jinās, were installed independently in shrines. Helāchāryā (Elāchārya) of the Dravidagaṇa, inventor of the cult of Jvālāmālīni. An inscription at Sedam in the Gulbarga Dist. (Hyderabad) States mystic rites for propitiating jvālāmālīni.

P. B. DESAI.—More Inscriptions at Ablur. (Epi. Ind. Vol. XXIX, 1952) Delhi, 1955.

P. Ablur, a village about six miles north of Hirekerur headquarters of Kot Taluk, Dhārwar District. The activities of Ekāntad Rāmāyā, the militant protagonist of the Śaiva upheaval, are centered in the temple of Someśvara; this temple contains an inscription above a panel of sculptures depicting the scene of Rāmāyā's encounter with the Jains as described by Fleet (above vol. V, pp. 260-61). Text, Translation—The sculptures depict the scene of a Jina placed horizontally ready to be broken. The Text, Translation. Ekāntada Rāmāyā breaking the image of Jina and setting up the Śivalinga. Ekāntada Rāmāyā.

P. 143 N.I.—His persecution of the Jainas. A parallel instance from the neighbouring province. With the ascendancy of Jainism the Jainas of the Tamil country were persecuted and the scenes of such persecutions are depicted in sculptures on the walls of the Temple at Tiruvatūr in the N. Arcot. Distt. (An Rep. on S.I. Epi. Ind. 1923 p. 4).

N. 4.—In the wake of Rāmāyā's victory conversions for Jainism to Śaivism took place on a mass scale according to the Abalūr-Charitre.

P. 144. By the middle of the 12th century Karnatak witnessed the upsurge of a great religious movement emphasising the superiority of God Śiva and his devotion. The Kalachuri usurper Bijjala a protagonist of the orthodox Brahmanical creeds. Harihara's Basavarājadevara Ragale—conflict between Bijjala and Basaveśvara. The theory of Jaina leanings of Bijjala exploded (above vol. XXI, Pp. 9ff and 17 Arjunavada inscription).

P. 144. Besides Rāmayya and Basveśvara, other sponsors of the Śaiva movement—their aggressive activities contributed to its success; Virā-goggideva—a fire to the Jaina scriptures and a death to the Jains (Bom. Kar. Collection No. 207 of 1928-29; An. Rep. on S.I. Epi.). Viruparasa pulverized the Jaina temple (Bom. Kom. Col. No. 68 of 1929-30).

N. Lakshminarayan RAO—Talangere inscription of Jyāsimha, (Epi. Ind. Vol. XXIX. 1952) Delhi, 1955.

P. 207. The Alupas-feudatories of the Chālukyas (W. Chālukya of Badami); were even matrimonially connected with the Chālukyas. The Alupa Chief Chitravāhana married Kumkuma-Mahādēvi, the sister of the Chālukya monarch Vijayāditya. King Vijayāditya made grant at the request of Chitravāhana to the Jinabhavana at Purigere constructed by this lady.

D. C. SIRCAR.—Inscriptions from Bihar, (Epi. Ind. Vol. XXX, 1953). Delhi, 1956.

P. 84. Kauleśvari Hill Inscription of Vishnugupta: Existence of some inscriptions on rocks and boulders on the top of the Kuluha or Kauleśvari Hill under the Hunterganj Police Station in the Hazaribagh Dist. The hill stands about 6 miles from Hunterganj—the hill is full of Brahmanical, Buddhist and Jain relics; copied all the inscriptions found there (in 1954).

On a rugged boulder broken two lines of writing, of 7th or 8th century A.D. It refers to a Satra near its findspot which was associated with a Chief named Poyarāja, a feudatory of Vishnugupta (Later Gupta dynasty). Difficult to determine the real significance of the word satra (sattra) some of the meanings are: asylum, hospital, a tank, munificence. The word is now used in the sense of 'a house where free food is distributed'.

K. A. Nilakanta SASTRI and T. N. SUBRAMANIAM.—Tingalur Inscription of Kottattan Vikramachola, Śaka 967 (E. I. Vol. XXX, Part, VI, Pp. 243-49, for 1954). Delhi, 1957. I—Plate.

Tingalūr, a small village about 7½ Miles north-west of Perundurai in the Erode Taluq of the Coimbatore District, and forms along with Vijayamangalam, another village about 4 miles to its south, one of the few Jaina centres in the Tamil country. It contains the Jain temple of Pushpanātha. The antiquity of the village dates from the 8th or 9th century. Inscription engraved on the door post of the kitchen in the Jain temple Tamil language and script. Dated in Śaka 967 (1045-46 A.D.) and 40th year of the reign of king Vikramachola who bore the epithet Kō-nāṭṭiān. The object of the record is to register the construction of a new mukhamandapa in Chandravasti. Text and translation given and plate also.

H. K. NARASIMHASWAMI.—Koneki Grant of Vishṇuvardhana II, (E. I. vol. XXII, Part II, for 1955, Pp. 76-77). Delhi, 1957.

The object of the grant is the gift of village of Koneki in Paḷḷirāshṭra by Mahārāja Vishṇuvardhana to Vidusarman of the Parasara gotra. Koneki was situated in Paḷḷi-rashṭra (modern Palnad)—Paḷḷi connoted, in Tamil literature, a place of worship, especially of the Buddhist or Jaina sect.

N. P. CHAKRAVARTI.—Brāhmi Inscriptions from Bandhogarh, 5 plates, E. I. Vol. XXXI, Part IV, for 1955, Pp. 167-186). Delhi, 1957.

Inscriptions in Brāhmi characters discovered at Bandhogarh in the former Rewa State in Vindhya Pradesh. Bandhogarh, the old capital of the Baghelas. Over 50 caves were discovered in this area, most of which are artificial.

P. 172. These caves were religious donations. But what was the religion of the donors? Of the three principal religions of the time, viz., Buddhism, Jainism and Brahmanism, the first can safely be ruled out. They may be Jains also seems doubtful. None of the donors is called a śrāvaka or upāsaka, nor is there any mention of a teacher or Arhat as one would expect even in early Jain inscriptions. In one of the caves in the Ganesh Pahar are two bas-reliefs—in one are found figures of several animals crowded together and a short inscription which reads mugava-selo, i. e. mrigaya-saila or 'the hill used as a hunting ground'. It is hard to imagine a Jain religious establishment depicting such a scene. On an adjacent pillar is found the name Jarāsandha. If this also is meant to be a lable, one would expect a scene from the Mahābhārata depicted here. The conclusion—these caves were,

P. 173. Brahmanical; Śaiva origin is suggested; because inscription (No. XII) clearly reads Śivabhatka(ka) and on the jamb of the first entrance to the left of the same cave are two clear letters reading Śiva; on Jain would have such names or engrave such records in any of their religious establishments. Three caves to the south-east of Gopālpur—in one of them is a partly effaced standing naked figure which I think may be that of a Tirthankara or Jaina saint, but it may very well be that of a Śaiva saint. If my assumption is correct, then these would be the earliest rock cut caves dedicated to Śaiva worship. Before the discovery of these caves, the earliest and perhaps the only caves dedicated to Śaiva were those at Udayagiri in Madhya Bharat, belonging to the time of Chandragupta II.

D. C. SINGAR.—Jain Inscription from Shergarh, V. S. 1191, I—plate (E. I. Vol. XXXI, Part II, for 1955. Pp. 81-36). Delhi, 1957.

Sher Shāh Sūrī, the Afghan emperor of Delhi (1539-45 A. D.), is accused by Badauni and other Muslim historians of wanton callousness in destroying old cities for founding new ones on them—one of them being Shergarh, about 90 miles to the south-east of Kotah (Rajasthan); its ancient name being Kośavarddhana. There are two epigraphs—a great religious establishment of the Jains flourished at Kośavarddhana in the early medieval period.

The first of the two Jain inscriptions was discovered in the fort. An interesting feature of the inscription is that a squarish space, in the centre contains a Padma-bandha design—its full description given; the Padma-bandha points to the skill of the author of the stanzas as a Versifier (monk Varasena).

The inscription begins with the Siddham symbol and the passage Om namo Vitarāgāya, then follows eulogy of the Jina. Verse 16 says how a mahotsava (great festival) of the Tirthankara Neminātha was celebrated at the new Chaitiya on the 7th of the bright half of Mādhya (Chaitra) in v. s. 1162 (1105 A. D.). The 2nd inscription on the pedestal of the Ratnatraya image, was found in a temple outside the fort at Shergarh. The characters are Nāgarī and the language is Sanskrit, influenced by Prakrit. It bears the date: v. s. 1191, Vaiśākha-sudi 2, Tuesday. Devapāla and Guṇapāla—thakkura's son and others, all these persons caused to be made the Ratna-traya (i. e., the images of the three Tirthankaras viz., Śāntinātha, Kunthunātha and Aranātha) at Kośavarddhana.

D. C. SINGAR.—Two inscriptions from Guntur Dist. (E. I. XXXII, Part II. Pp. 84-86 for 1957), Delhi. 1959.

Velpūru Inscription of Aira Mā(na) sāda : The king claimed to have belonged to the AIRA family. The rule of the Aira (Arya) family over the Guntur District and the adjoining area in the second A. D. is known for the first time. It is difficult to determine the exact relation of the Aira king mentioned above with the family of the Chedi—Mahāmeghavāhana king Khāravela of Kalinga. It is not impossible that Aira rule was established in the Krishna-Guntur region as a result of one of Khāravela's expedition in those areas, about the end of the first century B. C.

G. S. GAI.—Shiggaon Plates of Chālukya Vijayāditya, Śaka 630. (E. I. Vol. XXXII, Part VII for 1958, Pp. 317-24) (2 plates), Delhi. 1960.

These plates were discovered in the Shiggaon Tāluq of the Dhārwar District (Mysore State). The set consists of five copper-plates. The characters belong to the southern class of alphabets. The language is Sanskrit. It belongs to the reign of Mahārājādhirāja Paramēśvara Bhaṭṭāraka Vijayāditya-Śatyāśraya of the Western Chālukya of Badami. The object of the record is to register some grant made by the king when he had gone to Banavasi in order to see the Alupa ruler Chitravāhana. The grant was made, at the request of Chitravāhana, to the Jain monastery, which was caused to be constructed by Kumkumadevi at Purigere. The date would fall on Monday 20th June, A. D. 707. The grant was issued when the royal camp was at Kisuvolal (identified with Paṭṭadkal in Hungud Tāluq, Bijapur Dist.). Vijayāditya had a sister named Kumkumamahādevi and she caused to be constructed a Jain monastery called Ānesejjeyabasadi at Purigere (Ind. Ant. Vol. XVII, Pp. 35 ff.). Text given and also plates.

S. SANKARANARAYANA.—Aivarmalai Inscription of Varaguna II, Śaka 792. (E. I. Vol. XXXII, Part VII for 1958, Pp. 337-38) (1 Plate). Delhi, 1960.

Inscription engraved on the rock above a natural cave on the hill called Aivarmalai in the village of Aiyampālaiyam in the Palrni Tāluq (Madura Dist.) Characters—Vatteluttu, language Tamil. Date, 8th regnal year of Varaguna equated with Śaka year 792 expired. It records a gift 502 kaṇam of gold to the Jain monk Śāntivira-kkuravar of Kalam, who was a disciple of Guṇavīra-kuravaḍigal. The gift was for food offerings (avi) to the deities and for feeding (śōru) one Jain ascetic. Text given and I plate.

Notes 1-14. Tiruvayirai, i. e. Aivarmalai had been a Jain hermitage in the 9th century A. D.; but at present there is only a Gaṇeśa temple.

G. S. GAṬ—Jalore Inscription of Chahamana Chachigadiva, V. S. 1331 (Epi. Ind. Vol. XXXIII, 1959.) Delhi, 1960.

Pp. 46-49. The inscription is engraved on a pillar in the building called Tophkhānā, originally a mosque built out of the materials from the local Hindu and Jain temples; at Jalore in the Jodhpur Division of Rajasthan. In Nāgari characters and Sanskrit language; the date-Saṃvat 1331 (1274 A. D.). Refers to the reign of the Mahārājakula Sri Chachigadeva ruling at Javalipura. The object of the inscription is to record a grant to the God Mahāvīra in the Chamḍana-Nihāra in the Jain monastery attached to the Nāṇakya-Gachcha. The occasion of the grant was the Ashṭāhnikā festival of Āsvayuja (Mirji Annarao, Jaina Dharma—Kannada, P. 572; Ind. Ant. Vol. VI, P. 26, text lines 15-17; Suc. Sat. P. 271). Mentions Dhaneśvara-sūri. Text—31 lines.

V. P. JOHARAPURKAR.—Veraval inscription of Chaulukya Bhima II, (Epi. Ind. Vol. XXXII, 1959. Delhi, 1960), Pp. 117-120.

Inscription was found at Prabhās Pāṭan (Veraval) (now in Junagadh Museum); Language Sanskrit and characters Nāgari of 11th or 12th century A. D. Description of the City of (Aṇahilla) pāṭaka; ruling King Bhima II (Chaulukya-1218 to 1243 A. D.). Line of Teachers from Kunda-Kunda of Nandisangha; Śrīkṛti a prominent pontiff of the line, on whom the King conferred the title Maṇḍalācārya. Mulavasatika temple Anahillapura. Teachers who succeeded Śrīkṛti. Restoration of the temple of Chandraprabha at Prabhāsa at the instance of Maṇḍalagaṇin Lalitakṛti, verse 92 of the inscription refers to a miracle associated with the image of Chandraprabha is found in Madankṛti's Śāsanachaturtrimīkā (published by the Virasevā Mandir, Delhi) in praise of various Jain holy places. Kundakunda—his traditional date 1st century B. C.; some scholars put him in the 2nd century A. D.; his domicile was Konkṇḍala in the Anantapur Dist., Andhra Pradesh (I. M. S. Vol. XLVI, Pp. 1ff). Śrīkṛti referred to in this inscription, is mentioned in Śrīchandra's Kaṭhākośa. (The struggle for empire P. 427). Śrutakṛti, the disciple of Śrīkṛti, said to have been honoured by King Bhoja (Parmara Bhoja. C. 1010-55 A. D.) and Gāngeya (Kalachuri Gāngeya. C. 1015-41 A. D.). The patrons of Śrīchandra were the grandsons of one Sajjana who was the Dharmasthānagossthika of King Mūlarāja of Anahillapura. The inscription testifies to the flourishing condition of Jainism in Gujarat in the reign of Bhima II, even after a set back recieved under the rule of Ajayapāta and Mūlarāja II. It also goes to prove that the Digambara sect continued to flourish in Gujarat even under the overwhelming influence of the great Śvetāmbara teacher, Hemachandra who is probably referred to in line 15 of our inscription.

A. L. BASHAM.—Paliad Plates of Bhimadeva I, V. S. 1112 (E. I. Vol. XXXIII, Part VI, for 1960, Pp. 236-237). Delhi, 1960 (1 Plate).

This set of plates was discovered at Paliad, a village in Eastern Saurashtra. The characters are Nāgari. The date is v. s. 1112, Chaitra Su. 15 (end April, 1056 A.D.). The grant was issued when Mahārājādhirāja Bhimadeva was residing at Akasika-grama (Chaulukya of Gujarat, c. 1024-1066 A.D.). Grant made by the king in favour of the Jain monastery at Vāyaḍa (Botad).

D. C. SIRCAR —Davangere Plates of Ravivarman, year 34, (E. I. Vol. XXXIII, Part II for 1959, Pp. 87-92). Delhi, 1960. 1 plate.

A set of three copper-plates; it was edited in the A. R. of the Mysore Ar. Dept. for 1933, Pp. 109-16, plate XXII—Numerous mistakes. Early Kadamba characters, Sanskrit language. Date—the 34th regnal year of the early Kadamba king Revivarman, which fell about 524 A.D.

The inscription begins with a stanza in adoration of the Sarvajna Sarvalokanātha, since both these are well known names of the Buddha, the deity is identified with the founder of Buddhism; but the editor associated the verse with Jainism. The early Kadambas were Brahmanical Hindus; they had Jain leanings and many of their charters contain Jain adorations and were issued in favour of Jains or Jain institutions. The objects of the grant were the maintenance of worship in the Śiddhayaṭana and the increase of Saṅgha; but these are Buddhist religious institutions. Plots of land were granted at Asandi; Asandi has been identified with a village in the Kadur District of Mysore.

P. SREENIVASACHAR and P. B. DESAI.—Kannada Inscriptions of Andhra Pradesh, Andhra Pradesh Government Archaeological Series No. 3. Hyderabad, 1961.

P. 12. No 33—Mahaboobnagar. 58 Pudur.

This inscription refers itself to the reign of the Western Chālukya king Tribhuvanamalla Vikramāditya VI from Kalyanapura (A. D. 1387).

It introduces the king's feudatory Mahāmaṇḍaleśvara Hallavarasa of Pundur, a Jain—with titles Master of the throne of Ayodhyā and Lord of Kembunkundurapura. This chief made gift of land, gardens, house, sites etc. to the Pallava Jinālaya of Dravila Sangha by laying the feet of his preceptor Kanakasena Bhattāraka.

P. 13. No. 35 —Mahaboob nagar. 60 Ujjili.

This inscription belongs to the reign of the Western Chlūkyia king Someśvara
IV It is dated Śaka 1089 (seems to be mistake for 1108).

It registers gift of the income derived from the tax Vaddarāvula and a tank with the adjoining land for offerings and worship etc. of the god in the Jain temple, called Baddi Jinālaya situated in the fort of Ujjivolal, the capital of Kallake lagu Nadu. The gift was made after vaving the feet of Indrasena Paṇḍita, the priest of the temple, by Bhānudeva, the army officer of the same Nadu with the concurrence of Saudhare Kesavayya of the region.

P. 13 No. 36.—Mahaboobnagar. 61 Ujjili.

The damaged inscription refers itself to the reign of a Western Chālukya king whose name is lost. It is dated Śaka 888 which must be an error.

It registers gifts of land and flower-garden for worship and offering in the temple of god Chenna Pārśva called Baddi Jinālaya, for its repairs and for feeding the visiting ascetics male and female. The temple belonged to Dravida Sangha, Sena gaṇa and kaurūra gaccha. The gifts were entrusted into the hands of the priest of the temple Indrasena Paṇḍita, disciple of Vādirāja. Other gifts by the local mercantile community were also made to the deity.

P. 14. No. 39.—Medak. 3 Alladurgam.

The inscription refers itself to the reign of the Western Chālukya king Tribhuvanamalla Vikramāditya VI. It is dated Chālukya-Vikrama year 9 corresponding to A. D. 1084.

It registers a gift of wet land for feeding the ascetic in the Kṛtivilāsa Santi Jinālaya by the King's subordinate Mahāmandaleśvara Ahavamalla Permanadi, Kamaladeva Siddhānti received the gift.

Pp. 16-17. No. 45—Nalgonda. 43 Kolanupaka.

This record is engraved on the four faces of a pillar (māna-stambha). The entire record appears to belong to the reign of the Western Chālukya king Tribhuvanamalla Vikramāditya VI.

It registers gift of the village Panupura to the goddess Ambikā of the locality Ambaratilaka, by Mahāmaṇḍaleśvara Chālukya Ganga-permadi Kumara Someśvara at the request of Sāyimayya the army commander. Ambikā must be the Śāsanadevatā of the Jain Tirthankara Neminātha.

The inscription in its fourth face states that this pillar was caused to be erected in the shrine of goddess Ambikā by pergade Keśirāja, officer in charge of the religious establishment who was himself a devout Jain. It contains an account of the preceptors of Kanur gana.

P. 21. No. 56.—Raichur. 2 Kopbal.

This inscription is an epitaph, engraved in characters of about the 13th century. It states that it is the memorial in honour of the deceased Gurugala Bhandappa (?) lay disciple of the Jain teacher Chandrasena of Śrī-Kopana.

P. 21. No. 57.—Raichur. 3 Kopbal.

This inscription is dated Śaka 803 which corresponds to A. D. 881. It states that the Jaina teacher Sarvanandi Bhaṭṭāra, disciple of Ekachattugaga Bhaṭṭāra of Kunda-Kunda lineage stayed in the Tirtha of the town, performing penance for a considerable time and expired by vow of Sanyāsana.

P. 21. No. 59—Raichur, Kopbal.

This damaged inscription engraved in characters of about 13th century, states that it is the Nishidhi memorial of the local merchant Paya (kaṇṇa) by disciple of the Jain preceptor who belonged to Mūlasangha and Senagaṇa.

P. 21 No. 60—Raichur. 60 Kopbal.

This damaged inscription, engraved in characters of about the 15th century, refers to the carving of the foot marks of the Jain preceptor Devendrakiṛti on the hill by his disciple Varadhamānadeva

D. C. SINGAR and M. R. MAJUMDAR.—Fragmentary Inscription from Dholka, (E. I. Vol. XXXV, Part II for 1963 ; Pp. 89-94). Delhi, 1963.

This inscription was discovered on the back side of a slab of black granite stone, the front side of which contains an image of Viṣṇu in high relief. The deity is now worshipped under the name of Raṇchhodji in a temple at Dholka (Dhavalaka) in the Ahmedabad District. It is a fragment of a bigger one; the inscribed slab was cut into two parts at a later date for utilisation of a Jain slab for making the Viṣṇu image, points to the genuineness of the tradition regarding the anti-Jain policy followed by the successors of Kumarpāla who is himself said to have been a devout Jain.

The characters from Devanāgarī of about the 12th century A.D. The concluding stanza of the inscription states that it was a prajastī composed by the muni Rāmachandra (a pupil of the Jain polymath Hemachandra-sūri).

The main purpose of the inscription was to record the construction of the Udayana-vihāra by Udayana's son Vāgbhaṭa (of the Śrīmāla community). Text given.

D. C. SIRCAR.—Silver Coin of Vaiṣṇīthi-Putra Satakarni, (E. I. Vol. XXXV, Part VI for 1964, Pp. 248-49). Delhi, 1963.

Its reverse legend, which has not yet been correctly read and interpreted, is of great importance; it throws new light on the Dravidian language and alphabet of about the 2nd century A.D. The legend has been read by Dinkar RAO (JNSI, Vol. XXI, Pp. 9-12) as Arihanasha valo-danda-dha-Kanashatiru-Hotakanisha. He explains arihana as 'the killer of enemies', Altekar reads—arahanaśha (JNSI, Vol. XXI, Pp. 13-17). Altekar's interpretation arahana as arhana, 'the worshipful one', does not appear to be happy, because arhana really means 'worship' and not 'worshipful'.

The originals of neither of the two words of Dravidian origin used in the legend, viz., arasan-arahana and makan-makana, are now traceable in Telugu which was the mother tongue of the Sātavāhana kings called Andhra in the Purāṇas. The phonology and vocabulary of Telugu were much nearer Tamil in the second century A.D., seems to be clear from the occurrence of the two words in the Prākṛit legend on the coin under study.

D. C. SIRCAR and G. BHATTACHARYA.—Fragmentary Rāṣṭrakūṭa Inscription from Kandhar. (E. I. Vol. XXXV, Part III for 1963). Delhi, 1963.

P. 105. Kandhar (also spelt as Quandhar and Kandahar) is 32 miles south-west of Nanded in the Nander District, formerly in Hyderabad State but now in Maharashtra. The town of Kandhar abounds in many ruined structures and Hindu, Buddhist and Jain images.

D. C. SIRCAR and K. V. RAMESH.—Two Songira Inscriptions from Barlui, (E. I. Vol XXXVI, Pt. I., January 1955). Calcutta, 1964. Pp. 33-38.

The two inscriptions are engraved, the second in continuation of the first, on a stone slab broken into three pieces. Some letters being damaged; the characters—the Nāgri alphabet of about the thirteenth century; the language is Sanskrit.

The first record is dated in Vikrama 1283, Jyeshtha-sudi 8, Thursday (7th May, 1226 A.D.) falling in the reign of the Songira Chauhan ruler Udayasimha of Jalor. The second inscription is dated Vikrama 1330, Phalguna-sudi II, Sunday (18th February, 1274 A.D.). Both of them record some pious deeds of a Chauhan chief named Albhata and certain other persons with reference to a Jain establishment, the Śāntinātha temple at Barlūt.

I. Inscription of the time of Udayasimha, v.s. 1283.

The inscription records three different gifts made by Rāja (i.e. Rajputra—Rawat) Abhata; (1) gift of land in favour of the god Śāntinātha and of the Mananasimha-vihāra for a temple (devagriha) belonging to the Brihad-gachchha; (2) gift of a piṭha in favour of the god Śāntinātha in the village of Valadautha, i.e., modern Barlūt; (3) gift of (the income) an araghatta for the expenses of offering worship to the god.

The importance of the epigraph is that it furnishes the earliest date for the ruler of the Songira Chauhans over the Sirohi region.

II. Inscription of the time of Chachig, Vikrama 1330.

It is dated Vikrama Samvat 1274, Phalguna-sudi II, Sunday (18th February, 1274 A.D.). It records construction of a pihara of the same name. It mentions Śreshthin (banker) Padmasimha, belonging to the Ambai gotra, the Nasala santhana (family) and the Prāgvāṭa (Porwad) and Umsevala (Oswal) communities.

The building constructed by Padmasimha and others was consecrated by Guṇabhadra-sūri of the Brihad-gachchha.

A. de GUBERNATIS.—Le iscrizioni del Kathiavar, (Studi italiani di Filologia indoiranica, vol. I, Pp. 27-33). Firenze, 1897.

Pp. 28-30. General considerations on the Jainism with respect to the inscriptions of Aśoka.

Would not the Jains be the descendants of a Heterodox sect more ancient than the Buddhism? Large spirit of toleration of the Jains. The Jainism has existed in India in spite of the persecution precisely because of this toleration, and also because the Jains occupied specially some regions or the Brahmanical power could not be fully exercised. Aśoka appeared to the author a Jain king rather than Buddhist.

In eight different sections of the stone are given the names of eight persons whom perhaps the images represent. Some of these were Chandrabhūti of the Mūla sangha and Chandrendra, Badayya and Tammanna of the Āpanīya (i. e. Yāpanīya)-sangha.

(111) Do, on the pedestal of a Jain image kept in the talug office at Rāyadrug (Bellary District) of the Vijayanagar king Harihara (I), dated in (Śaka) 1277. Manmatha, Margasira ; records that a Jain merchant named Bhogarāja consecrated the image of Śāntinātha Jineśvara. This merchant is stated to have a pupil of Māghanandivratin, the disciple of Amarakṛti-Āchāryya of Kundakundānvaya, sārasvata-gachchha, Balārākā gana and Mūla sangha.

P. 56 (525) Do, on the base of a Jain image in the Archaeological show room of the Madras museum. This is the image of Śāntināthadeva of the temple of Yeraga ḥinālaya founded by the Mahāpradhana (Bra)hadevana.

(536) Do, on the base of another Jain image in the same place ; records that king Salvadeva, a great lover of sahitya, got an image of Śānti Jina made according to rule and set it up.

P. 96. The earliest of the Vijayanagara stone records dated in Śaka 1277 (1355-56 A. D.), is engraved on the pedestal of a Jain image kept in the talug office at Rāyadrug. Records the name of the name of the Jain merchant Bhogarāja (see P. 12, stone inscription No. 111).

A reference to a nīṭḍi—stone from Rāyadrug bearing on it images of eight Jain teachers and lay disciples. (see, P. 12, stone inscription No. 109).

van' and 'Kula Vānigan' are perhaps the names of persons who were dealers in gold and grains.

From a Jain settlement Alagarkoyil turned into a Hindu one in the time of Nakkirar. Alagarmalai identified with Palamudirsolai.

D. M. DISKALKAR.—Girnar Inscription of the Time of Bhima. (II) of V. S. (I) 256—
(P. O. Vol. I ; 1936-37).

P. 45. The inscription in a niche containing the image of Nandisvara to the north-west of the temple of Sangrāma Soni on the Girnār HillIt is Sanskrit poetry. The record opens with the date, Friday, the 13th of the bright fortnight of the month of Jayeṣṭha of the (Vikrama) Samvat (1) 256, records the son of the general of the Chālukya king Kumarapāl was named Abhayad, who was very much devoted towards the Jain religion.

v. s. 1256 falls in the reign of Chālukya sovereign Bhima II—Christian date corresponding to the one in the record is Sunday the 28th May, 1200 A. D. Text given.

K. SITARAMAIA.—Hathigumpha Inscription. (Proceedings of the Indian History Congress 9th Session, Annamalainagar, 1945).

Pp. 52-55. Hathigumpha Inscription a landmark in the history of Southern India ; a golden period of Kalinga history ; data about the Sātavahanas—four facts emerge are :

1. The name of the Sātavahana King against whom Khāravela sent army was Satakarni.
2. Khāravela sent army which went westward.
3. The army crossed Kanha-Benna.
4. The city of Musik destroyed by the army.

A place called Maski in Raichur district (Hyderabad) indentified with the city of Musika. Satakarni I, the husband of Naganika might have helped Kāravela in his expedition against Magadha.

K. D. BAJPAI.—Some epigraphic evidence bearing on the Śvetāmbara and Digambara divisions. (Jain Ant. Vol. XII, No. I), Arrah, 1946. Pp. 40-43.

Though a divergence existed between the two sects in the early centuries of Christian era for a long time the difference remained nominal. It was only in the late Medieval period that the gulf between the two became wide enough so much so that each of them began to mention its name on record in order to claim its clear cut distinction from the other. The inscriptions where an explicit reference to this distinction is noticed are all later than the 9th century A. D. Some epigraphic passages quoted.

Srikantha SASTRI.—Hebhata Grant of Durvinita Gaṇḡa. (QJMS. Vol. 38, No. 2, 1947, Bangalore).

Pp. 74-75. Simha VARMA—The Lokavibhāga date is suspect. The closing portion of Lokavibhāga given (Jain Anti. IV, Pt. 3, Pp. 114-115). Sarvanandin's original work was in Bhāṣā and Simhanandi translated it into Sanskrit in the 22nd year of Simhavarmān of Kanchi, 458 A. D. (Ś. 380). The present Sanskrit text seems to have been a revised text of Samphasūri's work produced after Trilokasāra Ādi-Purāṇa and the Sanskrit version of Triloka Prajñapti. The astronomical details about Sarvanandi, are not adequate to determine his date 346 A. D. H. Krishna SASTRI rejected the Lokavibhāga date as it was opposed to the Ongodu II grants (E. I. XV. P. 252).

In grants of Avinīta (Hosur, C. P. 12th Year, M.A. R. 1938 No. 1, E. C. X. ML. 72), the grant was made for the merit of the mother of Samhaviṣṇu Pallavā-dhirāja. She built a Jain Temple for the glory of her husband's family and gave it to Yāvanika (Yāpunika or Yāpuniya) Sangha and the land endowed was Śramana Kēdāra.

Pp. 84-85. Deva, i.e., Devanandin Pūjyapāda, the author of the Jain grammar Sabdāvatāra. Humcha Prasasti of Vidyānanda re : Pūjyapāda—quoted. In the Paṭṭāvalis of Ballātkāragāṇa (I. A. XX, P. 351) Pūjyapāda is placed between 253-353 v.s. (197-296 A.D.) but this date is too early. Pūjyapāda's disciple Vajranandin is said to have established Dravida Sangha in Southern Madhura in 470 A.D. After Pūjyapāda there is one Guṇanandin and after him Vajranandin. Another Pūjyapāda of Devagāṇa was the teacher of Udayadēva Paṇḍita or Nirvadya Paṇḍita of Alaktapura (Puligere), to whom Vijayāditya Cālukya of Badāmi made a grant in Ś. 651, 794 A.D. Pūjyapāda must be assigned to the end of the 5th Century and Samantabhadra still earlier. Pūjyapāda may be brought down to C. 475 A.D. when he could possibly have been the contemporary of Durvintta and Bhāravi.

D. R. PATIL — Churli or Chudapallaka of the Vallā-Bhaṭṭa-Svāmin Temple inscription in the Gwalior Fort, (dated Samvat 933) (Proc. and Trans. AIOC, XVth Session, Bombay, 1949).

P. 310. Situated about 20 miles south-east and n. 3 of the fort it is a small village. Mr. GARDE discovered here a Jain Chaumukha.

Aśoka Kumar BHATTACHARYA — An Inscription on a Jaina image from Patur, Akola (Jain, Anl. Vol. XVI, No. II) Arrah, 1950. Pp. 1 to 2.

The inscription on the image of Sukidhi from Patur, Dist. Akola is in three times in Sanskrit and refer itself to year 1245 of the v. s. This contains a succession list of Jain Pontiffs—Sri N(ai)viradevarsi (Mani) ka (Manikaya) deva—Sri Vi(i)-rasenadeva—pa(m)gasenadeva—V(ra?)nasenadeva. Text with plate.

K. D. BAJPAI.—Three new Kuṣāṇa inscriptions from Mathura. (Jain Ant, Vol. XVI, No. I), Arrah, 1950. Pp. 13-16.

I. Engraved on a fragmentary image of Vardhamāna or Mahāvira the inscription in Brāhmī is dated in Śaka year 92 (170 A.D.) and shows on the pedestal the worship of dharmachakra. Text with notes.

II. Inscribed on a broken pedestal the inscription containing three lines of writing in Brāhmi refers to Sumati (the 5th Tīrthankara). It is important in so far as it refers to the making of an image of Sumati (whose early images are rarely known) early in the Kuṣāṇa period. Text with notes.

III. On the pedestal of a broken Tīrthankara image the inscription in Brāhmi refers to year 17 (A.D. 95) of Kaniṣka. Text with translation given.

K. D. BAJPAL.—Two new dated Kuṣāṇa Inscriptions from Mathura. (Jain. Ant. vol. XVIII, No. II), Arrah, 1952. Pp. 39-40.

It appears that the pedestal on which the second inscription of the year 53 of Huviska (13 A.D.) was discovered is without the image. The presence of the lions which is a distinctive emblem of Mahāvīra tempts one to believe that it might as well be the pedestal of a Jain image. The word 'Vihare' in the inscription is inadequate to make it a Buddhist inscription.

C. SRVARAMAMURTI.—Indian Epigraphy and South Indian Scripts. (Bulletin of the Madras Govt. Museum, No. 4) Madras, 1952.

P. 4. Settlement of disputes between a vaiṣṇava Feer and a Jain trader mentioned in a Vijayanagar inscription.

P. 5. The sister of Rāja-rāja, the queen Kundava, was responsible for a Jain temple at Tirumalai, King Devarāya built a Jain temple—these are examples to show friendly interest the kings took in the various religions other than their own.

P. 11. Khāravela a great contemporary of the Sunga, Puṣyamitra, and Śātakarni, the powerful Śātavahana sovereign; his qualities and achievements etc. described.

P. 13. Khāravela made the gift of the golden kalpataru; portrait of Mahendravarmān and his queen at Sittannavasal.

P. 16. The earliest example of Sarasvatī yet found in India is a headless image from Mathura with an inscription of about the beginning of the Christian era. Fig. 2.

P. 25. The symbols, Svastika and Śrīvatsa in Hāthigumphā inscription of Khāravela suggest svastīśrī स्वस्तिश्री, a form which in actual writing marks the beginning of Chālukyan grants etc. This is in addition to the brief salutation to the Jinas.

P. 26. Salutation to Jinas begins all Jain inscriptions which abound in the Canarese country and Northern Gujarat.

P. 28. Early legendary ancestor mentioned in Khāravela's inscription.

Contd. QJMS. vol. 43, No. 1. 1952. Banglore.

R. C. AGARWALA.—Some early Jain Inscriptions from Jodhpur division. (Jain. Ant. Vol. XX, No. II), Arrah, 1954. Pp. 15 to 18.

A short account of some early Jaina images and epigraphs found in the states of Jodhpur and Sirohi.

(2) Eighth century A. D. Jain bronzes from the temple of Mahāvīra at Pindawādā (Sirohi State) one bearing an inscription of Saṃvat 744. Text given.

P. B. DESAI.—More Inscriptions at Ablur, (Ep. Ind. vol. XXIX Part V. Cal., 1955).

Pp. 139-14. Ablur a village 6 miles north of Hirekerūr, the headquarters of Kōḍ tāluq. Dharwar Dist. Here in the temple of Someśvara, is an inscription above a panel of sculptures depicting the scene of Rāmayya's encounter with the Jinas as described by Fleet (above Vol. V, Pp. 260-61). Text (Fleet's F) given. Translation—"This is the place representing how Ekāntada Rāmayya laid a wager, at the cost of the Jina of the shrine ; and smashed the Jina and installed the linga (in its place)." There are two more inscriptions in the same temple. These deal with the same theme as the above, viz. Ēkāntada Rāmayya's victory over the Jains, of about 1200 A.C.

P. 143-nl. With the ascendancy of Śaivism the Jains of the Tamil country also were persecuted and the scenes of such persecutions are depicted in sculptures on the walls of the temple at Tiruvallur in the North Arcot Dist. (An Rep. on S.I. Epi. for 1923, p. 4).

P. 143 n4. In the wake of Rāmayya's victory conversions from Jain to Śaivism took place on a mass scale according to the Abalūra-charite, a Kannada work of the late period—It is unpublished.

P. 143. By the middle of the 12th century Karnataka witnessed the upsurge of a great religious movement emphasizing the superiority of God Śiva and his devotion. Two eminent personalities, one in the South and the other in the North, were instrumental in bringing about this upheaval. These were Ēkāntadeva Rāmayya and Basveśvara the founder of the Vīraśaiva faith. In consequence of the zealous activities of the leaders of this Śaiva revival, Jainism, Buddhism, Paśupata and other faiths prevailing in the land, received a staggering blow.

P. 144. The Kalachuri usurper Bijjala II was a staunch follower of Śaivism and had no particular interest as such in Jainism. The theory about the Jain leanings of Bijjala stands thoroughly exploded (see the "Kalachuris of Karnataka, Kannada Sahitya Parishad Patrike vol. XXXVI, Pp 102 ff.). Besides Rāmayya and Basveśvara, there flourished in this century other sponsors of the Śaiva movement: An inscription at Annigeri (Bombay-Karnatak collection No. 207 of 1928-29) in the Dharwar Dist. referring itself to the reign of the Western Chālukya King Vīra-Someśvara IV, and dated in 1184 A.C., introduces a feudatory Chief of the Sagara family named Vīra-Goggideva. An ardent upholder of the Śaiva faith, he is described as a 'fire to the Jaina scriptures' and 'a death to the adherents of the Jaina law'. The record further characterises him as 'an eagle to the snakes which are the Jains' and 'a hunter of the wild beasts in the form of followers of the Jina'. Another epigraph from Talikoti (Bombay-Karnatak Collection No. 68 of 1929-30) in the Bijapur Dist. referring itself to the same reign and year, furnishes the following facts about another feudatory, Mahāmandaleśvara Vīraparasa. He launched a regular crusade against the adherents of the other sects. A conflagration to the forest of Jaina creed and adept in demolishing the Buddhist canon, he pulverized the Jaina temples and raised the thrones of Śivalinga. We may note here the significant circumstances that both Vīra-Goggideva and Vīraparasa of the above two epigraphs lived in a period slightly later than that of Basveśvara and that their spheres of activities too were confined to the northern parts of Karnataka. This might have been responsible for the confession of later writers attributing to Basveśvara active hostility against the Jaina creed.

G. H. KHARE.—A note on three copper plate Grants. (Proc., I.H.C., XVIIth Session), Patna, 1956.

P. 134. The donee of the first copper plate, issued by Vijayāditya Chālukya of Badāmi in Śaka 627 and in his 10th regnal year at the request (?) of one Vishnurāja of a Sinda dynasty, was a Jaina Āchārya connected with the Jina temple of Kundili and belonged to the Kāshthāchārya tradition to which belonged Vimla-kīrti also. Several fields in the vicinity of Kundili were granted for the temple.

The donee of the second copper plate, issued by Rāshtrakūṭa Govinda III in Śaka 717, seems to be Āchārya belonging to the Kāshthāchārya tradition. The charter being incomplete and inscribed in a very bad hand nothing can be made out at present.

King Mayūravarmān of the Kadamba dynasty having got a son by the favour of the Jaina goddess Ambikā of Udumbrāja issued the third copper plate in which he paid homage to the goddess with his son Prabhākara and donated the village Udumbrāja (Umbraj, North Satara) and some fields to one Cuṇadeva, pupil of one Śrīpāla.

These grants shed much new light on the Jain establishments of two Satara districts and bring to light altogether new personalities.

H. V. TRIVEDI.—A further note on the Indragarh stone Inscription. (Prof. I.H.C. XVIIth Session), Patna, 1956.

At Indragarh, 2/3 miles north-west of Bhānpur in the Mandasor district of Madhya Bharat some Jain antiquities have been discovered which prove the harmonious and concurrent existence of religions, viz. Hinduism and Jainism.

Balchandra JAIN—Adhabhara plates of Maha-Namrāja II. (Proc., I.H.C. XIXth Session), Patna, 1957.

P. 133. Adhabhara (also spelt Adbhar or Arbhar), about 40 miles from Bilaspur, is a village in Sakti tahsil of the Bilaspur district of Madhya Pradesh. It contains an old temple of Devī. On the site of this temple is a hut containing a Jain seated figure.

Annual Report on Indian Epigraphy for 1951-52. Calcutta, 1957.

P. 3 Stone Inscriptions : Three new Brāhmi inscriptions (Nos. 140-142), copied in the caverns on the hill at Tiruparankunram, near Madurai, Madras State, are the earliest epigraphs in the year's collections. They were exposed to view in the course of repairs carried out recently to the caverns. They belong to the same class of records as those found in other caverns in the District of Madurai, Rāmanāthapuram and Tirunelvali in South India (cf A.R. Ep. 1912, p. 50 & Plate). Probably they record the names of persons who carved out the stone beds in these caverns. In an inscription (dated 773 A.D.) No. 143 in the rock-cut cave temple of Subrahmanya at Tirupparankunram, the hill is called Paramaśikharin which is obviously the Sanskrit rendering of the Tamil name Tirupparamkuram.

Radha Krishna CHAUDHARY.—Select Inscriptions of Bihar. Patna, 1958.

Pp. a-b. Foreward : During the latter part of the Sixth century B.C. Bihar was the field of activity of the great founders of both Jainism and Buddhism. Of these, Jainism is still one of the principal religious faiths of India.

Pp. 3-5. Introduction : The Bihar inscriptions generally preach Buddhism, Jainism and Brahmanism having an accomodating spirit and aim at cultural Synthesis. Rājgir had the unique fortune of being the seat of Buddhist and Jain cultures.

P. 7. Appendix II : Hāthigumphā inscription, one of the most important sources for the history of Bihar.

P. 16. Ap. III : Champa—Mahāvīra spent three rainy seasons here.

P. 20. Champur—Stories about it are preserved in the Jain literature.

P. 24. Mallapārvata—Pārśvanāth hill in Hazārībāgh—It is the mount Maleus of the Greeks (Merinde—Pp. 63-139).

P. 25. Maniyar Maṭha—Originally the name of a Jain sanctuary. It is in Rājgir.

Pārśvanātha—A Jain Hill site in Hazārībāgh.

P. 26. Pātaliputra—Capital of Nagadha—its names, Kusumpur and Pushapur. Also famous in Jain tradition.

Pāvāpurī—A Jain religion centre.

G. M. BONGARD—LEVIN.—Epigraphic document of the Mauryas from Bengal IAS Letters, vol. XXIV from Bengal No. 2, 1958, Calcutta, 1960.

P. 79. A piece of lime stone with seven lines of Brāhmī letters on it was discovered during archaeological excavations at Mahāsthān. The inscription drew the attention of several linguists (All references given).

P. 80. No occasion is known when Chandragupta and Bindusāra patronized Buddhism. Only under Aśoka Buddhism became an object of care on the part of the state. However Aśoka was not opposed to other religions and sects.

P. 80. Ancient epigraphic sources, discovered in East Bengal, and several other monuments give grounds to suppose that this region was a field where Jainism spread.

P. 80. Whether some interpretation or other of this text is sound or not should be examined not only in the light of philological regularity but also on the basis of historical material.

P. 81. Vanga usually denotes eastern parts of Modern Bengal, and Puṇḍra, the northern.

P. 83. The inscription tells that grain (paddy) and money must be reserved for the occasion of flood, famine and other calamities. Puṇḍranagara is identified with Mahāsthān. Bengal was a part of the Maurya Empire.

P. R. SRINIVASAN—The Pillar—Inscriptions of Sittannavasal and their bearing on the date of its Paintings. (Lalita Kala No. 9, 1961, New Delhi)—A note.

Pp. 57-58. The rock-cut Jain cave temple of Sittannavāsai was previously considered to belong to the time of Mahendra Varman I (C.A.D. 600-630). Some scholars attribute the cave to the early Pāṇḍyas of the 7th century A.D. and the paintings to the 9th century A.D. On the evidence of an inscription of the time of the Pāṇḍya King Avampase Khare Sri Ballabha (C.A.D. 862) stating that a Jaina Acārya of Madura arranged for certain repairs in the shrine and for the building of a mukha-maṇḍapa (A.R.E. 1904, No. 368)—it has been suggested that the repairs included the painting both afresh and the addition of another layer of painting.

Two inscriptions of not earlier than A.D. 800 (ARIE for 1960-61, Nos. B 325 and B 326) bearing chisel marks probably to receive and keep in tact the layer of lime plaster carrying the paintings, revealed that the paintings were later than the time of the inscriptions. Accordingly the paintings may be taken to have been added to the shrine about the first half of the 9th century A.D.

No. 10 is a Pallava chapter dated in the 6th regnal year of Vijaya-Simhavaraman. The Chapter records that king Simhavaraman granted village of Śramaṇāśrama to Vajranandin of Nandisaangha at Vardhamānaneśvaratīrtha for conducting the worship of Jina.

The grant of land by Simhavaraman to the Jain ascetics living at Puruttik-kunru which is a locality near Kanchipuram is interesting. This gift is significant as reflecting the growing influence of Jainism. Mahendravarman, Sirivishnu's son and successor was originally a Jain.

Among places mentioned in the inscription Perunagar is the locality of the same name in the Kāncīpuram Tāluq and Tamar is Tamal in the same Tāluq. Amanserkkai (Śramaṇāśrama of the Sanskrit portion) the village granted cannot be identified definitely since there are several villages around Perunagar with names like Ammaṇantāṅgal Ammanambakkam etc.

Jyoti Prasad JAIN.—Some unpublished Jain Inscriptions. (Jain Ant., vol. XXII, No. II) Arrah, 1964, Pp. 1 to 8.

1. Pallava Charter from the Tanjavur district of the State of Madras dated in the 6th regnal year of Pallava Simhavarman (c. 550-575 A.D.) which records the grant of lands in Amnserkkai and Tomar the Jain saint Vajranandin of Paruttikunru in the earliest copper-plate inscription of the Pallavas of Kanchi. The saint Vajranandin of this record is most probably identical with Vajranandin, the author of Nava-stotra and the founder of the Dramila or Dravida Sangha.

2. A copper-plate grant of the Western Chālukya emperor Vijayāditya issued in Śaka year 630 (A.D. 708) from Shiggaon (in the Dharwar district of the present State of Maharashtra) recording certain donations made by that king to the Jain bhavana which had been erected by the princess Kumkunadetti, a sister of Vijayāditya proves that the family creed of the Western Chālukyas of Vatapi in the 7th-8th centuries was Jainism, and that Vijayāditya's feudatory chiefs the Alupa rulers of Vanavasi were also followers of Jainism.

3. Stone inscription from Macherla (In Palnad taluq of Guntur district in the state of Andhra Pradesh) of the region of the Eastern Chālukya king of Vengi, Jayasimhavallabha II, and issued in the 8th year (C. 714 A.D.) of his reign records gift of land to the god Arhanta Bhatara by certain officers of Pallinandu. It is curious that the region (Palnad taluq) has retained its original Jaina nomenclature during the past thirteen centuries.

4. A stone inscription from Lemulavada (in the district of Karimnagar of the erstwhile Nizam's dominion) belonging to the reign of King Baddega of the Chālukya royal family of Lemulavada records the construction of Jinālaya (Jain temple) by king Baddega at the instance of or for the benefit of Somadeva Sūri of the Gauda Saṃgha. There is no doubt that the Somadeva Sūri of this record is none else but the reputed author of Nṛtivākyāmrta and Yasastilaka Champu and that the Jain temple referred to the Subhadhama Jinālaya for the maintenance of which King Arikesari, the son and successor of this Chālukya Chief Baddega or Vaddega issued a copper-plate grant in Śaka 888 (A.D. 966) in favour of his guru Somadeva Sūri.

5. A spurious epigraph from Kallubhavi (in the Belgaum district of the Mysore State), dated Śaka 201 (?) Kihhawa but written in characters of the eleventh century, records that in the reign of Rāshṭrakūṭa king Amoghavarṣa his Maḥāmaṇḍaleshvara Saigotta-Ganga Permandi (alias Shivamāra) made a gift of the village of Mukkadavada in Kadalavalli 30 the temple of Jinendra and states that this grant was renewed by Kaucharasa. It seems that at the time of the renewal of the grant the year of the original grant of Ganga chief Sivamāra II Saigota has been written by mistake as Śaka 261 whereas it must have been same date between Śaka 700 and 740 when that Ganga ruler is known to have lived.

6. A stone inscription (now in the Hyderabad Museum) of the reign of king Jayasimha II of the later Chālukya dynasty of Kalyāni and dated in Śaka 949 Prabhava A. D. 1027 mentions Somala Devi, a hitherto unknown daughter of that monarch, a devoted Jain who when encamping at Pulipodaru made a grant to a basadi (Jain establishment) of Piriya Mosangi (modern Maski) which was probably her capital.

7. An inscription dated Samvat 1116 (A.D. 1059-60) inscribed on the lower part of a Jaina image found at Jantoli in the Ajmer District.

8. An inscription from Punduru (in the Mahbubnagar district of Andhra Pradesh) of the later Chālukya monarch Tribhuvanamalla (Vikramāditya VI) registers endowments of land, a garden and certain incomes to the god Pārshvadeva by Mahāmaṇḍaleshvara Jattarasa of Punduru in the 12th year (1087 A. D.).

9. A three-line inscription on a marble image of Tirthankara Pārshvanātha giving the date samvat 1150 (A. D. 1093).

10. An inscription engraved on the pedestal of an image of Tirthankara Pārshvanātha found in Bhojpur (district Raigarh of Madhya Pradesh), records the setting up of two images by one Chillana, son of Rama and grandson of Nemichandra in the reign of Naravarman (C. 1097-1111 A. D.), the Paramāra king of Malwa.

11. The inscription on the pedestal of the image of Raṇchoḍaji in a temple at this image at Dholka (district Ahmedabad in Gujarat State) show that this image was installed in v. s. 1266 (A.D. 1209). The original inscription—a large prāśasti composed by the well-known Shvetāmbara Jain poet Rāmachandra Sūri who is known to have died in 1174, records the construction of a Jaina monastery called the Udayana Vihāra by the minister Vagdahata, apparently in the memory of his father, Udayana, who was the chief minister of the Chālukya monarch Jayasimha Siddarāja (c. 1094-1144 A. D.). The date of the original inscription appears to be about 1150 A. D.

12. A three line inscription on the pedestal of a seated headless image of the 8th Tirthankara, Chandraprabha bearing the date Samvat 1209 (A. D. 1152-53). The image was acquired by the Rajputana Museum, Ajmer.

13. A stone inscription from Ariakere (in the Hassan district of Mysore State) of the region of the Hoysaḷa king Narasimha I of A.D. 1168 records the construction of a Jaina basti at (or of the name of) Nakara Jinalaya. A later inscription on the same stone states that the minister Chandramauli (possibly the famous Jaina minister of the same name of the Hoysaḷa King Ballala II) made grants for the restoration (or repairs) of that temple. Though a Brahmin by caste Chandramauli was a devoted Jain and his own records give the dates 1203-1204 A.D.

14. A Chahmana inscription from Barlut (in the Sirohi district of Rajasthan) on a stone slab kept in the Shāntinātha temple contains three parts. The first part records certain gifts in favour of god Shāntinātha and of the Manansingha Vihāra for the merit of Ra Manan Singh on v.s. 1283 (A.D. 1226); the second part of dated v.s. 1330 states that Ra Abhata along with his sons built the Manansingha Vihāra for the merit of Ra Manan Singh, and the third part refers to some pious deeds of Sri Padma Simha of the Pragvata community and to Parnabhadra Sūri of Brihad Gachchha.

15. An inscription from Jalor, dated v.s. 1331 (A.D. 1274-75) registers certain grants made by Mahārājakula Chachigadeva of the Jalor branch of Chahamana dynasty to the god Mahāvira installed in the Chandana Vihāra.

16. An inscription found at Maheswar records that in v.s. 1627, Śaka 1492 (A.D. 1571) one Mandoli Devadasa repaired and restored the ancient Jaina temple of Ādinātha at that place. In 1565 and 1570 A.D. he had already restored several Śaiva temples of the place.

17. An inscription dated Śaka 1577 (A.D. 1655) on a nishidhi at Sonda (in North Kanara district of Mysore) records the death of the Jain guru Bhaṭṭa Kalamkadeva who appears to be identical with the reputed author of Karnataka Śabdānuśāsana, the celebrated Sanskrit grammar of the Kannada language, and of Manjari Makaranda.

P. 3. On the Śamanarmalai hill near Kilkuyilkudi, Madurai District, was discovered a Kannada inscription of about the 12th century A. D., engraved on the top of the rock near a stone lamp-post (No. 244). It mentions the Jain teachers, Āriyadeva, Ba (Bā) lachandradeva of Belagula (i. e., Śravaṇa-Belgoḷa) who belonged to the Mūlasaṅgha, Nēmidēva, Ajitasenadeva and Govardhanadeva. Evidently this locality where Jaina inscriptions in Tamiḷ of about the 9-10th century A. D. have already been discovered (A.R.S.I.E., 1910, Nos. 63-69) continued to be associated with Jainism till the 12th century A.D. The connection of a Jaina teacher of Śravaṇa Belgola in Mysore with this ancient Jaina centre in the Tamil country is of special interest.

Department of Archaeology Annual Report on Indian Epigraphy for 1954-55. Published by the Manager of Publications Delhi. Printed at the Government of India Press, Calcutta, India 1957.

The Kāmākshi-amman temple at Kanchipuram has yielded 60 inscriptions. The earliest among them (No. 360) belongs to Narasingappāttaraiyar. The expression pottaraiyar clearly indicates that it refers to a Pallava king of that name. The inscription which is damaged is dated in the 18th regnal year of the king and is engraved in characters of about the 9th century. It seems to register a gift of land to the temple of arhat (aṣṭar) in Magilampalli. Anukka-pallavan who is mentioned in this connection appears to be, as the expression implies, an officer in the personal service of the king. The record also states that the queen Lokamahā-dévi was afflicted by a bahmarākshasa and mentions an āchārya of the ājīvak a darśana who played some part in probably alleviating her affliction. Since the imperial Pallava line had ceased to exist and there was no ruler of the name Narasingappottaraiyar at the period of this record, we have to conjecture that this epigraph, if it narrates an event of the reign of Pallava Narasimhavarman II, also known as Narasimhapotavarman, is a matter of an earlier record.

Annual Report on Indian Epigraphy for 1957-58. Delhi, 1961.

P. 9. Among the collections from Jalor No. 497 records the construction of Śrī-Kuvaravihāra by Chaulukya Kumarapāla in v.s. 1221, its renovation in v.s. 1242 at the instance of Chāhamāna Samarasimha of Songirā, the construction of a torana for the god Mahāvira and the hoisting of the flag on a staff made of gold in v.s. 1256 at the behest of the royal family, and the setting up of the golden cupola in the newly built central hall for dramatic performance on the dīpotsava-dina in v.s. 1268 (cf. Ep. Ind., Vol. XI, Pp. 54-55). The renovation of the temple by Samarasimha within two decades after its foundation probably indicates that this Vihāra built by Kumarapāla was affected by the invasion of Mu'izz-ud-din Muhammad Ghuri who is said to have plundered Nāḍol (The Struggle for Empire, p. 87).

No. 495. From the same place, dated v.s. 1331 and belonging to the time of Mahārājakula Chāchigadeva, refers to the Chandana-vihāra pertaining to the Jain monastery attached to the Nāṇaktya-gachchha to which 150 drmmas were endowed by certain persons for the worship of the god Mahāvira during the ashtahnika festival. The inscription referring to the said festival is dated the eleventh tithi of the bright half of Āsauja (Āsvina). According to Mirji ANNARAO's Jaina Dharma, p. 572, the festival is usually celebrated in the months of Āsbāḍha, Kārttika and Phālguna. The Harsi plates of Kadamba Ravivarman (Ind. Ant., Vol. VI, P. 26), where we find the earliest epigraphical reference to this festival, state that the king ordained this festival to be celebrated in the month of Kārttika. The epigraph is published in Ep. Ind. Vol. XXXIII, Pp. 46-49.

P. 10. Among the miscellaneous epigraphs of the year's collection, the following are noteworthy. Eight level inscriptions (Nos. 212-218) in archaic Chālukyan characters attributable to the 7th century A.D., engraved on the pillars in the Jain temple close to the meguti temple at Aihole in the Bijapur District of Mysore state, gave names such as Ānanda-sthavira, Mahendra, Bina-amman and Maureyan, and may be compared with similar level records both from this place (A. R. Ep., 1928-29, Nos. E. 1-31) and from Badāmi (ibid., Nos. E 101-131 : 1927-28, Nos. E-93-238).

D. C. SIRCAR.—Three Paramāra Inscriptions. (Pp. 185-186), Delhi, 1963 (Ep. In. Vol. XXXV, Pt. IV, 1963), Delhi, 1963.

Bhojpur Fragmentary Inscription of the time of Bhoja I.

This inscription is engraved on the pedestal of a colossal image of a Jain Tīrthānkara in the old Jain temple at Bhojpur in the Goharganj Tahsil of the Raigarh District, Madhya Pradesh. The village lies about 16 miles from Bhopal.

The language is Sanskrit and the record is written in two stanzas. The extant part of the record does not bear any date. But it can be referred to a date about the middle of the eleventh century A.D.

The object of the inscription is to record the installation of an image of Śānti-jina, i.e. the Jaina Tirthankara Śāntinātha, the ceremony of installing the image was performed by a Jain monk named Nemichandra-sūri. Although it is a Jain epigraph the invocation of Chandrārddhamauli or Śiva in verse 1 seems to suggest that the author of the two stanzas, in which the record was composed, was a Śaiva.

The importance of the inscription lies in the fact that it associates Paramara Bhoja I with Bhojpur or Bhojpara, "the city of Bhoja". It appears that Bhojpur was named after the said Paramara King.

Text given and plate.

2. Bhojpur Inscription of the time of Naravarman, Vikrama 1157.

This small inscription is engraved on the pedestal of an image of the Jain Tirthankara Pārśvanātha installed in the Jain temple at the village of Bhojpur, in the Goharganj Tahsil of the Raipur District of Madhya Pradesh.

The characters of the inscription are Nāgarī of the eleventh or twelfth century. Its language is Sanskrit. The inscription refers itself to the reign of Naravarman, no doubt the Paramāra king of that name, whose known dates range between Vikrama 1151 (1094 A.D.) and 1160 (1133 A.D.). It is dated in Vikrama 1157 (1100-01 A.D.). Next is mentioned the Vemakānvaya (i.e. the Vemaka family). It is stated that two Jina (i.e. Tirthankara) images were installed by a person named Chillaṇa who was the son of Śreṣṭhin Rāma and the grandson of Nemichandra.

Iconography study.

This very interesting study of Digambara iconography, illustrated by four plates besides text, comprises three sections :

1. Yakṣas or Yakṣiṇīs : Description of the secondary divinities who usually accompany each Tīrthankara.

2. Brahmanical divinities : Sarasvatī, Brahmayakṣa, Indra and Indrāṇī, the Navagrahas etc.

3. Different symbols : Om̐kara, Harim̐kara, Siddhacakra Pancatīrtha and Couvisvaṭa.

The figure is in the collection of the Jain Bronzes in the Museum of the Indian Historical Research Institute, St. Xavier's College, Bombay. Its iconography given and discussed. It is in an unusual form of a Jaina yakṣiṇi probably a combination of the Digambara form of Padmāvati and Vairoṇi as the figure has a canopy of serpenthood (nāgaphaṇā) and serpents in all the four hands.

The Anantagumphā (Orissa) contains a Gaja-Lakshmi motif ; fully described. Its representation betrays a similarity with the figures of mother goddesses found elsewhere. Śrī also shares the same iconographic style. One of the dreams of the mother of Mahāvira was the consecration of Śrī, standing in the midst of a lotus-pond, by elephants hoarding water in their trunks. Inscribed Saraswati sculpture from Kankālī Tilā (Mathura)—description given. An image of Tīrthan-kara—one of the vertical hands of the slab show a female holding a child on her left thigh and a lotus flower in her right side ; she is seated on a lion—it represents Gaurī or Ambikā the Yakshinī of Nemināth ; there are figures of Baladeva, Vāsudeva Balarām and Krishṇa—the left side image is that of four-armed Vishnu ; full description and legend from the Jaina books given.

Yakshinī Ambikā—an image of 8th-9th century ; a seated Jina over the head of the Goddess—the Jina is flanked on either side by Balarām and Vasudeva—description given.

So, the Gaja-Lakshmi, Sarasvati, Baladeva, Vāsudeva and Ambikā of Brahmanical pantheon were assimilated in Jaina religious beliefs and represented in Jaina art from an early period.

Pp. 43—47. A slab at Pakbirra, a small village 25 miles south-west of Purulia, with the figure of a woman in full maturity carved on it. She is standing under a tree. With her left hand she holds an arm of a child, on her right is the diminutive figure of a man, and on a pedestal is found the fore-part of a lion. The other slab has the figure of a woman also standing under a tree, but with a child on her left hip, and a lion sitting at her left foot etc. Both the figures are here identified with those of Agmita or Dharma-Devi.

MITRA, K.P.—“Notes on two images”—J.B.O.R.S. XXVIII, Patna, 1942.

Pp. 108-207. Agrees with the identification of the images attempted by Adris BANERJI, adds more details and offers the suggestion that the Jains have taken the idea of Ambikā from the Hindu goddess Ambikā together with her vehicle, the lion.

Vasudeva, S. AGARWALA.—A Fragmentary sculpture of Neminātha in the Lucknow Museum. (Jain Ant. Vol. VIII ; No. II ; Arrah ; 1942 ; Pp. 45-49—a plate).

A fragmentary sculpture of Nemināth (J. 69 in the Lucknow Museum) has an attendant figure of Balarāma, who has a hooded canopy of serpent hoods. Some sculptures of Balarāma and iconography discussed.

The images of Sarasvati, Naigameśa and Āryavatt are of very great importance for a history of early Jaina religious worship. Āryavatt in the inscription on it appears to represent the royal lady Trisalā. She appears to be lent an honorific name and no independent goddess so styled seems to be intended.

The images of Tirthankaras—distinctive marks. The Jaina Tirthamkaras are conspicuous by their absence in the Kushāṇa and Gupta periods. Cognizance marks (lanchanas) seem to have emerged as regular iconographic features during the post-Gupta period. The early sculptures in the absence of special marks distinguished one Tirthankara from another by engraving the saint's name on the pedestal.

Some evidence pointing to the early conception of distinctive marks as, canopy of snake-hoods meaning Supārśva or Pārśvanātha : locks of hair falling on both shoulders represent Rishabhānāth. A class of images in which the Tirthamkara is sought to be distinguished by means of his attendants, such as, Neminātha whose attendants may at once be recognised as Baladeva and Vāsudeva or Balarāma and Kṛṣṇa respectively who were cousins of the twenty second Tirthamkara Neminātha. Plate 98 of the Jaina Stupa of Mathura has a subsidiary figure of Yakṣiṇi Ambikā on lion definitely marking the Tirthamkara as Neminātha. This sculpture belongs to the early mediaeval period on the basis of its style. Another image of the early Gupta period (No. 2,502, Mathura Museum) shows Neminātha with his two divine attendants nearer to the canons of early Brahmanical iconography. The Yakṣiṇi Ambikā in the Neminātha images is the result of an afterthought in the early mediaeval period. It is invoked for purposes of iconography.

V. S. AGARWALA.—The Nativity scene on a Jaina Relief from Mathura. (Jaina Ant. Vol. I; No. I; Arrah, 1944; Pp. 1-1).

The sculpture discussed here assignable to about 1st century B. C. It portrays a religious scene. The nude standing figure in the crowd of persons fitting the proper right half of the scene leaves the Jaina character of the representation. The relief and the scene described. The scene represents the birth celebration of Mahāvira.

Āryavati sculpture (SMITH's Jaina Stūpa, Pl. XIV): The existence of a goddess of the name of Āryavati is unknown in the Jaina pantheon. It seems that the title signified. "The Venerable Lady" the royal lady Trisatā, mother of Mahāvira as Āryavati.

Asoka Kumar BHATTACHARYA—Symbolism and image—worship in Jainism. (Jain, Ant., Vol. XV, No. 1); Arrah, 1949, Pp. 1 to 6.

In Jainism an iconic symbol is never allowed to function purely biologically as the likeness of the person or thing symbolised. The symbolic representations by the Jaina in their mss. and religious sculpture is more or less of the character of sacred objects of worship, sometimes singly so and sometimes taken in groups. By the 1st or 2nd cent. A. D. images were worshipped by the Jains in fully developed form. Iconographic texts exclusively dealing with the forms of images which treating with the subject of pratiṭṭha or installation ceremony and texts containing casual references to iconographic matter are abundantly available not before the 9th or the 10 cent. A.D. The Jaina in early period paid but very little attention in the matter of the elaboration of the pantheon or the consecration and worship of the different deities included within it. This was probably due to the influence of Tantricism on Jainism in later ages round about the 10th or the 11th cent. A. D. Texts on images mentioned and discussed.

Tirthankara images of the mediaeval period in Bengal lack the Śrivatsa mark on the chest though elsewhere in North India it is present in Tirthankara (fig. 29, 2a). In South India also the Tirthankaras lack it. The mark is present on the chest of Tirthankaras in very early North Indian sculptures (Pl. DV.-B); it is absent in South Indian Tamil medieval sculpture; it is present in North Indian medieval sculptures (Pl. XVI. D) but never in Bengal (Pl. XV. C.).

Description of the Yoga-Nārāyaṇa (Viṣṇu) image of Jodhpur Museum given. Date : middle of the 9th century A. D. Remarkable feature of the image is the presence of the garland in both the upper hands of Viṣṇu instead of usual weapons. In a Nādol inscriptions Ep. Ind. vol. IX, Pp. 67-8 of 1161 A.D. Viṣṇu, Brahṃā and Śiva have all been called as Jinas, i.e., adherers of Jaina philosophy. The members of the local Jaina and Brahmanic communities got the above image of Viṣṇu fashioned in such a manner as to suit the taste of all and to serve the purpose of being worshipped by the non-Vaiṣṇavas.

R. C. AGRAWALA—Iconography of the Jain Goddess Saccikā. (Jain. Ant., Vol. XXI, No. I), Arrah, 1955. Pp. 13 to 20.

From the epigraphs and the niches of the Sacyā Mātā temple at Osian (about 39 miles from Jodhpur) it appears that Saccikā Devi was closely associated with Cāmūṇḍā, Mahīśāsūramardini etc. The Upakesagaccha Paṭṭavali also makes it evident that Saccikā was a non-Jaina goddess whom Ratnaprabhasūri converted to the Jaina view of life. An epigraph from the temple of Sacyā Mātā states that Cāmūṇḍā was also the former name of Saccikā. Texts of the inscriptions at the Saccikā Devi temples of Osian and Junā given. An image of Mahīśāsūramardini has been unearthed at Singoli near Boda Police station. Images of Mahīśāsūramardini are still worshipped in some of the Jaina temples of Western India. An epigraph (Ep. Ind. IX Pp. 67-8) from Nādol (Marwar) dated Samvat 1218 (1161 A.D.) makes it clear that prominent Hindu gods—Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Mahēśa used to be [adored by the Jains in the form of the Jinas.

P. 314. The words māna, unmāna and paṁāna occur in the Jain Kalpasutra in its description of Mahāvira's body, (S.B.E. XXII, p. 221).

P. 335. The newer cult-deities, the primitive folk Gods and Goddesses of inferior or secondary deities described in early Jain texts as Vyantara Devatā.

P. 336. The Jain canonical literature enumerates the Vyantara Devatā as : Prīṭas, Bhūtas, Yakṣas, Rakṣasas, Ānīnaras, Āṁpuruṣas, Mahoragas (Nāgas) and Gandharvas.

P. 338. Patanjali's evidence regarding the existence of Yakṣa images and shrines corroborated by early Jain texts. (COOMARASWAMY in this 'Yakṣas' Part I, Pp. 17 ff.).

P. 350. Plate XX, fig. 4 figure of Nāgīnī, she may illustrate the Jain version of the snake goddess, her Brahmanical counterpart being Manasā.

P. 357. The Jains seem to have held Gaṇapati in some respect.

P. 372. Reference to the Goddess Śrī-Lakṣmī in the auspicious dream of Trīśalā, the mother of Mahāvira (Barua and Sinha, Barhut inscriptions, p. 74).

P. 377. Like Śrī-Lakṣmī, Sarasvatī, the Goddess of learning and music, also was held in high veneration by the Jains who made her the head of the Śruta-devatās and the Vidyadevīs.

Pp. 378-79. One of the earliest figures of Sarasvatī with a manuscript as her emblem was unearthed from the Kankali Tīlā, Mathura; fully described; Kushān period,—of either 132 or 122 A.D.

P. 391. Avatāras : The Bhāgavatapurāṇa enumerates the Avatāras thrice : in the first recounting, the number is 22, in the second 23, and in the third 16, but none of them omits Ṛṣabha (Ādinātha or Ṛṣabhanātha, the first Tirthankara of the Jainas) and Buddha.

P. 425. The Viṣṇupurāṇa describes Māyāmoha as "naked with shaved head and a peacock tail in his hand" (digambaro muṇḍo barhīpatradharaḥ); the author made a wilful confusion between the Jina of the Digambara Jainas (Nagna-Kṣapanakas) and the Buddha of the Buddhists, both the order being described in the purāṇas as Nagnas (naked ones) on account of their having discarded the authority of the Vedas.

P. 433. Sūrya relief in the torus frieze of the small cave, Ananta gūphā (C. 1st century B.C.) among the Khaṇḍagiri group of Jaina cave shrines (Orissa)—These early reliefs of Sūrya hailing from different corners of India, prove that the iconography of this motif was to a great extent the same everywhere, and it was utilised by devotees irrespective of creeds.

P. 517. The later Jaina representations of Brahmā, either as a Yakṣa attendant of the Jina Śītalānātha or as one of the Dikpālas are endowed with a great deal of hieratism, even perhaps more pronounced than in their originals in the Brahmanical pantheon.

P. 520. Aṣṭadikpālas or Lokapālas, the guardians of the quarters or the worlds—Early Buddhist and Jaina texts differ from one another in their characterisation of this group of divinities.

Pp. 522 and n. 1. The Jaina literature refers to a group of Dikpālas, most of whose names and associations being similar to the stereotyped list of the later Hindu Mythological texts, (described B.C. BHATTACHARYA, 'Jaina Iconography', Pp. 147-57).

Pp. 561-63. In the hierarchy of the Jaina deities, many of the subsidiary members of the pantheon were direct copies of the Brahmanical Hindu divinities; classification of the secondary Jain deities under four heads;—the deities whose images (besides those of the Jainas) are usually found in Jaina iconographic art comprise the Navagrahas, the Dikpālas, the Yakṣas and Yakṣiṇī (Upāsakas and Śasana-devatās), the sixteen Śruta or (Vidyādevīs, the Aṣṭamātrikās, the Bhairavas, the sixty-four Yoginīs, Śrī or Lakṣmī, Gaṇeśa, Kṣetrapāla and others. The names and iconographic features of most of them are similar to those of their Brahmanical counter parts. The Brahmanical Hindu origin or many of the Upāsakas and Śāsanadevatās of the Jinās can be easily demonstrated—examples given.

P. 567. Installation of images—Bṛhatsamhitā (ch. 59). Images of the Jinās should be installed by a Digambara Jaina.

P. 588. Bṛhatsamhitā Adhyāya 57—

दिग्वासास्तरुणो रूपवाश्च काय्योर्हता देवः ॥ ४५ ॥

Trans : The god of the Arhata (the Jainas, i.e. any of the 24 Tirthankaras) should be shown nude, young and beautiful in appearance, with a tranquil expression and arms reaching down to the knees; his breast should have the (auspicious) Śrīvatsa mark.

Śālabhanjikā is a technical term applied to the graceful woman, tree motif in Indian art. The term Śālabhanjikā occurs in Prākṛit works like Rāyapaseṇaijja and Nāyadharmakāśa. A list of these passages from canonical Jain Śvetāmbara works, written in Ardhamagadhi Prākṛit is given. Archaeological findings of woman—tree carvings in a Jain stūpa in Kankālī Tīk at Mathura.

P 37. The purpose of this paper is to show that epigraphical passages, specially the invocatory verses, enlighten the student of iconography as much as the rest. These are characterised by a chara borm of natural and spontaneous description which is often very suggestive and unconsciously points out the most noteworthy features of iconographic representations just from the areas whence the inscriptions originate.

There are excellent descriptions of Jain images in the invocatory verses of inscriptions. Description of Vṛshabhadeva image (fig. 29) of 11th century A.D., from Central India given. It is described in a verse from an inscription from Śatruñjaya wherein the use of pun on words suggesting similiarity and difference with and from Śiva make it interesting, text, with translation given. Another such verse is from an inscription from the Vimala temple at Mount Ābū. Text and translation given.

Pp. 237 and 240. The Buddhist-Jaina group represented by Lalita-vistara and Uttarādhyāyasūtra, refers to the arts in connection with the training of their respective heroes, Budhisattva and Mahāvira. The objects of Jain architecture may be classified as of the north and of the south. The first peculiarity that strikes one as distinguishing architecture of the south from that of the north, is the division of the southern temples into two classes, Bastis and Bettas. The former are temples in the usual acceptance of the word, as understood in the north, and as there, always containing an image of one of the twenty-four Tirthankaras, which is the object there worshipped. The latter are unknown in the north, and are courtyards usually on a bill or rising ground, open to the sky and containing images, not of a Tirthankara, but of a Gomata, Gomateśvara so called. Though he is not known to the Jains in the north.

The main part of the Mancapuri cave, second—first century B.C., in Khandagiri—Udayagiri, Orissa was put up by Kudepasiri and the rest by Kumara Vadukha. Text of the inscription in this cave given. Probably Kudepasiri was Khāravēla's successor and Vadukha, the successor of Kudepasiri. Persepolitan and Scythian influences are noticeable in this cave. Important features described. The central scene of the Verandh (plate—I) depicts a throne with a royal group one among whom is seen with a Tiara resembling the Tiara on Mauryan heads. The scene has been described in details. Either the scene represented here is the Jina's Samavasarana, or if it portrays any special historical event, it perhaps represents the celebration and re-installation of the Kalinga—Jina, of which Khāravēla was the fortunate author. The technical term Mohanagraha does not occur in other Sanskrit Literature. Mohanagraha, according to the different references, means—a delusive-house with secret walls and passages, in the centre of which garbhagrahas, jālagrahas, vāśagrah as and kośagrahas may be constructed to improve security. It is a term of high antiquity closely linked with Garbhagraha, having become obsolete in later times, but preserved in Kautilya and Jain literature. The term Garbhagraha survives in Sanskrit treatise about architecture.

The paper discusses literary and archaeological evidence regarding the introduction of Śāsanadevatās in Jainism and shows that the first attendant Yakṣa pair was introduced in 6th century A.D., whereas the twenty-four different pairs for the twenty-four Tīrthankaras were introduced sometime after the eighth century A.D., possibly in the 9th, and became more popular after C. 1000 A.D., An interesting beautiful bronze of standing Rṣabhanātha, discovered from Akola, is perhaps the earliest known Jaina image which shows śāsanadevatās accompanying a Tīrthankara. Sculpture showing a lying female below the pedestal of a Jina figure; three such sculptures: (1) one of about the 9th cent. A.D. in the sanctum of the temple on the Vaibhara hill at Rajgir; (2) the second in the Nahar collection of about the 8th cent. A.D. and (3) the third fragmentary sculpture discovered at Rājghāt (Vārāṇasī) and now in the Asutosh Museum of the Calcutta University. The mother of a Tīrthankara, when depicted lying on a cot, has either a child by her side or the auspicious objects dreamt by her on the eve of the conception. The three sculptures are identified as that of Bahurūpīnī (the śāsanadevī of Muni-Suvrata, the 20th Tirthankara). This identification is supported by carved figures of 24 Tirthankaras with their respective śāsanadevīs in the Barabhuji cave of Khandagiri near Bhubaneswar (Orissa); one of which shows only Bahurūpīnī lying on a bed and others seated.

Existence in Uttar Pradesh, Bihar, Orissa and Bengal, of an iconographic canon requiring Bahurūpīnī to be shown in reclining pose. Plates III & IV showing Munisuvrata with Bahurūpīnī at—(1) Rajgir, (2) in Hahar's collection and (3) at Khandagiri.

C. SIVARAMAMURTI.—South Indian Bronzes. New Delhi, 1963.

P. 9. Mahendravarman I was originally a Jain who was converted to Śaivism by the saint Appar. With extraordinary zeal he studded his kingdom with rock-cut monuments. The name of Mahendravarman has come down in history not only as the pioneer of South India architecture and painting, but also as a poet, dramatist and musician.

P. 10. In the second half of the 7th century A.D. Arikesari Māravarman (A.D. 670-710), the Paṇḍyan king, who was a Jaina, was converted back to the fold of his forefathers by the boy saint Tirujñānasambandar who was requested by the king's prime minister Kulachchirai, at the instance of the queen Maṅgayarasi, to win back her husband to his original faith.

P. 12. The late Chālukya traditions were continued by the Hoysalas, amongst whom Viṣṇuvardhana (A.D. 1110-1152), the Jaina monarch who was converted by Rāmānuj to the Vaiṣṇava faith, is famous for his marvellous temples at Belur and Halebid.

P. 20. In the case of Jaina Tīrthankaras, it is the dhyānamudrā and the post of Kāyotsarga, wherein the two hands are straight, that usually occur.

P. 23. The Jaina Tīrthankaras are twenty-four in number, represented either seated in dhyāna or standing and distinguished one from another, only by their individual cognizances, the tree or dīkṣāvrikṣa and other emblems which are often not very clear in sculpture. The exception is Ādinātha, who in addition is distinguished by his jaṭāḥ. The bull is the cognizance of Ādinātha, who is known also as Rishabhadeva, the elephant for Ajitanātha, the horse for Sambhavanātha, the monkey for Abhinandana, the wheel or curlew for Sumatinātha, the lotus for Padmaprabha, the svastika for Supārśvanātha, the moon for Chandraprabha the makara for Suvidhinātha, the śrivrikṣa for Śītanātha, the rhinoceros for Sreyāṃsanātha, the buffalo for Vāsupūjya, the boar for Vimalanātha, the falcon for Anantanātha, the Vajra for Dharmanātha, the deer for Śāntinātha, the goat for Kunthunātha, the fish for Aranātha, the water-pot for Mallinātha, the tortoise for Munisuvrata, the lily for Naminātha, the conch for Neminātha, the snake for Pārśvanātha and lion for Mahāvīra. The snake's coils and the hoods over the head of the Tīrthankara are additional distinguishing marks in the case of Supārśvanātha and Pārśvanātha, the number of hoods differing in either case. The yakṣas and yakṣiṇīs associated with each Tīrthankara make up a regular host of deities associated with the Jaina faith and in addition there is the representation of Bāhubali, the saintly son of the first Tīrthankara, who is also called Gomateśvara.

Pp. 41—42. Śrīvatsa symbol: The śrīvatsa a very ancient symbol of the goddess of prosperity.

In Chālukya sculptures, the Gupta tradition of ignoring the symbol is followed and it is absent on Viṣṇu's chest. It is also absent on the chest of Jaina Tīrthankaras.
